Labor Department Seal Commemorates 50th Anniversary See Page 1

Report From the GENERAL PRESIDENT

YOU will recall that four Resolutions were submitted to the last Convention for the International Union to establish a Pension Plan. This is the fourth Convention where Resolutions of this type have been submitted. At the last Convention, however, a mandatory Resolution was passed instructing the Executive Council, with full power to act, to set up a Pension Plan because the information was not available to the Convention to determine the amount, or what would be required, to set up a Pension Plan. This research had to be done at International Headquarters, and it was done; and, believe me, caused and is still causing a lot of additional work.

The Resolutions proposed an increase of $1 in per capita tax. In the research made here at the office we found that $1 per month increase in per capita tax would only buy a pension of approximately $5 per month, after 25 years of good standing and after 65 years of age; this, to me, meant no pension at all, particularly, with the devaluation of the dollar as it is at the present time. While I was Acting Secretary of Labor we made a study of what would be required for a family to live comfortably in retirement. The study indicated that if a person had been thrifty enough to own his own home and had a little money saved, and was entitled to maximum Social Security this would only be two-thirds of the amount required. If he had a pension amounting to one-third of the other two factors he could live comfortably but this would not take care of medical expense, which is one of the reasons that President Kennedy and organized Labor are supporting the Medicare Bill with their greatest efforts.

In view of these, and other factors, I sent a wire to the Executive Council on January 24, 1962 proposing that I be authorized to send out a letter to all local unions requesting them to negotiate ten cents ($.10) per hour for journeymen and apprentices in their collective bargaining agreements to be paid into an International Pension Plan established by the International Union.

We now have 23 local unions and almost 1,000 members who will start participating in the Plan as of January 1, 1963. We have two Employer Representatives, Mr. Hoyle B. Gilbert and Mr. T. J. McGlone, Secretary Mills and myself as Trustees of the Plan since joint Trusteeship is required by law.

On January 11, 1963 our General Counsel, Louis H. Wilderman, was in my office at which time we agreed upon the provisions of an Escrow Agreement, which we have to have to receive the money that must be placed in a bank in escrow until we have the regular Pension Plan worked out. The Escrow Agreement must be drawn up in order to deposit the money to be held in escrow in the bank. We have one year to draw up the Plan itself to be approved by Internal Revenue, in order to avoid any legal problems.

I have called an Executive Council meeting, in conjunction with the Executive Council meeting of the Building and Construction Trades Department, as required by the Constitution, in Miami, Florida, for the week of February 18, 1963. All of these matters pertaining to the Pension Plan passed by the last Convention must be approved by the Executive Council. We are taking bids from insurance companies which should be available for review by the Board so they may determine whether it is best to have an insurance company handle this Plan or whether the International Union should self-insure the Plan itself, as we did the Funeral Benefit Plan.

Many telephone calls and letters have come in requesting information on the Plan which, of course, could not be answered until we have the Plan approved by the Executive Council and Internal Revenue. There has been an unlimited amount of work put into this project and there will be a great deal more work before we can give you the definite details of the Plan.

I am sincerely grateful to the local unions and members in putting forth the effort, which I know they had to put forth, in order to negotiate this provision in their agreements without the proper information. My reason for trying to hurry this project is because I know, from our questionnaire which was sent out November 8, 1962, that a number of local unions wish to have this information in preparation for their negotiations with their Employers. Many of these negotiations are coming up this Spring and with the success we have had without any concrete information to send to the local unions I am sure that we will have much greater success in the coming year in our negotiations after a definite plan has been set up and is available.

Since some agreements are not subject to negotiations for a year or two, it appears to me this is remarkable progress for the first year and will grow by leaps and bounds until most of our smaller local unions are covered under the Plan, which we have all wanted for a good many years. I am very much encouraged to be in a position to negotiate with the insurance companies with 1,000 members to start with. It probably will be five years before we get all the members included under the Plan through negotiations with their Employers and when this is accomplished it should give us an opportunity to increase the benefits for the money paid as has been done in the larger local unions who have had a Plan for some time.

May I thank you again for your cooperation in this project and ask your continued cooperation since the more members we have the better we can make the Plan, and the more we can buy for the money we have.

Faternally yours,

Parliamentary Rules Must Be Used By Any Group to Avoid Dissension

SO THAT members of an organization will not mill around in utter confusion when a meeting is held, certain rules of procedure have been evolved over the years. One of the most-respected set of rules, observed almost unanimously in this country, is Roberts Rules of Order.

A perfect parliamentary body would be a democracy in miniature with every member "a respected participant." Each member's rights to be useful are unlimited, but his opportunities for being a nuisance are curbed.

Officers receive special powers from the members when they are elected but the members still retain the right to control the decisions of the organization, whether they make them directly or through actions of the elected officers. Thus each member gives of his ability and shares in the strength of the whole group.

Rules designed to bring on order are, themselves, not fool-proof and can sometimes be used to prevent the very purpose they are designed to accomplish. Some "firehouse lawyers" deliberately search for a rule which will help them get through, on a technicality, some action clearly not desired by the group as a whole.

Thomas Jefferson, third president of the U. S. and the principle architect of our Constitution, wrote the first manual of parliamentary procedure in America. When he was Vice President in 1789, it was his duty to preside over the Senate. Since there was no manual available, the resourceful Jefferson wrote one based largely on British parliamentary procedures. To this day his manual is printed in handbooks for Senators and Congressmen, just as he wrote it in 1789 and our rules are derived directly from his manual.

The rules of Congress were adapted for deliberative assemblies by Henry M. Robert, who got the inspiration while a cadet at the U. S. Military Academy at West Point, N. Y. Robert, who went on to become a General in the army, had difficulty in presiding at meetings and resolved to formulate a set of rules to bring more order to such meetings. He printed 4,000 copies of his first book in 1876 and it has subsequently been revised several times with millions of copies in circulation.

Most labor organizations have devised their own set of rules of order and, usually, the last rule states: "In situations not covered by the above rules, Robert's Rules of Order shall apply" or words to that effect.

Jefferson stated in his first manual for Congress that it is not so important what the rule is but it is extremely important that there be a rule to guide and prevent confusion, bullying and bickering. It is also important for those in attendance to know the rule so procedures will not have to be argued and the group can get on about their business without loss of valuable time.

The economic importance of this can be considered when large organizations have conventions where delegates are in attendance from all over the nation. When the total cost of the convention is considered, the cost-per-hour of holding the convention may be astronomical. Every hour which can be saved constitutes an economic saving in dollars and cents. A full day lopped from a large organization's convention schedule may, in instances, save as much as a half a million dollars! Therefore, saving time by following orderly procedures not only makes a meeting more interesting but may also result in economic benefits.

No one can sit down and memorize Robert's Rules of Order or any other manual of procedure. Furthermore, no one knows all there is to know about the intricacies of parliamentary procedure. The varieties of combinations of actions are almost limitless and even the most talented parliamentarian must depend, from time to time, on his good judgment and the good sense of the members.

Here are, in question-and-answer form, some basic fundamentals regarding parliamentary procedures. Seen in black-and-white they may not be too impressive. Go to your local union meetings regularly, observe them in action, and such procedures will "come alive" for you!

MOTIONS

Q. What is a Motion?

A. You make a motion when you have a suggestion for something your union should do.

Q. How do you get your Chairman to call on you?

A. You get up from your chair and raise your hand and say, "Mr. Chairman . . ."

Q. Are you allowed to talk before the Chairman recognizes you?

A. NO. You must wait until he calls you by name or nods to you. This means that you now have the floor.

Q. How do you word a Motion?

A. You say: "MR. CHAIRMAN, I MOVE THAT THE LOCAL CONTRIBUTES $100 TO THE RED CROSS."

Q. Are you allowed to say a few words about the motion that you are making?

A. Yes. But first say: "I should like to have permission to say a few words before making a motion . . ." Say what you want to say briefly, then finish up by making the motion.

Q. What is your Chairman going to do after a motion is made?

A. He does four things:

1. He repeats the Motion.
2. He calls for a second to the Motion.
3. He calls for discussion of the Motion.
4. He takes a vote on the Motion.

AMENDMENTS

Q. What is an Amendment to a Motion?

A. An amendment to a motion is a proposal to add something or take something from the motion that has been made.

Q. How do you make an Amendment to a Motion?

A. You say: "I WISH TO AMEND THE MOTION TO READ . . ."

"I WISH TO AMEND THE MOTION BY INCLUDING . . ."

"I WISH TO AMEND THE MOTION BY REMOVING . . ."

Q. How do you vote on an Amendment to a Motion?

A. Your Chairman will ask you to vote first on the amendment and then on the motion.

Q. What happens if the majority vote in favor of the Amendment?

A. The Chairman will then ask you to vote on the motion as amended.

Q. What happens if the Amendment to the Motion is voted down?

A. Your Chairman will then ask the body to either continue discussion or take a vote on the original motion.

STOPPING DISCUSSION ON MOTIONS

Q. What is the best way to stop debate on a Motion and get down to taking a vote?

A. The best way to stop discussion on a motion that has been made is to say: "I MOVE THE PREVIOUS QUESTION."

Q. Is there any particular time to say this?

A. No. This is one of those "privileged motions" that can be made while the motion is being discussed. You can't make it, however

1. While someone is actually talking.

2. While you are talking on the motion.

3. If you have already talked on the motion and others still want to speak.

Q. Is it necessary to take a vote on moving the Previous Question?

A. Yes. It is necessary for the majority to agree to stop debate and take a vote on the motion. The Chairman will first say, "if there is no further discussion, we will take a vote on moving the previous question . . ."

Q. Sometimes you go into a union meeting where you hear someone calling out "Question! Question!" What does this mean?

A. It means that when the discussion of a motion drags on too long a member who wants the vote taken immediately can call "question" without getting up from his seat.

Q. Can you call "Question" at any time?

A. You don't have to be called on by the Chairman. You can call out at any time if no member is speaking.

Q. What is the difference between calling "Question" and Moving the Previous Question?

A. Calling "question" just tells the Chairman that you think business should be speeded up. Moving the Previous Question means that the Chairman must take a regular vote.

Q. If there is a touchy question on the floor, how can it be set aside?

A. Any member can rise and say: "Mr. Chairman, I MOVE WE TABLE THE MOTION." If this motion is passed by a simple majority, the original motion is set aside.

Seeing involves such an automatic process that we seldom are conscious of the effort and energy it requires.

For example, having read this far in the magazine your eyes may have begun to tire. If so, try this simple therapy: look up from the page and glance about the room. Focus your vision on some distant point; then return to the page and resume reading.

Our eyes sometimes tire while reading for a sustained period of time. Often this is because our involvement with the reading matter causes us to be stingy in regard to restful "eye-breaks." An occasional looking away from our work or reading can provide our eyes with enough relaxation and rest to ward off eyestrain.

The movements of each eye are controlled by six delicate muscles. These same tiny eye muscles maintain the synchronization of one eye with the other. A weakness in any of the 12 muscles can bring about an imbalance to eye synchronization causing a distorted image to be produced. In an effort to overcome this imbalance, people sometimes attempt, by squinting, to force the image into focus. Their efforts frequently result in eyestrain.

Muscle imbalance may be corrected by glasses properly prescribed and fitted. More severe cases of muscle imbalance may be alleviated through surgery.

Most problems of eyestrain result from reading or close work. Very little eyestrain occurs in distant vision. Eyestrain may also result from other causes.

If seeing becomes more difficult and vision becomes blurred you may need glasses. Eyes can become strained when conditions of nearsightedness, farsightedness, astigmatism, or other refractive errors are not corrected. One cause of eyestrain that may not come as good news to the commuter is reading while traveling in a moving car or train. The motion of the vehicle produces a constant variation of the distance from eye to book, plus a varying intensity of light, adding an enormous burden to normal eye functioning.

Another cause of eyestrain is glare. Any source of light that causes discomfort or interferes with vision should be avoided. Sunlight reflecting from glossy paper can prove irritating to the eye.

Can eyestrain permanently injure the eyes? Although many people feel that it can, oculists generally share the opinion that eyestrain will not produce any organic change in the eye. Continued aggravation of a strained condition can cause such severe symptoms, headache and nausea that the person would be forced to rest his eyes.

But the possibility that eyestrain can permanently damage the eyes is doubtful.

The Use of Sunglasses

In the summer we don our sunglasses to protect us from the direct rays of the sun and from glare reflected from sand and water. The use of tinted glasses helps relieve the Rest and diet and proper lighting can help us protect our vision.

wearer from annoying squinting or other eye discomfort.

Although sunglasses afford glare protection we should avoid looking directly into the sun. The rays of the sun are so strong that none of the variety of commercially marketed sunglasses adequately can protect the eyes from possible damage.

Sometimes we overdo our use of sunglasses. Some persons wear sunglasses while driving at night to cut down glare from approaching headlights. Sunglasses or other tinted glasses should not be used for night driving since they reduce the total light transmitted to the eye, thus making it more difficult to see. Colored or tinted automobile windshields may present the same hazard.

Is Television Harmful?

Television viewers may ask, "Will watching television harm my eyes?" It does not seem likely that television itself will cause eye harm. It can bring on symptoms of eyestrain if we watch the screen too long, too often or sit too close. These symptoms are more apt to occur if the viewer is in need of glasses, has a muscle imbalance, or some other potential cause of eyestrain.

The person having normal vision or corrected defects will not develop eyestrain from television if his viewing is not excessive and is tempered by common sense.

How can we assure the health of our eyes? There are several basic rules to promote eye hygiene.

Cleanliness is basic to good eye care. Infections are readily transmitted from one person to another by dirty hands, towels, or clothing. Any dirt or foreign body lodged in the eye should be removed by a physician.

Sleep, rest, and proper diet are necessary for healthy vision. When the body tires, so do the eyes.

Adequate lighting is required while reading. Proper illumination will help prevent eyestrain and nervous exhaustion. The U.S. Public Health Service suggests using a reading light of 100 watts, placed three feet in back and to one side of the reader.

Good Reading Habits

To derive the greatest benefit from the illumination and assure restful reading, attention should be given to a good reading position. The reading matter should be held 14 inches from the eyes at an angle of from 45 to 70 degrees from the horizontal. A book should be at a sufficient height to keep all sections of the page equidistant from the eyes.

If your work requires you to handle chemicals or combustible materials you can minimize the danger of accident by wearing goggles or safety glasses.

Early in their development, children should be taught good eye care and reading habits. Young children and adolescents often enjoy reading while sprawled upon the living room floor. This practice should be discouraged by parents because it frequently brings the printed matter too close to the child's eyes.

Particular eye care is needed as children progress in school and study requirements increase.

Well Worth the Trouble

To those who have adequate vision, proper eye hygiene can go far to prevent eye problems which handicap work, cause accidents, or even lead to blindness. Sufficient rest and diet, proper lighting, and occasional "eye-breaks" can help keep eyes healthy. But proper eye care alone is not enough. Periodic eye examinations can assure prolonged eye health by detecting early symptoms of strain, reduction of visual acuity, or the beginnings of some eye disease.

The time and effort necessary to care for our eyes is a small expenditure to protect one of the most precious of all human possessions.

Report of the GENERAL SECRETARY-TREASURER

Tax Reform

WHEN CONGRESS takes up tax reform proposals this year, pressures subtle and open will be exerted to concentrate income tax cuts in the upper brackets. There will be more talk about the "oppressive" tax load borne by the men who make the economy run. Someone will say, and newspapers will reprint, the charge that income tax rates running to 99 per cent throttle individual initiative and frustrate the hopes of every man for realizing the American dream of making a killing, cleaning up, socking away a cool million.

All of faint heart, take hope. The statistics are on the side of the millionaires. Heed this:

Nine years ago, there were 27,000 millionaires. By 1961, the number had increased to 100,000. During the same period, the number of the "very rich," those with more than $5 million, had increased from 2,000 to 10,000.

High society may be dead, but high living has not gone out. If the statistics are an accurate guide to the millionaire's way of life, we may conclude that there are more gentry riding to the hounds today than there were in the days of the robber barons.

At the same time that Americans in the high-income bracket increased in number and took a bigger share of the kitty, Americans at the opposite end of the scale had to divide a smaller share. The high 20 per cent of the nation's families received 43.2 per cent of the total after-tax family income in 1955, while the lowest fifth had only 5.2 per cent. Five years later, the top fifth split 43.8 per cent of the total income, while the bottom fifth had only 4.9 per cent.

True, average incomes have risen for Americans in almost all groups since the end of World War II. But the rise has been markedly uneven. In the years between 1955 and 1960, the family income of the bottom 20 per cent had gone up $205, while that of the top 20 per cent had risen $2,485.

Two out of five Americans today live in families with incomes still too low to buy the food, clothing, and shelter they need.

The next time that you hear someone commiserating for the rich and their 90 per cent tax, remember the loopholes—the trust arrangements, incorporating gimmicks, and tax-free municipal bonds. And dwell for a moment on this statistic: In 1961, the richest 1 per cent in the country owned 28 per cent of the nation's personal wealth.

Existing tax laws have widened the gap between the share of income and wealth held by those at the top and the large group at the bottom. When Congress gets around to the tax reform bill, the emphasis should be put on reversing this trend.

Beware of New Laws Against Labor

THE AMERICAN labor movement is now appraising the work of the last Congress and previewing some of the complexing problems facing the newly elected 88th Congress.

As we look ahead there is one area in which we should look with special care—the area of labor legislation and regulation. In this connection it might be well to look into the activities of the National Association of Manufacturers. This organization which is always on the alert to support legislation which curbs the union is embarked on its own "Program to Curb Union Monopoly Power."

The NAM in its own internal memorandum setting forth its goals and its proposed methods outlines one described as "a concerted effort . . . to win the clergy" and its ultimate aim is a "bill of our own (the NAM) design" for increased union restraints.

Words from the NAM 64-page pamphlet on "Economic Implications of Union Power" indicates some of the approaches on the matter of union restraint; let's look at some:

"... the very phrase (union security) is an indication that the union, not the worker, is the beneficiary of compulsory unionism . . ."

"... union demands have contributed to the present levels of unemployment in many areas and industries."

"... time and money are spent not primarily to adjudicate employees' grievances but to establish the importance of the union . . ."

It might be well worthwhile if our local unions are interested in getting a slant on the NAM that they write the NAM Research Department, 2 East 48th Street, New York 17, New York, for a copy. The entire labor movement as well as our own International Union should know what the NAM thinks so that we, as labor, can be better prepared to counter its efforts in this Congress or in the months ahead in the forum of public opinion.

Building Trades Department Schedules 1964 Conference

To answer several protests regarding the decision of the Building and Construction Trades Department not to hold a national Legislative Conference in 1963, Department Secretary-Treasurer Frank Bonadio recently addressed a letter to all State and Local Councils setting forth the reasons for the decision and announcing that a Legislative Conference definitely would be held in 1964.

Secretary-Treasurer Bonadio stated that the "postponement of the 1963 Legislative Conference would work to the best interests of all of our affiliates," for the following reasons:

"1. We have not been able as of this writing to reach a satisfactory understanding with the Industrial Unions affiliated with the AFL-CIO on language to be used in our Situs-Picketing Bill. Unless we can get some unanimity of thinking on this particular piece of important legislation, the chances of having it passed by the Congress are negligible.

"2. The only hotel facilities that have been available to us in the past have been the Sheraton-Park Hotel. The only dates that they could give us this year were early in March. This date is unsatisfactory for the reasons that our legislative program will be just getting off the ground and the machinery of the Congress not yet in running order. Consequently, the excellent efforts on the part of our delegates this early in the year are not nearly as effective as they would be at a later date. The Hilton Hotel expects completion of their facilities early in 1964, and the Sheraton-Park has also indicated that they would try and give us a later date in 1964, which, you will agree, would be more desirable.

"3. Finally, the officers and General Presidents of our Department recognize that sending delegates to our Legislative Conference costs a great deal of money, which is paid by the local unions or the local Building and Construction Trades Councils. We feel that it would be unfair to you to have you attend a Legislative Conference in 1963, which incidentally is an off-year election-wise, knowing that the chances of success of our legislative program are not too favorable.

"We are very definitely arranging to hold a Legislative Conference in 1964. Everything possible will be done to make our 1964 Legislative Conference the largest attended in our history.

"As you know, 1964 will be a Presidential election year, and it is our sincere hope that you will give us the same cooperation and enthusiasm in our 1964 Legislative Conference that you have given us in the past. At that time we sincerely believe our legislative program will have a good chance of being realized."

U.S. Living Standards Up Sharply

Studies by the Labor Dept. of living standards in major U.S. cities have shown a rise of 15 to 44 percent in real income over a 10-year period—the amount of income remaining after taxes and after adjustment for price rises between 1950 and 1960.

Labor Sec. W. Willard Wirtz said the studies by the Bureau of Labor Statistics show an increase in purchasing power for residents of the seven cities sampled—New York, Chicago, San Francisco, Washington, Boston, Detroit and Atlanta.

The analysis showed not only rising living standards but a drop in the percentage of consumer spending for food, shelter and clothing and an increase—by a full third—in family home ownership.

These and other facts uncovered in the survey, Wirtz said, point to a "continuing and substantial increase" in national living standards but, he added, "they should also serve us as a pointed reminder of an unacceptable contrast" in that "areas of severe want" still exist in "our most abundant society."

Another conclusion was drawn from the data by the AFL-CIO Dept. of Research—that most American families spend almost all they earn on living expenses. The department cited these findings:

- Families with earnings of $6,000 a year, or less, generally spent more than they earned in 1960-61, the period under study.
- Families earning from $6,000 to $15,000 a year, after taxes, had modest savings.
- Those with incomes above $15,000 saved substantial sums.

The reports show, according to Wirtz that average income after taxes ranged from $5,412 in Atlanta to $6,869 in Boston, and that the families surveyed—100 to 200 in each city—spent around 86 to 95 percent of their income for current expenses.

..... CANADIAN NEWSLETTER

Canadian Labor Group Refutes Doctors' Proposal—The Canadian Labour Congress has charged that it will be well into the next century before private carriers could begin to furnish complete medical protection for Canadians on a voluntary basis. Their statement emphasized that the Canadian Medical Association estimated that 4.5 million Canadians currently would not be able to pay the full premium for private coverage and would have to take a means test to participate in a prepaid medical plan.

In a brief to the Royal Commission on Health Services, the CLC also disputed the Canadian Medical Association's claim that a variety of insurance carriers in competition with each other led to improved service to the public.

Dealing with the general need for medical insurance for Canadians, the CLC commented:

"It is too much to expect that a complete range of services can be made available on a universal basis to the Canadian people within the near future through the mere extension of private prepayment schemes. It is not physically, financially, or administratively possible.

"The arguments advanced by the Canadian Medical Association in favor of prepayment plans under private auspices have been based on more than the conviction that these plans were sufficient to take care of the medical needs of the Canadian people. It seems quite clear that support for these plans reflects a determination on the part of the organized medical profession not only to control the practice of medicine itself in a professional sense, but also the methods whereby the provision of medical services may be financed.

"... Under such an arrangement it is almost inevitable that the public interest would be secondary. If neither Parliament nor the Legislatures are to intervene, and if the consumer interest is not to be represented otherwise as well, there is very little room for assurance that a medical monopoly will display any greater degree of social responsibility than any other uncontrolled monopoly has shown in the past."

More on Labor-Management Cooperation—Toronto (CPA)—Two management spokesmen have joined officials of the trade union movement in criticizing Canadian business for failure to respond to overtures from labor leaders for a cooperative approach to the country's economic problems.

H. George DeYoung, chairman of the National Productivity Council and president of Atlas Steel Ltd. in Welland, and R. V. Hohe, president of B. F. Goodrich Canada Ltd., said organized labor was challenging management to forget the past and abandon stubbornly held concepts.

Their remarks were prompted by growing suggestions from labor ranks for genuine forms of labor-management-government consultation, attempts at national and industry-wide bargaining and other types of cooperation outside the field of collective bargaining in the manner demonstrated in such Western European countries as Sweden.

Unemployment Grips Canadian Economy—Unemployment began to grip the Canadian economy more tightly between October and November, indicating that the Canadian Labour Congress apprehension of possible record peaks may come true. Jobless rose by 59,000 to 342,000 or 5.2 percent of the labor force. The November job force was estimated at 6,720,000 or about the same as in October.

Disclosures Law Effective January 1—The government's disclosures law has taken effect as of January 1, requiring information from corporations and trade unions on financial structure and internal control.

Annual returns must be filed with the Dominion statistician on a wide range of questions to establish extent and nature of operations in Canada including any degree of foreign control.

Primarily, the act is designed to give more insight into foreign control of big corporations. Mossbacks in the Tory party had no trouble in extending the sections to cover trade unions, which regard the act as a nuisance but hardly a threat. Reaction of major corporations has been veiled but unhappy. More than 40,000 companies are involved and about 560 unions.

Trouble Ahead, CLC Warns Government—Ottawa (CPA)—The Canadian Labour Congress has renewed its warning to the federal government that present economic policies are leading Canada into serious troubles.

The 1,050,000-member Congress, spokesman for Canada's trade union movement at the federal level, fired sharp criticism at the Diefenbaker administration for economic policies that restrict growth and aggravate unemployment.

The views of the CLC were given in a 7,500-word memorandum delivered to the Prime Minister and his cabinet on parliament hill—an annual tradition that places labor's feelings before the men who head the government.

When Disaster Threatens

While man is still somewhat at the mercy of weather whims, he is not quite as helpless as he might imagine when a tornado, hurricane, flood, or other disaster threatens.

The Red Cross, the nation's official voluntary disaster agency, points out below what you can do to protect yourself in case of a disaster emergency and gives tips so that you may be better prepared should such an emergency arise.

When Disaster Threatens

If serious disaster threatens, keep your radio or TV tuned to official advisories. Keep your gas tank full. When an evacuation order is given, heed it. Such recommendations are not made lightly.

When You Must Leave Immediately

Follow the evacuation directions given on the radio and by highway officials.

If you are driving in a flooded area and your car is stalled by rising waters, you and all occupants should leave the car immediately and wade back to high ground. Don't leave anyone in the car.

If you and your family must wade or swim to safety in swift water, tie yourselves together with a rope at intervals of several feet. When you get into the water, look for planks, boxes, or any floating objects that will help to support weight.

When You Have Warning Before Evacuating

When you are leaving home because of a slow-rising flood or a hurricane that is still a good distance away, you can take the following steps to minimize damage to your home as well as to make shelter living more comfortable during the emergency period —

1. If your home is threatened by water, move all household goods to high ground or to upper floors.

2. In flood threat, remove electric motors of all appliances that cannot be moved. When time permits, remove oil and gas burners from stoves, furnaces, and stokers. Plug up all electric outlets so that silt cannot enter. Turn off the burner under the water heater.

3. When household goods are to be moved out of the house, pack them well and write your name and address in crayon on cartons and on the backs of articles of furniture.

4. Store garden furniture, tools, awnings, and other outdoor items in a safe place. Board up windows or put shutters in place.

5. When you leave your house, pull the main electric switch.

6. Remember to take these articles with you -- prescription drugs taken regularly, eyeglasses, hearing aid, false teeth, change of clothing, basic food supplies, and baby's formula and special diet requirements of other family members. Be sure your car has a full tank of gas. Head for the nearest Red Cross shelter or for a safe haven with friends or relatives.

When Home Is Your Haven

In some disasters, such as tornado, it is safer to remain at home. When evacuation is not advised, here is what to do to be prepared in your own home --

1. Even after the emergency has passed, stay indoors.

2. Report any downed wires or broken water mains you can observe from your home. Otherwise, don't tie up telephone service.

3. Listen to radio-TV reports to find out if water should be boiled.

5. If you have suffered loss, register with Red Cross disaster headquarters. An appointment will help you in totaling your resources (insurance, savings, government loans, etc.) and determining if you need Red Cross aid to resume normal living.

Agenda for the 88th Congress

THE record of the 87th Congress shows considerable success—but there is still plenty of unfinished business left for the 88th Congress. Though there were major achievements in the 87th Congress in 1961 and 1962, we have seen also a record of delay and deadlock on too many key issues which vitally affect the prosperity and well-being of all Americans.

In 1963 and 1964 the 88th Congress must write a new record, a record of progress, a record of constructive legislation to “promote the general welfare and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity.”

Organized labor will strive for good legislation. If union members express their desire for constructive legislation to the Senators and Congressmen who represent them, the 88th Congress may well create a better record than its predecessor.

PRIORITY ISSUES

Here are some top priority issues for the 88th Congress to tackle:

Rules Reform—Congressional rules of procedure too often permit a conservative minority to block action on liberal legislation. The Senate and the House must overhaul and reform congressional procedures and thus make Congress more effective.

In the early days of the Eighty-Eighth Congress, the House voted 235-196, a surprisingly wide margin of 39 votes, to renew the three-member increase in Smith's House Rules Committee—an increase that was needed in 1961 to give the Administration leaders a semblance of control over what measures are moved to the House floor for action. Two years ago, the motion to increase the committee carried by only five votes, with 22 Republicans supporting the proposal. In this session 28 Republicans and all but 48 Democrats voted for the enlarged committee.

However, the profile of Congress, all things considered, appears similar to that of the old Congress.

The prospect is that with few exceptions the same committee chairmen who exercised influence on events in 1961-62 will be in control of affairs for the next two years. The majority of these committee chairmen are southern Democrats, particularly on the key committees governing taxes, social reform, education, urban affairs, the movement of labor and public welfare proposals to the House floor. Much of the official leadership is a generation older than the 45-year-old President Kennedy and, in the society of the privileged elders, the emphasis is not likely to be on “getting America moving again” but holding back change.

Health Benefits for the Aged—This is still high on the AFL-CIO legislative agenda. Low income, high-health-risk elderly people need prepaid, Social Security-financed health insurance.

Full Employment—With continuing high unemployment, with millions of men and women still looking for jobs as automation displaces more workers, Congress must enact job-creating, full employment measures, including 35-hour work-week requirements, expansion of manpower training, construction of more housing, essential public works, and mass transit projects, youth employment opportunities, and tax cuts to increase private spending.

Unemployment Benefits—Uniform federal standards are needed to upgrade inadequate, discriminatory state laws, to raise benefits, and to add 13 weeks of benefits for workers exhausting basic benefits.

Tax Reform—Basic tax reform must include tax cuts for low and middle income families, legislation to plug up such tax loopholes as excessive oil depletion and “business expense” allowances, and must include withholding on dividend and interest income.

Aid to Education—Federal aid to education at all levels, including aid for medical schools, is long overdue. The 88th Congress must find a solution to this problem which deadlocked the 87th Congress.

Civil Rights—Human freedom and human dignity are at stake in the fight for civil rights and civil liberties. Congress must protect and strengthen these rights, particularly the right to vote. Congress must also protect the rights of workers in defense industries.

Labor Laws—The Taft-Hartley and Landrum-Griffin laws help prevent millions of workers from getting benefits of union organization and collective bargaining. Congress should amend these laws to stop unfair discrimination against legitimate labor union practices.

First Contribution Received for General Pension Fund

The first contribution to the Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers' International Union General Pension Fund was received from Neil R. Nielsen on behalf of William Kumpan, a member of Local 57, Binghamton, New York, for 56 hours of work between the second and tenth of January 1963. We hope that this contribution is one that starts our General Pension Fund off to something, which will be of great benefit to many of our members in the future.

MY RELIGION

*When talk turns to religion,
I have notions of my own,
Have my version of the Bible,
And things I think alone.*

*And I find them satisfying,
Find them comforting to me,
Though I wouldn't lose my temper
If you choose to disagree.*

*For religion as I see it,
Is a pathway to the goal.
And it's something to be settled
Between each man and his soul.*

*Now I'm not a Roman Catholic,
But I wouldn't go so far
As to fling away the friendship
Of the ones I know that are.*

*I've lived and neighbored with them,
Come to love them through and through.
I've respect and admiration
For the kindly things they do.*

*I've known Methodists, Baptists, Lutherans, Scientists and Jews,
Whose friendship is a treasure
That I wouldn't want to lose.*

*So when the bigots talk religion
I just settle back and see
Every helpful, loyal friend

General Board Meeting Washington, D.C.

At right, General President Mashburn stops to chat with John Elliott, President of the Amalgamated Association of Motor Coach Employees, at the recent General Board Meeting of the AFL-CIO held in Washington, D. C. Below, Mr. Mashburn and Edward Leonard, General President of the Operative Plasterers' Int'l Assn., talk over a point of interest at the meeting. Organizing was the major topic discussed at the board meeting, with specific attention on the Los Angeles pilot organizing drive scheduled to start this year. AFL-CIO Pres. George Meany told the board that organizing is a necessity not only in terms of the trade union movement but in terms of the national interest—that unionized workers would stimulate the national economy through increased purchasing power. PAPER-Filled Panels Win Growing Role as a Building Material—so says Staff Reporter Ray J. Schrick in The Wall Street Journal for Thursday, January 3, 1963.

Los Angeles Builder is putting up 20 homes with paper-core walls.

Developers claim the panels, covered with plastic, plywood or aluminum, can withstand hurricanes and the trampling of elephants.

Who Are the Producers???

Weyerhaeuser Co., a major paper producer, recently began manufacturing honeycomb for sale to fabricators who make panels for on-the-site assembly into roofs and walls.

Douglas Aircraft Co., which makes honeycomb for its airplanes, in 1962, established a building department in its AIRCOMB Division to market honeycomb and panels to home builders.

Sales of honeycomb, a few years ago practically nil, will be about $5 million for the year 1962.

A Miami fabricating firm estimated its use for 1962 of more than 250,000 pounds, up 25% from 1961.

Same Miami firm states—"we are rivaling conventional materials in price in many instances."

While the story reproduced here describes a two-and-a-half-inch thick, four-by-eight-foot panel, it would take very little modification by the Producers to manufacture panels ranging from 1/2" to 1" for use as interior walls.

This is another competitor to our market.

Paper-Filled Panels Win Growing Role as A Building Material

* * *

They're Expensive but Light, Strong; New York Schools, Florida Church Use Them

By RAY J. SCHRICK

Staff Reporter of THE WALL STREET JOURNAL

Schools, homes and churches made with paper?

It sounds like a paper producer's pipe dream. Yet that dream is turning into reality in several cities around the country where builders are using panels with built-in paper cores.

In Los Angeles a builder is putting up 20 homes with paper-core walls. In New York City paper-core walls are being used to construct movable school buildings that will hold 50 classrooms. And in Eau Gallie, Fla., near Cape Canaveral, services are being conducted in a new church with paper-core walls and a paper-core roof.

These cases point up the increasing use of "paper honeycomb"—kraft paper, often stiffened with resin, and formed into six-sided cells that resemble those in a beehive. The columns of cells support each other, greatly strengthening the panels in which they are used. Developers claim the panels, covered with plastic, plywood or aluminum, can withstand hurricanes and the trampling of elephants.

Movable Buildings

Until recently paper honeycomb was used mainly in airplane bodies. Now some builders are finding the light material fits in with current trends to movable buildings and to the use of factory-built, interchangeable building sections. Sales of honeycomb, minuscule a few years ago, will be about $5 million this year, industry sources say.

Weyerhaeuser Co., a major paper producer, recently began manufacturing honeycomb for sale to fabricators who make panels for on-the-site assembly into roofs and walls. Douglas Aircraft Co., which makes honeycomb for its airplanes, this year established a building department in its Aircomb division to market honeycomb and panels to home builders.

"Paper honeycomb will become as popular as plywood," predicts Remy Hudson, vice president of Douglas's Aircomb division. To demonstrate honeycomb's strength, Douglas last year marched a 3,000-pound elephant over a two-and-a-half-inch-thick aluminum-faced honeycomb panel supported at its two ends, with its center off the ground. The four-by-eight-foot panel didn't break or crumple.

In 1960 Hurricane Donna leveled concrete-block buildings in the Florida Keys, but failed to damage schools built with aluminum-faced, paper-core panels, says A. T. Tyree, president of Panelfab Products, Inc., a Miami fabricating firm. He estimates Panelfab will use more than 250,000 pounds of honeycomb this year, up 25% from 1961.

"Paper honeycomb is coming into its own," says Mr. Tyree. "We are now rivaling conventional materials in price in many instances."

Lightness Pays Off

Honeycomb's lightness sometimes makes it more economical than other materials. Edward Dean Wyke, Jr. of Bradenton, Fla., who designed the $32,000 paper and aluminum church in Eau Gallie, figures it cost 20% more than a comparable wood or concrete building. But he estimates the church weighs half as much as a wood building and one-third as much as a concrete one and thus will cost less to move.

The church was built last spring by the Board of Home Missions of the Presbyterian Church of the U.S. to lend to the fledgling congregation in Eau Gallie. When the congregation completes its own permanent church, the paper-paneled structure will be lent to another new congregation. Metal rivets holding the church together can be removed readily and the building transported in sections. Similar churches have been ordered by groups in other Florida communities.

New York school officials figure the paper-aluminum classroom buildings they are constructing next to existing schools "have an expectancy of only two to three years in one location" because of shifting school populations. "It will be cheaper to move them because of their lighter weight," says a spokesman for the city's board of education.

It takes time for carpenters to master the techniques of assembling honeycomb panels, according to George Chacksfield, president of Chacksfield Construction Co., Gardena, Calif., builder of the 20 paper-core homes in Los Angeles. Mr. Chacksfield says he ran into some delays while his crews got used to working with the new material.

But most of the problems were quickly solved and Mr. Chacksfield expects to finish the $21,000 homes 30 to 60 days sooner than if he had used conventional construction methods. "With experience you should save even more time," the builder says.

A savings plan that pays you two ways

"Some folks still sew their money into the mattress"—just to lie there peacefully sleeping. But today you can really put your money to work.

For example, United States Savings Bonds constitute a savings plan that wakes your money up and gets it working for you in two different ways.

First of all, your money earns a good, guaranteed interest. Safe, certain interest, backed by Uncle Sam himself.

Secondly, your money helps guarantee a safe, secure and free future for yourself and for your children. (And their children.) It helps make our country financially strong. The stronger we are financially, as individuals and as a nation, the better we can demonstrate to the world the superiority of our system. And the safer the world will be for ourselves and our families.

Make sense? Sure it does. Good, hard financial sense. For you and your country. Buy U.S. Savings Bonds regularly. It's one of the world's best savings plans, in more ways than one.

Guarantee his future while saving for it. You help give your family a better world when you buy U.S. Savings Bonds.

This man believes in world revolution by force. One of the best ways to keep his ambitions in check is to keep up our financial strength—as individuals and as a nation.

Five personal benefits you get from Savings Bonds:

1. Your investment is guaranteed safe by the U.S. Government.
2. Your Bonds are replaced free if anything happens to them.
3. You can get your money back whenever you need it.
4. You can save automatically where you work.
5. You get $4 back for every $3 in just 7 years, 9 months.

Bonds are registered safe. If anything happens to one of your Bonds, a serial number like this will guarantee its replacement.

Keep freedom in your future with
U.S. SAVINGS BONDS

Report from the

GENERAL PRESIDENT

WE have been quite busy in the office preparing for the Executive Council meeting which I have called for the week of February 18, 1963.

Last month I gave you a report as to the progress regarding the General Membership Pension Plan and since that time we have taken bids from four reliable insurance companies, as well as bids to have an actuarial study made by an independent actuary in order to check against the bids and summations. This has incurred a great deal of work and it will also make a lot of work for the Executive Council since we hope to get the fundamentals of the Trust Agreement and the Pension Plan adopted by the Executive Council at this meeting in order that information may be furnished prior to your negotiations. This may not be possible but we will do the best we can because we want the approval of the necessary Departments of the Federal Government before we actually have the Plan printed.

We also have a meeting of the General Presidents and the Executive Board of the Building and Construction Trades Department this coming week and we have a meeting on February 25-26 of the National Bureau for Lathing and Plastering Board of Governors which, again, is a controversial and rather difficult matter and will possibly be a lengthy meeting to attempt to get matters cleared away on problems involving the promotional program. This, of course, has necessitated a great deal of paper work to prepare for these meetings and will require a great deal more after the meetings have been held.

I have about six meetings scheduled in Miami, all of which are very important as you know from previous reports on the subject matter involved. One may be rather lengthy because of the action taken by the Carpenters in refusing to abide by the decisions of the National Joint Board issued between the Lathers and the Carpenters; decisions, in my opinion, which should not have been issued because of the procedural rules wherein they provide that any International Union who does not abide by the decisions of the National Joint Board shall be prevented from further decisions in their favor. If you will recall, a month after I was installed as General President in 1955, because we were out of the Board at that time a Resolution was passed by the Building and Construction Trades Department that all International Unions belonging to the Building Trades Department must abide by the decisions of the National Joint Board or not be eligible affiliates to the Building and Construction Trades Department.

President Hutcheson has advised me that he will neither petition the National Joint Board for decisions affecting the Lathers and Carpenters nor will he abide by any of the agreements made on a local basis with the Committee Report as a basis for those agreements. This must be straightened out or it will wreck the National Joint Board since it is my position that all International Unions should be treated alike. We pay the same per capita tax as any other International Union even though it may be on fewer members. Therefore, I intend to insist that the Carpenters live up to the decisions the same as the Lather or any other trade. This, of course, could become quite a hassle.

Communications, rulings, agreements and local By-Laws, all of which are my responsibility may be delayed because of my absence at these meetings and I ask your tolerance until the First of March in respect to these matters, since under our Constitution, this is the responsibility of the General President and these powers may not be delegated to someone else. Many of your questions can be answered by Secretary Mills. However, he will be attending our Executive Board Meeting of February 18 along with myself. Other matters dealing with the office of the Secretary can generally be answered by the Office Manager, Brother Jack Diver, if Secretary Mills or myself are not available.

Faternally yours,

"Floating and Infinite"

Dramatic Ceiling Effect Made Possible with Metal Lath and Plaster

ONLY metal lath and plaster could have performed the difficult and complex tasks assigned by Patch & Erickson, Minneapolis architectural firm, in the newly dedicated Church of the Annunciation in Minneapolis.

Three-fourths inch channel and water dashed and acoustic plaster were used in the formation of the dramatic ceiling which "achieves a floating and infinite effect."

The exterior of the church features a majestic column, topped with a cross. Stained glass windows and natural stone add to the grandeur.

The interior design emphasizes the focal point of the church: the tabernacle upon the high altar. All wall and ceiling planes are directed to guide the eye toward this area.

The interior wall surfaces are of brick, contrasting with the plaster ceiling.

In the words of designer Tom Stahl, "The upper nave ceiling was designed to perform a two-fold purpose: to complement the broken vertical surfaces of the side nave walls, and to act as a horizontal sound reflector. The principal section of the ceiling is composed of a series of diminishing tapered cross vaults, culminating in a large vaulted space directly over the sanctuary area, then passing over the reredos screen into the loft area. The mass of the ceiling is held free from all vertical surfaces by recessed soffits to achieve the unique effect.

The pattern of the ceiling includes curves 6½ inches deep together with a 13-inch pocket on the side. A crew of 12 spent approximately seven weeks on this $39,000 church job. Ted Thies served as plastering foreman and John Reeves and Merton Ontwadt, lathing foremen.

Metal lath, used throughout the church, provides plasterers with the excellent surface uniformity which was essential to achieve the dramatic ceiling effect. Both water-dashed and acoustic plaster were used for the complete upper and lower nave ceilings.

The ceiling, as viewed here through a maze of scaffolding, suggests a "floating and infinite" effect.

Lift Shape

Economical New Construction Technique
Of Reinforcing Bars, Metal Lath and Plaster

After the application of successive coats of concrete, the finished lift-shape structure provides a smooth sand finished surface.

A NEW chapter in building construction opened when the boom of a giant crane maneuvered over a flat geometric form made of metal lath and reinforcing rods. Laid flat on the ground, the form resembled an immense asterisk. The crane hook was attached to the center of the form and, as it lifted the steel, the six points of the "asterisk" were drawn inward by block and tackle; as the center reached the proper height, workmen sprung these six legs into place and affixed them to previously prepared concrete piers.

"Lift Shape" is the name applied to this novel, efficient and economical new construction technique that has been developed and tested at Texas A&M College. Consisting solely of reinforcing bars, metal lath, concrete and plaster, the dome shaped structure provides space, unobstructed by columns, at a lower cost than that of conventional structures.

After the armature of the test structure had been raised and its legs affixed, portland cement was machine applied in successive layers over the reinforcing rods and the metal lath to form an enclosure and to achieve structural rigidity. Thereafter, cement was machine applied to the underside of the metal lath and after final coating, both underside and topside were troweled to an attractive sand finish.

Developed by James H. Marsh, III, Assistant Research Architect at Texas Engineering Experiment Station, the lift shape structure was built under his directions by the Architectural Research Group of the college, working with a grant from Educational Facilities Laboratories. Conclusions are that the technique offers unlimited possibilities for forming thin shell reinforced concrete shapes without the extra cost and time of using conventional forms and framework. In the lift-shape building, form and reinforcement are combined in a single unit. Test loading of 20 psf (plus an unexpected test from 67 MPH winds generated by a hurricane that passed within 50 miles) indicated that the lift-shape process gives as good or better construction than conventional methods.

In order to compare costs, bids for conventional concrete structures of identical dimensions were secured, and accurate records of the costs of the lift-shape structure were kept. Analysis indicates that conventional construction would have cost 23 per cent more than the actual $4760 cost of the test structure. With a 50 ft. diameter and a maximum ceiling height of 15 ft., the total area of floor space maintaining at least a ceiling height of 5 ft. 6 in., is approximately 1,500 sq. ft. The shell alone, neglecting foundation costs, is $3.18 per square foot of usable covered space.

Uses in Many Fields

It is confidently anticipated by engineers and architects who have viewed the lift-shape structure that this new construction technique will find wide applicability as an entrance porte coche for a hospital, hotel or school; as a recreation pavilion for a hospital or hotel; as a roller- or ice-skating rink or an all-weather swimming pool; or as an out-of-door meeting facility or restaurant area. In addition, its use is foreseen in the economical creation of an athletic field house, pro shop or athletic field utilities building.

According to Professor Marsh and those who have been closely connected with the lift-shape project, the new technique can be used advantageously for the construction of a wide variety of free form structures. The technique may be adapted for the erection of structures of many different uses, including auto or boat display rooms, supermarkets, garages, warehouses, workshops, sports arenas, meeting halls, band shells and restaurants. Working from the criteria developed from the erection of the prototype, the lift-shape method could be successfully used to create structures with spans up to 80 or 100 feet.

Among the additional designs possible with the lift-shape technique of construction is an outdoor school theater and band shell.

Takoma Park, Maryland

Dear Sir:

In accordance with your request we have examined the books and records of the Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers International Union for the year ended December 31, 1962 and give you herewith a report of our examination including the following exhibits and schedules:

Exhibits:

A—Statement of Condition December 31, 1962

Schedules:

- 1—Summary Cash Statement

These securities are held for safekeeping in a safe deposit box in the Suburban Trust Company.

The net assets of your organization have increased from $935,837.50 on December 31, 1961 to $1,062,612.16 on December 31, 1962, an increase of $126,774.66 occurring in the various funds as follows:

	NET WORTH DECEMBER 31,		INCREASE OR (DECREASE)
	1962	1961
General Fund	$174,387.04	$164,903.67	$ 9,483.37

Total	$1,062,612.16	$935,837.50	$126,774.66

Inventory values were based on estimated figures determined from your records.

Since the examination was confined to receipts and disbursements, amounts due from local unions or other sources, and any unpaid bills, for services and supplies, were not considered in the compilation of this report.

In our opinion, subject to the above comments the accompanying balance sheet and operating statement present fairly the financial position of the Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers International Union at December 31, 1962 and the results of its operations for the year then ended on a cash basis consistent with that of the preceding year.

Press Reception Held for Metal Lath Association

John Moynahan and Company, Inc. arranged a press reception at the Essex House, New York City, January 23, 1963, at which time, M. K. Brown, President of the Metal Lath Association, spoke on the history of metal lath and its future uses.

Highlights of Mr. Brown's talk were the facts that, "new building needs promise continued metal lath growth," because of necessity for space saving, acoustical insulation, fire resistance, indirect lighting, and freedom of design.

Metal lath, and plaster are perfectly suited for the formation of free-flowing shapes of new designing including curves of any radius, and is ideal for concealing mechanical lines, and duct work.

Metal lath, he said, has importance not only in new buildings, but is increasingly important in renovation, and urban renewal.

Along with members of the press, members of John Moynahan and Company, members of the Metal Lath Association were Representatives from the National Bureau for Lathing and Plastering, the Operative Plasterers and Cement Finishers International Association, and the Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers' International Union.

It was rewarding to see the representatives of the press, manufacturers, and labor at this reception under such a pleasant and friendly atmosphere. Everyone seemed very pleased to have had the opportunity to attend the press reception.

Canadian Radio Programs Will Discuss Co-ops

In view of the increasing recognition of the mutuality of interests between the Labour and Co-operative Movements and their common desire to promote and foster a closer relationship, the National Labour—Co-operative Committee has suggested that all sections of the Congress be notified of two significant programs on Co-operatives in the current National Farm Radio Forum series

These programs will be broadcast on March 11th and 18th respectively, at 9:00 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. from C.B.C. and affiliated stations in each of Canada's time zones. The first one, on March 11th, is entitled "The Co-operative Idea." It will be a discussion of the philosophy and ethics of Co-operatives in their traditional and modern contexts. The second, on March 18th, entitled "Co-operatives in the Economy" will deal with Co-operatives from an economic standpoint, their significance in Canada's economy and to the nation's growth.

Report from the

GENERAL PRESIDENT

AS I have previously advised you, I called an Executive Council meeting in Miami, Florida, for the purpose of having the basic issues of the Pension Plan established so we could proceed to work out the details and file the Plan with Internal Revenue. The following are the basic issues established by the Executive Council. Further details will have to be worked out by the Trustees and as soon as they are they will be forwarded to participating parties:

At its meeting held February 18-23, 1963, the Executive Council considered the report of Ostheimer and Company, Inc., an Actuary, relating to the creation of the Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers International Union General Pension Plan. After careful deliberation, the Executive Council, for and on behalf of the L.I.U., unanimously voted to agree to the creation of the Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers International Union General Pension Fund. Further, the Executive Council voted unanimously to adopt the proposal prepared by the Actuary, Ostheimer and Company, Inc., relating to the General Pension Plan which proposed General Pension Plan is to be referred to the Board of Trustees of the Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers International Union General Pension Fund and General Pension Plan on which Board of Trustees Lloyd A. Mashburn and Harold Mills were designated as the L.I.U. Trustees.

The Executive Council acted with careful deliberation so as to assure the financial stability of the General Pension Fund and General Pension Plan so as to best protect the interests of all of our members. Accordingly, based upon payment into the Pension Fund by each Employer of ten cents (10¢) per hour for each hour worked by each journeyman lather and apprentice, the Actuary has advised that the following benefits can be paid to eligible members:

Normal Retirement Benefits

A member who is 65 years of age and has no less than 15 years of credited service will receive the Normal Retirement Pension of $2 per month for each year of service, with a maximum of 25 years of service. Accordingly, a member who is 65 years of age and has 25 years of credited service at the time of retirement would receive $50 per month (25 years at $2 per month per year of service equals $50 per month). If a member has only 15 years of credited service when he retires at age 65 or later, he would receive $30 per month; at 16 years of service he would receive $32 per month; at 17 years of service he would receive $34 per month, etc.

Early Retirement Benefits

A member who is 55 years of age or over may retire if he has no less than 15 years of credited service at the time of retirement. For each year before age 65 that such a member retires, his monthly retirement benefit is actuarially reduced by 5/9ths of 1% per month. For example, a member who retires at age 62 would receive 80% of the pension such a member would have received if he waited until age 65 to retire.

Total and Permanent Disability Pension

A member who is 40 years of age or over and has at least 10 years of credited service would be entitled to receive a monthly pension if he becomes totally and permanently disabled. The amount of the pension would be based upon pension credits accrued to date of disability. The test as to whether or not a member is totally and permanently disabled will be the test applicable for the receipt of total and permanent disability under the Social Security standards.

Deferred Vesting Benefit

A member who is 45 years of age or over and has no less than 15 years of credited service who decides no longer to work or to seek work as a journeyman lather and thus leaves the craft before becoming entitled to receive either an Early Retirement Pension or a Normal Retirement Pension shall be entitled to a vested retirement benefit in an amount actuarially determined by taking into consideration pension credits accrued by such a member to the date that he leaves the craft. The vested retirement benefit would become payable when such a member reaches the age of 65 and makes application for the vested benefit to his credit.

Guaranteed Pension Payments

If a member who is entitled to either Normal Retirement Benefits or Early Retirement Benefits goes on a pension and dies before receiving 60 monthly pension payments (five years' worth of payments), then his wife would be entitled to receive the balance of the monthly payments in order to make up 60 months' worth of payments.

Payments Are In Addition To Social Security

All pension benefits are in addition to Social Security retirement benefits or to Social Security total and permanent disability benefits.

Above is set forth the schedule of retirement benefits which will be included in the General Pension Plan. The General Pension Plan is to be worked out in detail and will contain all of the necessary provisions relating to eligibility, determination of past and future service credits, etc. As soon as the detailed General Pension Plan is worked out, you will be advised.

Since we all desire that the General Pension Plan be financially sound at all times, pension payments will begin on January 1, 1966 as to members who are otherwise eligible, for whom Employers began on or as of January 1, 1963 to make payments into the General Pension Fund at the rate of ten cents (10¢) per hour worked by such members. Each member, who is otherwise eligible, must have no less than three years of future service credit before becoming entitled to receive pension benefits. Therefore, the sooner that our Local Unions negotiate agreements wherein Employers begin to pay ten cents per hour for each hour worked by each journeyman lather and apprentice into the General Pension Fund, the better it will be for our members as well as for the General Pension Fund and General Pension Plan.

The General Pension Plan will give credit for past service; the definition of past service will be set forth in more detail in the General Pension Plan but, generally speaking, it will be based on last continuous membership. A year of future service credit will consist of no less than 1200 hours worked in a year by a journeyman lather or apprentice for which 1200 hours or more the sum of ten cents per hour for each hour worked by each journeyman lather and apprentice is paid into the General Pension Fund by his Employer or Employers; if a journeyman lather or apprentice works less than 1200 hours in a year, he will still receive credit for each hour worked for which the required payments are made by his Employer or Employers into the General Pension Fund at the rate of one month's credit for each 100 hours which the journeyman lather or apprentice works and for which the required payments are made into the General Pension Fund. In order to make sure that the General Pension Fund and General Pension Plan exist for the benefit and protection of those who really desire to work as journeymen lathers and apprentices, a journeyman lather or apprentice must work at least 400 hours during a consecutive two year period for which 400 hours the sum of ten cents per hour for each hour worked is paid by his Employer or Employers into the General Pension Fund.

In view of the pension benefits which are to be paid, I am sure that you agree that the requirements as to hours worked and paid for by Employers into the General Pension Fund are fair and liberal. It would be impossible to have this fair and liberal Pension Plan if it were based on money received only from an increase in per capita tax. Only by having Employers agree to pay the sum of ten cents per hour for each hour worked by each journeyman lather and apprentice into the General Pension Fund is this General Pension Fund and General Pension Plan possible. After all, since we are setting up a General Pension Fund and a General Pension Plan, we wanted to provide benefits in an amount which, in addition to Social Security benefits, would enable our members to retire with a modest assured income which we hope to improve over the years.

Efforts will be made to work out reciprocal agreements between the L.I.U. General Pension Plan and any Pension Plans which exist in our Local Unions. When such reciprocal agreements are worked out, members who have to travel in order to get jobs will receive pension credits in the L.I.U. General Pension Plan for each hour worked for which the sum of ten cents per hour is received by the L.I.U. General Pension Plan from the Pension Plan in the area to which our members have to travel in order to get a job.

Provisions will be made for Local Unions, Provincial, State and District Councils to make contributions into the General Pension Fund to cover their part time or full time salaried or hourly paid employees. The circumstances under which this can be done are set forth in detail in the Agreement and Declaration of Trust creating and governing the administration of the General Pension Fund as well as in the General Pension Plan. At present, the Pension Fund and Pension Plan is based upon payments made by Employers and there is no provision for payments made into the General Pension Fund by individual members. All this was considered necessary and advisable under present conditions and in order to avoid complications. If and when such problems and complications are resolved, you will be advised.

As you can appreciate, this Report is to give you information. The Agreement and Declaration of Trust creating and governing the administration of the Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers International Union General Pension Fund and General Pension Plan will be controlling since those documents go into greater detail and it would obviously be impossible to set them forth in length in this Report.

In closing, may I again urge that our Local Unions negotiate agreements with Employers for the payment by the Employers into the L.I.U. General Pension Fund of the sum of ten cents per hour for each hour worked by each journeyman lather and apprentice. Our Pension Fund and Pension Plan is actuarially sound and, from a legal and tax standpoint, every step will be taken to assure protection to the General Pension Fund and General Pension Plan as well as to all contributing Employers.

Faternally yours,

CASE NO. 1—RESOLUTION IN MEMORIAM OF SEVENTH VICE PRESIDENT, HAROLD R. WELLER, AND NINTH VICE PRESIDENT, THOMAS J. FREDRICKSON.

The first order of business of the Executive Council adopted the following resolution:

WHEREAS, Almighty God has removed from our ranks Brother Harold R. Weller, and Brother Thomas J. Fredrickson, Vice Presidents of our International Union, and

WHEREAS, Brothers Weller and Fredrickson were revered and respected by our entire membership for their long and untiring efforts and activities on behalf of our International Union and affiliated Local Unions, and

WHEREAS, the passing of these two trade unionists is sincerely grieved and mourned by our entire membership,

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED by the officers and members of the Executive Council at their meeting of February 18, 1963 at Miami Beach, Florida, that upon adjourning we do so in solemn memory of our former Brothers and by a period of silence pay tribute to the time, effort, wisdom and friendship which they so generously gave to our organization and the labor movement as a whole and extend our deepest sympathies to Mrs. Weller and Mrs. Fredrickson and the families of our deceased associates, friends and brothers.

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that the Secretary-Treasurer of the Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers' International Union, Brother Harold Mills, be instructed to forward a copy of this resolution to their bereaved families.

CASE NO. 2—WOOD, WIRE AND METAL LATH- ERS INTERNATIONAL UNION EMPLOYEES PENSION FUND AND PENSION PLAN.

By virtue of the authority granted to the Executive Council by the 24th Convention of the L.I.U., and as such authority is embodied in Section 160 of the Constitution of the L.I.U., and, further, in accordance with Case No. 2 of the Minutes of the Executive Council Meeting held in Washington, D.C. on May 14-16, 1962, the Executive Council by unanimous vote adopts, for and on behalf of the L.I.U., the rules and regulations relating to the Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers International Union Employees Pension Plan, among which rules and regulations are those relating to Disability Retirement Benefits, as well as Normal Retirement Benefits and Early Retirement Benefits.

CASE NO. 3—INCREASING FUNERAL BENEFITS.

In accordance with Case No. 8 of the Minutes of the Executive Council Meeting held in Washington, D. C. on May 14-16, 1962, the Executive Council has carefully considered the study made of the financial resources and requirements of the Funeral Benefit Plan Trust Fund and the members of the Executive Council are of the opinion that the reserve in the Funeral Benefit Plan Trust Fund, although adequate for the payment of the present Benefit schedule, is insufficient to permit an increase in Funeral Benefits at this time.

CASE NO. 4—WOOD, WIRE AND METAL LATH- ERS INTERNATIONAL UNION GENERAL PENSION FUND.

By virtue of the authority granted to it by the 24th Convention of the L.I.U. and in accordance with Case No. 7 of the Minutes of the Executive Council Meeting held in Washington, D. C. on May 14-16, 1962, the Executive Council, for and on behalf of the L.I.U., unanimously voted to agree to the creation of the Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers International Union General Pension Fund, and to the execution of the Agreement and Declaration of trust creating and relating to the Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers International Union General Pension Fund and, further, the Executive Council voted unanimously to adopt the proposed Pension Plan prepared by the Actuary, Ostheimer & Co., Inc., which proposed Pension Plan is to be referred to the Board of Trustees of the Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers International Union General Pension Fund and Pension Plan, on which Board of Trustees Lloyd A. CASE NO. 5—STATE AND DISTRICT COUNCILS—RESOLUTION #7 OF THE 24TH CONVENTION OF THE L.I.U.

The Executive Council joins with the General President in urging all Local Unions to adhere carefully and fully to all of the applicable provisions of the L.I.U. Constitution relating to Charges, Trials and Appeals before levying any fine on any member. Further, fines must not be excessive but each case should be carefully considered on its own facts and merits, taking into consideration the seriousness of the alleged offense before determining the amount of fine imposed on a member found guilty of a violation.

CASE NO. 8—DISCUSSION OF PROMOTIONAL PROGRAM.

The Executive Council fully endorses the Promotional Program and supports the zeal and untiring efforts of the General President on behalf of the Promotional Program. Report from the

GENERAL SECRETARY-TREASURER

Happy Anniversary

MARCH 4 marked the fiftieth anniversary of the Department of Labor. The agency received attention and praise from many quarters on its birthday. There were dinners and speeches and programs. But as we continue to celebrate the anniversary it is well that we look into the reasons for the establishment of the Department and at some of the continuing problems which give the agency its sense of purpose and reason for being.

The establishment of the Department came after some years of campaigning on the part of organized labor and others who thought the problems of labor deserved cabinet rank handling. The days of 1912-13 were peaceful days, relatively speaking, and the nation was not worried about international conflicts. We were a nation which was moving along. Questions were being raised, however, about our economic machine. Could this machine be adapted and operated in the interest of the people who manned it while it was doing its technical job?

This human question has been the basis of the Department's aims and general purpose since 1913 even though the problems have differed. Child labor and immigration were burning issues in 1913. And one of the persistent questions raised concerned the accurate measurement of changes in wages, hours, conditions of work in order that labor and industry might be properly guided in the decision-making process.

Through the years many other problems affecting the welfare of the workers have arisen and the nation has sought to deal with them through the Department of Labor. The problem of conciliation of disputes and problems of women workers needed attention. And when the First World War came along, we faced many obstacles to victory in the form of proper use of manpower and the development of work and safety standards.

Changes have been made through the different eras of our history, through the post-war and into the depression years. Employment service activity has aided in the job-finding process. Apprenticeship standards have been aided through the agency's bureau. Wage levels have been enforced under wage and hour statutes and regulations. And the construction workers are grateful indeed for the work under the Davis-Bacon Act. We feel that this law should be updated and modernized.

We face many problems today. Some persist and some are new. The new world we are living in produces new problems while many of the old ones persist. We still must have protection of wage and work standards. We must still keep a sharp watch that our younger workers do not toil in hazardous occupations. We must watch the wage and hour enforcement. We must do a multitude of things through the various bureaus of the Department which are directed at human welfare—the first and continuing purpose of the Department. The Department must never lose sight of the fact that it is designed to aid the workers and this it must do in an age of rapidly changing technology.

We wish the agency well and hope that the next 50 years will be years of progress and achievement.

Harold Mills

Canadian Woodsmen Strike Leaves Bitter Aftermath—Toronto, Ont. (PAI)—The recent month-long strike of Northern Ontario bushworkers who provide much of the newsprint for American newspapers has left a bitter aftermath.

Three strikers were killed in a brutal attack on them by local farmers called "settlers" who were "scabbing" on them; 237 strikers were charged with rioting and 19 "settlers" were indicted for "non-capital murder" which carries a mandatory life sentence. Finally, mandatory arbitration—which nobody really wants—has been imposed upon the union.

In an analysis of the strike, the Cooperative Press Association, Canadian labor news service, said that the dispute had raised "disturbing questions about the performance of the Ontario Labor Department and the maneuverings of the major firms in the pulp and paper industry."

The labor department marked time for months, ignoring union appeals to invoke conciliation proceedings in certain key cases. The government also sidestepped union complaints about widespread illegal trafficking in timber cutting permits among independent cutters and jobbers.

Austerity Kept Canadians Home—Austerity kept more Canadians at home last year and curbed spending by those who went abroad, giving the balance-of-payments picture a rosier hue. This was a main reason for a third-quarter deficit of $61 million—about the same as 1961—although the excess of exports over imports for the period was more than halved at $58 million.

Unemployment Up—Ottawa (CPA)—Canadian unemployment increased by 72,000 for the monthly period ending in mid-December—to 414,000 persons or a shade more than last year at the same date. The unemployment rate of 6.3 percent for the total labor force was 1.1 percentage points higher than a month earlier but .1 percentage point lower than a year earlier. Thus, despite a higher rate of production in 1962, unemployment remained virtually unchanged and in vulnerable position.

Canada lost twice as many man-days in 1962 as a result of unemployment than have been lost through strikes in the past 61 years.

Loan Sharks Unleashed —Toronto (CPA) — The courts and the federal parliament have declared open season on the consumer for moneylenders who hold a licence.

In Toronto, the Ontario Court of Appeal wiped from the statute books a law purporting to protect borrowers from exorbitant interest rates.

In Ottawa, four Conservative M.P.s talked out a New Democratic private members bill aimed at assisting people who face financial ruin from finance companies.

The Court of Appeal declared that the 50-year-old Unconscionable Transactions Act of Ontario was unconstitutional. Only the federal parliament can enact such legislation, the court held. Lawyers were not surprised at the decision. The British North America Act gives the federal parliament, not the provinces, the power to control interest rates.

Unfortunately the court had no power to fill the void created by the ruling against the Act. It will now be up to the government to introduce legislation into parliament as soon as possible.

'Force For Good'—Victoria—"We can only promote the common good by promoting the advancement of unions," Father Dermot McInerney, a pastor of Saint Anthony's parish, West Vancouver, told a regional Catholic Social Life Conference here.

Labor unions are a "force for good in our society," he said.

"The cry of 'right to work'," Father McInerney said, "is not in conformity with papal encyclicals (letters from the Pope) and should not be espoused by any Catholic desirous of promoting social justice."

Medicare OFL Convention Highlight —Niagara Falls (CPA)—Almost 9000 delegates at a record convention of the Ontario Federation of Labor here November 5, 6 and 7 picked on medicare, the shorter work week, and the fight against ex parte injunctions as the key issues facing the trade union movement in this province in the ensuing year.

Pushing hard to get through 159 resolutions in the three days, the delegates teed off on a handful of major problems which will highlight drives on the economic and political fronts.

President David Archer, Secretary-Treasurer D. F. Hamilton, and ten vice-presidents were returned to office and two new vice-presidents were added by the constitutional amendment for a total executive board of 14.

More Houses Built in '62—Housing starts and completions in 1962 were up slightly compared with a year earlier. Starts totaling 130,095 rose by 3.6 percent and completions increased 9.6 percent to 126,682.

Municipal building permits issued last November totaled $185,179,000 worth of construction or 3.3 percent less than a year earlier. Value of residential construction was off nearly 10 percent.

Chicago Groups Give $2,750 to Student Fund

The Lathing Foundation of Chicago and Chicago's Plastering Institute gave another boost for the education of architects here recently with the presentation of checks totaling $2,750 to the Illinois Society of Architects for its student scholarship fund. The ISA instituted its scholarship program a little over a year ago and now is aiding one outstanding student at the University of Illinois at Urbana.

"The money," said Gerald L. Palmer, ISA executive secretary, "will greatly strengthen the scholarship fund." The Lathing Foundation and Plastering Institute also have contributed to the Chicago Chapter Foundation of the American Institute of Architects, another educational group.

Ceramic Tile Installation Explained in New Bulletin

Publication of a Technical Bulletin describing the application of ceramic tile to metal lath and plaster surfaces has been announced by the Metal Lath Association. The four page 8½ x 11" brochure contains specifications and working drawings of both flush and offset tile applications over mortar beds, dry set beds and adhesive. Also included are detail drawings of application over wood studs and prefabricated metal studs. Additional illustrations depict recommended tile installations for shower stalls, bathtub areas, floors and countertops.

Specifications cover the erection of metal lath, plaster, backing, and refer to tile setting methods. They are written in detail to provide complete information or reference. An advantage of the Specifications prepared by the Metal Lath Association, Jack Fisher points out, is that they may be used by simply referring to the pertinent sections or the entire Specifications.

A copy of the ceramic tile Technical Bulletin No. 20 may be obtained without charge by writing to the Metal Lath Association, Engineers Building, Cleveland 14, Ohio.

Letter to Editor Hits Firetrap Paper Walls

The following letter to the editor appeared recently in the Philadelphia Inquirer.

"Thank you for bringing to the attention of all, 'Where Fire Prevention is Vital.' Due thanks to Mr. Barnet Lieberman in knowing that our various institutions will have automatic alarm systems direct to City Hall.

"You mentioned further precautions for heating systems and electrical wiring installations, the sleazy, antiquated establishments for the elderly and infirm. May I add, along with these paramount issues the step backward the city of Philadelphia is taking in allowing thousands of new homes to be built for our aged and infirm that are private tinder boxes. I refer to the many now being built, beautiful looking brick and stone structures—on the outside—but inside a fire trap. The walls are made of paperboard.

"Why can't our City Code be changed for the 'inside' of our homes as brick and the like are a must for the 'outside?' "—Mrs. Laura M. Miller.

Line Drawing Series Promotes Metal Lath

A series of line drawing mat releases to newspapers has been instituted by the Metal Lath Association. Known to be one of the most consistent and effective means of getting an educational message across to a consumer audience, the series will use the "then-and-now" theme to trace the improvements leading to the modern structure of metal lath and plaster.

Approximately five hundred newspapers will be serviced with mats. The first mat, which has just been released, is entitled, "All About Houses." With text and drawings it describes developments in homes, from log cabin to the modern dwelling of metal lath and plaster. Scheduled for later releases are drawings about churches and schools.

John Vohden Honored At Dinner

John J. Vohden, Jr., Vice President and Director, of the Broad National Bank, was honored recently at a testimonial dinner sponsored by L.I.U. Local 102 for his many years of sterling leadership in the Labor movement. Mr. Vohden was elected Recording Secretary 1927-29; Financial Secretary 1929-1940; Business Manager 1940-1962, all in Lathers Local Union No. 102, President of the Board of Business Agents of the Essex County Building & Construction Trades Council 1942-1957; President Essex Trades Council 1944-53.

Mr. Vohden was appointed to the New Jersey State Investment Council at its inception for a one year term by Governor Alfred Driscoll; reappointed to a five year term by Governor Alfred Driscoll, and a hold-over member for two years at the request of Governor Robert Meyner. He served as a member of the Workmen's Compensation Advisory Committee to Labor Commissioner Harry Harper for 4 years.

Mr. Vohden was a member of the War Labor Board Panel; the War Manpower Commission of the Tri-county area of Essex-Hudson and Union Counties. He served as a delegate to the Essex County Building & Construction Trades Council; Essex Trades Council; New Jersey State Federation of Labor; New Jersey State Building & Construction Trades Council; Wood, Wire & Metal Lathers International Union and the American Federation of Labor for many years.

Mr. Vohden has served as a Labor member of many civic organizations and drive campaigns including the Red Cross, Salvation Army, United Appeals. His participation in labor and civic affairs stems from a very real and dedicated desire to help his fellow man.

His seasoned wisdom, gained in years of practice and the study of the labor movement and its personalities, was daily engaged in the cause of his Union and its members.

Harold Mills, Secretary-Treasurer of L. I. U. represented the International Union at the dinner.

U.S. Department Of Labor— the Worker's Agency

by W. Willard Wirtz

The 50 years of history since March 4, 1913, have been the most turbulent in man's history, filled with revolution, war and economic depression, but also with great triumph and achievement. The Department of Labor has had an increasingly important role in our national response to these tides of change. Perhaps the central fact of our anniversary celebration is that despite the impact of two world wars and profound scientific changes, the basic commitment of our society—and the department's statutory share of that commitment—remains toward the individual.

Because the department's concern is People, and its mandate is spelled in terms of human welfare, its history has a deep significance for our time. Originally an "orphan" agency of government grown to cabinet rank only after adventures as a subordinate bureau wandering through the organizational charts of other agencies, the department has remained relatively small—yet today it has assumed a central responsibility for a major decision we face as a people: Can we make our economy a human as well as a technical success?

This is not unlike the questions that through the years have helped shape and form the department. In its formative period, the overriding issues were immigration, child labor and producing some accurate system by which to measure the changes in jobs and wages and hours and conditions of work. It was from the first the condition of the individual working man and his family that gave the department its meaning. It was an agency that sought to realize the dream of America held by the immigrants with whom it dealt; its purpose has varied little in the years since.

Yet its constitution has changed several times, almost in exact proportion to the changes in American life. During World War I, the concerns were primarily with manning the war effort and ensuring needed production. In the peace that followed, the Secretaries of Labor considered the evolving technology of mass production and mass manpower needs and sought ways and means by which the security of individual workers could be vouchsafed. With the Depression came a proliferation of departmental activities—the national employment service, wages and hours law enforcement, apprenticeship and training, the development of appropriate labor standards. With these changes, some of the older agencies were removed—Immigration and Naturalization, the Children's Bureau, the Mediation and Conciliation Service; none are today a part of the department. New ones took their place—Employment Security, Labor Standards, Apprenticeship and Training, Wage and Hour and the like.

The history of the department is a record of response to change. For this anniversary year, a publication based upon reports of the Secretaries of Labor to the Congress since 1913 will be issued. Reading these texts, one is struck by the similarity of the problems and issues faced by each generation in turn. And one becomes more than ever convinced that tomorrow belongs to those who face the fact of change, who go forward to meet it, who see it as an essential quality of growth.

The problems that were very large in the past may seem small to us now and those we deal with today may lose much of their dimension in the eventful years ahead. The contribution of this agency of government will continue to grow, however, so long as its tradition of confronting change continues.

That change today is measured in megatons of technological, demographic, political, social and economic explosion.

As framers of the manpower policies of this nation, we are challenged to keep pace with the genius of science. Technology is an inexorable force. Every new device is going to be used. What it is not made to alter for the better, it will alter for the worse and it will not wait. It offers the promise of man's fulfillment. We must bring to the architecture of manpower policy the degrees of invention, the ingenuity, the boldness which characterize today's phenomenal rate of scientific discovery.

Our task is harder than that of the scientist. When he discovers new truth, when the designer completes a new device, his job is done. There is the further responsibility upon us that we must develop those programs which will safeguard the person who may, as an individual, be adversely affected by a technological development which greatly benefits the community as a whole. Our task includes the responsibility to persuade, to obtain consent, to overcome the force of inertia which is represented in men's desire as individuals for even the incomplete security they think the status quo gives them.

Nor is it enough to be willing to "adjust" to change, for that would inevitably mean falling further and further behind until the forces of scientific and technological change which promise man's deliverance become rather the forces of his destruction.

Today, a man's job is also the uncertain product of unpredictable but almost certain change.

Within the next 30 days, 500,000 people will move to new employers, 600,000 to a different line of work, 400,000 to different areas of the country.

This change will be devastating unless we harness it to our own use. If we would make a firm course for change, we must first erect an economy capable of enlarging itself, an economy that offers to each man a meaningful use of his time and talent.

I subscribe to the old-fashioned belief that the best stimulant in the world to an economy is people coming in the doors of stores with money in their pockets. I think that in terms of our particular interest in achieving a full-employment economy the largest importance attaches to the stimulation of consumer purchasing power.

We can and must do better in approaching the problems of technology. Attention must be given in the private processes of collective bargaining to the problems presented by automation. We are going to have to review our seniority, our job right systems, our employment security programs, our retirement plans to find ways of assuring that a man's rights are not destroyed when he has to move aside for a machine.

Only part of this job can be done privately. The rest of the answer to it is illustrated by the enactment by Congress last summer of the Manpower Development and Training Act. Under this legislation we will undertake to train some 400,000 people in the next three years.

We are going to need in this decade alone 5 million more skilled workers than we have presently available. These are job opportunities. We must inventory them. Retraining is being devised on a basis of working back from those and I am sure we can gear the retraining program to previously identifiable job opportunities.

The real answer to the change that is upon us is that nothing will make sense unless we expand the economy to the point where there are another 4 million jobs. There is only one answer to unemployment and that is more jobs.

We have vast unmet needs in this country. Our real wealth in meeting them is the use of the full potential of every single individual who wants to work. When we accomplish this, then we will meet these problems. Retraining is important in doing that and so are many other factors, but we must move the economy on to a faster employment pace.

The vantage of a 50th anniversary is the best one from which to consider this central challenge of continuing change. We do not face a world war, as we have done twice in the past. We do not face the collapse of an entire economic system, as we once did. We face, rather, the product of success—an economy so forward and aggressive in its technical ability that it has outstripped the skills of millions, deprived itself of that many consumers and come to an impasse of demand. As in the earlier periods, the department will be able to make a contribution to this problem because its central concern remains the person.

A changing America. If it was among the early concerns of the labor movement and the Department of Labor to abolish the widespread use of child labor and wipe out sweatshops, today's attention is towards improving the lot of farm workers. But looming over the industrial side of the workforce is rapid technological change.

The three outer layers of this laminated paper are super-absorbent, so they not only take up water from plaster mix, but also grab and hold your basecoat plaster—even machine mixes. This paper draws moisture from the mix so uniformly and so quickly that your plaster takes on “anti-slump” strength before it can slide. You get fast, even “take-up,” plenty of time for rodding and darbying.

UP! GOING IS LEADERSHIP OF COST THE

College graduates are penetrating more and more into industry. Now 58% of the graduates of men's colleges land jobs directly on the corporate payroll.

Business gets the lion's share of the college product because business needs it and can provide challenge and opportunity to the oncoming classes. About 88% of executive posts in business are held by college alumni, according to a recent study of the 100 largest corporations.

Business always will need the college-trained mind for the brainpower that management requires and the brainwork that research and development demand. Competition by business for the ablest graduates grows sharper every year.

But the cost of leadership is going up. The upward surge in our birthrate, plus a rapid rise in the percentage of high school students going on to college, has caught colleges in a financial squeeze. Some face serious shortages in classrooms, laboratories, libraries and, above all, in competent teachers.

Corporate support of higher education in ten years has risen substantially to more than $200 million for 1962. By 1970 this investment in educated manpower will need to reach $500 million annually if business wishes to insure the continued effective operation of the sources of supply.

College is business' best friend, certainly. But business recognizes that it must give as well as get. Higher education needs financial help and needs it now. Business should re-examine its needs and plan its support accordingly.

If you would like factual data on what the college crisis means to you, to business and to the nation, write for the free booklet: "COLLEGE IS AMERICA'S BEST FRIEND", c/o Higher Education, Box 36, Times Square Station, New York 36, N. Y.

More than 2,000 children die each year of leukemia—cancer of the blood-forming tissues. Important findings in research laboratories helped extend this child's life—and the lives of other little victims—by many precious months. Research scientists now see evidence that a virus may cause leukemia and this might bring closer the development of a vaccine to prevent the disease. Research will save children in the future. But research is expensive. Please give. It's for them. AMERICAN CANCER SOCIETY

GENERAL PRESIDENT

In previous reports in the Journal, I have tried to keep you informed and up to date, not only on the legal, but practical problems confronted by the National Bureau for Lathing and Plastering. You will recall that the National Bureau was first plagued by a legal problem in Chicago, when a Contractor contested the right of the Employers to make contributions to local or national promotional programs. The decision by Judge Hamilton in this case was that such contributions were legal.

The next contest was a Contractor in Tennessee challenging the right of Labor to serve on committees where contributions were made by the Employer and it was determined, at that time, that the local committee would have to be set up on a unilateral basis instead of a bilateral, which they operated under prior to this challenge.

We were much concerned at that time that the bureau in Tennessee would not function as effectively on a unilateral basis as it did on a bilateral basis. This proved to be true. The bureau in Tennessee presently is entirely ineffective.

We also saw this as a firm signal that other challenges would be made, and they were. The next, coming in the so-called "Paramount Case" in Los Angeles wherein Federal Judge Yankwich ruled that in order for the bureau to be legal, it would have to go to a unilateral program, which was done, both with the Lathers and the Plasterers. I am advised that the program is not as effective as it was on a bilateral basis.

This decision was appealed to the Ninth Circuit Court and it upheld Judge Yankwich's decision. Therefore, the National Bureau petitioned the United States Supreme Court for review and Certiorari and the appeal and review were denied. Therefore, it appears that since we have a decision from the United States Supreme Court, which is the last Court of Appeals, the only thing left for us to do is to abide by that decision until we have corrective legislation.

I am informed by our General Counsel Wilderman that I am to instruct our affiliated Local Unions who have bureaus presently operating that they must be on a unilateral basis or Trusteeship and that it is a violation of this decision for any Local Union to strike to obtain the regular bureau clause in their agreement or to strike any Contractor in order to enforce contributions to the bureau.

Therefore, all affiliated Local Unions are to follow the General Counsel's ruling until such time as you have further notice.

President Peterson and myself as Vice President, Secretary-Treasurer of the National Bureau, have scheduled a meeting of the Board of Governors of the National Bureau to take place at the Bismarck Hotel in Chicago on Monday, April 8, 1963, for the purpose of discussing a solution to our problem to continue the operation of the National and Local Bureaus on a legal basis pending outcome of the corrective legislation which has already been introduced in this session of Congress.

You will recall that we introduced legislation in the last session of Congress which was amended to the point where it was unacceptable. Therefore, we asked the House Labor Committee to hold this legislation in Committee, which was done.

It appears that our coming meeting is faced with three alternatives:

One, to operate nationally and locally on a unilateral basis, which is entirely unacceptable to Labor.

Next, to put into effect a Trusteeship Plan which was submitted to the Contractors at our last meeting and rejected by them.

And, the third, of course, is to dissolve the National Bureau.

My resignation as Vice President, Secretary-Treasurer of the National Bureau will be submitted at the coming meeting; since to do otherwise would subject me to indictment with the possibility of a $10,000 fine, ten years in jail, or both.

I am afraid I won't live ten years and I haven't got $10,000, so there seems to be no alternative but to resign those positions and hope we can reach an agreement with the Contractors on the Trusteeship Plan and make this an effective operating organization.

We have tried every avenue to maintain the National Bureau pending corrective legislation.

This is very discouraging after ten years of hard work to keep the National Bureau functioning, and particularly since the National and Local Bureaus have been a great protection against the invasion of substitutes in our Industry.

I hope my next report will give you an answer as to how we can continue this very vital program. '

Faternally yours,

SOLIDITY, APPEARANCE, SOUND CONTROL

Rock Lath was used between rooms with resilient clips for sound-deadening; metal lath was used around bathroom and closet areas.

WHEN the Kahler Corporation opened the latest in its new series of motels March 15 in Minneapolis, the "Inn Towne" offered its patrons an improvement in sound control through use of genuine lath and plaster.

Rock lath was used between the rooms, with resilient clips for sound-deadening. Even more strength and acoustic control was provided by use of metal lath around the bathroom and closet area of each room.

Of special interest to the lath and plaster trades was the system used around door frames: two studs placed about two inches apart were connected with column clips to form a column; then the entire area was heavily grouted with a resultant solidity and strength that has impressed every inspector, official or otherwise, on the job.

U.S. Gypsum lathing and plastering materials were used throughout the job.

Norm Jorgenson was plastering foreman and Bill Coe lathing foreman on the $200,000 lathing and plastering job which required 45 men for three month's time.

A. E. Conrad, whose firm—A. E. Conrad Plastering Co.—had the contract, commented that not only was the lath-and-plaster system used here a plus in solidity, appearance and sound control, but that the time saved in the work means a top score for lath and plaster in future jobs involving the architect and owner on this job.

The Inn Towne offers more than 200 rooms, in a downtown loop location, together with such extras as swimming pool, free parking on the premises, TV, year around air-conditioning, 24-hour phone service, dining and beverage facilities, meeting, party and convention rooms.

The Inn Towne, new downtown Minneapolis motel, offers the important factor of sound control—made possible through use of lath and plaster and special door frame reinforcement.

Excavation Lessened on Rolling Site

THE storied hills of Kentucky provide some breathtaking scenery and some first-class Daniel Boone legends. They also give real headaches to architects and builders.

Metal lath and plaster construction proved a happy solution in one recent Kentucky school construction problem. The site for the 1500-student Paul G. Blazer Senior High School in Ashland consists of steeply sloping hills and deep ravines, all densely wooded.

Changing the topography of the site would have been a major earth-moving operation. To avoid this, the architects, Joseph Baker & Associates, Newark, Ohio, chose an unusual approach for the campus-type school. Level structural concrete slabs permitted construction of one-story buildings without regard to the slope of the ground beneath. In two of the buildings the floor is 15 to 20 feet above ground on one side of the building. On the other side of the structure, 75 feet away, the floor touches the slope to permit access without stairs.

Since the concrete slabs were only a means to an end, economy was a major consideration. A prime way of achieving this was to keep the buildings themselves as lightweight as possible. To do this, the architects chose metal studs, lath and plaster for all interior work. Over 3500 square yards of diamond mesh metal lath were used with prefabricated metal studs and gypsum sanded, portland cement and acoustical plasters. In addition to weight savings, substantial time saving was also effected, the architects report.

Metal lath and plaster were used continuously below windows in virtually all exterior rooms to enclose mechanical service lines. Aside from the gypsum sanded plaster, acoustical plaster ceilings were included in the lobby of the gymnasium; in administration offices to provide a void between roof deck and ceiling for ducts, recessed lighting and the like; and in the natatorium (lime-base acoustical plaster).

General contractor was Werner Construction Company, Powell, Ohio, and plastering contractor was George E. Spicer & Sons, Zanesville, Ohio.

Level concrete slabs permitted one-story buildings with no regard for hilly terrain beneath. Lightweight metal lath and plaster construction played an important role in reducing size and cost of slabs.

TAILGATING:

A growing threat to highway safety

Is there any highway situation more alarming than to have some impatient driver dog your bumper on a high-speed road? Especially if you can't get over to the righthand lane without risking a real smashup?

Tailgating is more than a harrowing experience for the car being followed. It's a highway hazard that's causing traffic experts increasing concern.

On the New York State Thruway, for example, officials report that one out of every four accidents is caused by tailgating. The rate on the New Jersey Turnpike is even higher. About 51 per cent of all turnpike accidents result from following too closely.

But one of the worst things about accidents is that they cause a new phenomenon: the chain reaction collision. Following too closely at today's high speeds, drivers simply can't stop in time, and whole strings of cars pile up.

Earlier this year no less than 36 cars plowed into one another during a fog on the Jersey Pike.

"Drivers who don't pay full attention are a major cause of accidents," observes Henry E. Rose, Turnpike director of information services. "They follow too closely at fairly high speeds. Then, when drivers ahead have to stop suddenly, they crash."

Pennsylvania State Police Commissioner Frank G. McCartney points out that statistics don't tell the whole story. It's often hard to pin the blame on tailgating, he reports, but his men know that numerous accidents could be avoided if drivers would only keep a safe distance. "The tailgating problem," he says, "is way over the expectations of five years ago. That's partly because highways are still overcrowded, but also because drivers don't take care to keep safe distances."

What is a safe distance? How far behind the car ahead should the safe driver keep?

"That depends on the speed you're traveling at," the American Automobile Association advises.

On ordinary roads, they recommend one car length for every ten miles an hour of driving speed (two lengths for 20 mph, five for 50 mph). Some drivers use the average 200-foot gap between two telephone poles to gauge their distance.

On the superhighways, where speeds of 60 mph and more are permitted, the distance should be the space between two roadside reflector-markers. Use these delineators as a guide, then watch that fellow ahead to make sure you slow down when he does. Actually, you ought to be looking ahead of him so that you can anticipate the things that will cause him to slow down.

At night, an extra delineator interval is recommended. Traffic hazards triple after sundown. But how about that fellow revving up his engine behind you while you're moving at the speed limit?

"Don't let him fluster you into some dangerous maneuver," highway safety experts warn.

Get out of his way if you can, of course. But if you're forced to stay in lane for a long period, try flagging him off. Signal him with your hand to slow down, and then gradually slow down yourself, the Pennsylvania State police suggest. He ought to get the message.

Tips for Turnpike Driving

DO

- Keep to right except to pass.
- Stay far enough behind the car ahead to make a sudden stop.
- Check your rear-view mirrors often.
- Signal all turns and stops and when passing another car.
- Dim your lights in traffic.

DON'T

- Push too close to the car ahead.
- Cross dividing strip or double line.
- Drive too slowly.
- Stop in the traffic lanes.
- Cut in and out.
- Pass on the right.
- Ever drive when you're drowsy.

■ And remember, a third of traffic deaths come when drivers go too fast.

James McDevitt, COPE Director, Dies Suddenly

Washington—James L. McDevitt, national director of the AFL-CIO Committee on Political Education and a vice president of the Plasterers, died Mar. 19 in Oklahoma City while attending a COPE area conference. He was 64.

Death was attributed to a stroke followed by a cerebral hemorrhage, and came in Mercy Hospital.

"The sudden passing of James L. McDevitt is a shocking personal loss to me and to his legion of friends throughout the labor movement," said AFL-CIO Pres. George Meany. "It is also a great blow to the labor movement itself.

"No one served the trade union cause with deeper sincerity and greater diligence than Jim McDevitt. His contributions over the years, in every phase of the economic and social life of workers, can hardly be measured. Most recently, his leadership of COPE was instrumental in developing the political voice of American wage-earners into a potent instrument, more nearly in keeping with their numbers. He will long be missed as a leader and a friend, and his place will be hard to fill."

A veteran political activist who cut his teeth in Philadelphia Democratic circles, McDevitt had headed COPE since Mar. 1, 1957. Previously, from the time of the AFL-CIO merger in December 1955, he had shared COPE leadership with Jack Kroll, former head of the CIO Political Action Committee, who retired in 1957. Before the merger he had been, since 1951, national director of the AFL's Labor's League for Political Education.

General President Lloyd A. Mashburn expressed the feelings of the entire Executive Board and the entire Lathers International Union when he said, "McDevitt did a wonderful job for the entire labor movement and was a source of good for all who came in contact with him."

McDevitt was born in Philadelphia on Nov. 3, 1898, and attended parochial schools there. He began his apprenticeship in 1916 under the guidance of Plasterers Local 8 and interrupted it to serve with the Army in France during World War I.

Upon his honorable discharge he completed his apprenticeship in 1920 and quickly became a leader in his union, serving as recording secretary, president and business representative. In 1928 he was elected president of the Philadelphia Building Trades Council and directed it during the depths of the depression in its fights for scarce jobs, its struggles to preserve wage standards and its successful resistance to Communist efforts to capitalize on the plight of the unemployed.

In 1938 he was chosen president of the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor, one of the largest in the country, guiding the defense of labor's gains during successive Republican regimes. He retained the post until called to the directorship of Labor's League.

McDevitt's record is marked by service to city, state and nation in many capacities. He served on the Building Code Commission and Housing Authority in Philadelphia; was labor relations director of the Works Progress Administration and was appointed to the Philadelphia Regional Labor Board in 1935. In 1938 he was named to the State Unemployment Compensation Board of Review, and later served with many other state agencies.

Nationally he had served on the advisory committee of the U.S. Bureau of Employment Security, the Committee for the Extension of Labor Education and as U.S. labor representative at the Intl. Labor Organization's World Safety Conference in Geneva in 1948. He was a member of the executive committee of the Pennsylvania Council for a Fair Employment Practices Commission, American Council for Christians & Jews, National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and the National Trade Council for Palestine.

Surviving are his widow, Margaret, whom he married in 1953 after the death of his first wife; three children, Air Force Lt. William McDevitt, stationed at Topeka, Kans.; James L. McDevitt, Jr., of Bethesda, Md.; and Margaret, wife of Thomas Byrne, attache at the U.S. embassy in Dar-es-Salaam, Tanganyika, and five grandchildren.

Local 460 Aids Ventura Hospital

Walter R. Swift, president, and A. H. White, secretary, of Lathers Local 460 of Ventura, California, have announced the gift of $1,500 to the Community Memorial Hospital campaign from their union. At a recent meeting of the Lathers, Cmdr. Ernest M. Joyce, U.S.N. (ret.) vice chairman of the hospital fund drive, presented facts about the hospital and its relationship to the community.

Also attending the presentation were Ronald Benner, secretary of the Building Trades Council, and Bud Godfrey, business manager of Lathers Local 460.

James L. McDevitt, National director of the Committee on Political Education and a vice president of the Plasterers, died while attending a COPE area conference in Oklahoma City.

Report from the

GENERAL SECRETARY-TREASURER

Indisputable Evidence

IN THE coming months, the 88th Congress will take up the issue of health care. Although the issue has been thoroughly discussed in labor papers, most daily papers have ignored the speeches of proponents of a government health care plan and provided generous space for its opponents.

The public support shown for the Administration's proposal is a tribute to the readers' ability to see through the motives of those who are fighting to prevent passage of the bill. Since the majority have reached their opinion in the face of a barrage of expensive circulars and costly advertisements, it can be assumed, further, that support for health care legislation indicates a demand that will not yield to publicity tricks.

Nevertheless, passage of the Anderson-King bill is far from a foregone conclusion. Most of what has been said before will have to be said again to convince the lawmakers that the momentum behind the bill has not declined.

Opponents will argue, as they always have, that the health care needs of the aged are being met through existing private programs. Studies disprove this assertion.

Now is a good time to review some of the compelling facts and figures on the state of health care in America today. Incidentally, it will be interesting to watch the daily papers to see whether these points ever appear in the syndicated columns, the editorials, or the news reports.

These are statistics beyond dispute:

People over 65 annually use nearly three times as much hospital care as people under 65. After age 65 nine out of ten persons are hospitalized two or more times, and stay is twice as long as that of the average younger person.

The average yearly private spending for medical care of people over 65 is nearly twice as much as that of the rest of the population.

Although older persons have more need for hospital care, they are less able to pay for it than younger people. The median income of two-person families with a man 65 or over is $2,530 a year—less than half that of younger two-person families. Older persons have fewer assets—four out of ten families in this group have either no assets that can readily be converted into cash or less than $200 in such assets.

Older persons have less health insurance than younger people and what they have is less adequate. Only 33 per cent of the aged in families with incomes under $20,000 have hospital insurance. Only 30 per cent of the aged with chronic disabilities have hospital insurance. Only 32 per cent of the aged who are 65 or over have hospital insurance. Although at least 75 per cent of the hospital bill is paid by insurance for 64 per cent of those under 65, only 30 per cent of those over 65 have as much as 75 per cent of their bill covered.

Statistics can only begin to show the need for legislation to provide hospital services for the aged under the social security system. Everyone familiar with elderly persons can reinforce these figures with personal accounts of misfortune produced by ill-health, of treatment delayed because of poverty.

It is to be hoped that Congress will not remain aloof to the needs so apparent to everyone whose contact with life is not limited to coming out parties and embassy teas.

Two Cents a Week Adds up to Better Government

TWO cents a week isn't a lot of money. But it adds up to one dollar a year (if you take two weeks off for vacation). In turn, that one dollar a year, if it's a dollar you give to COPE, adds up to better government and better laws for all our people.

It's a small investment, two cents a week, that pays big dividends. With it, you can get the best insurance available to safeguard gains made at the bargaining table. That insurance is a good Congress, one made up of men and women who are concerned for the welfare and security of working people.

COPE, in its annual dollar drive which is on now, is asking only a dollar from every union member. These voluntary dollars help elect good candidates.

Why Give a Buck?

Why should you and other union members contribute your buck to COPE?

Well, the improved work conditions, wages and security which union members have won through collective bargaining are substantial gains which are worth protecting. But many of them can be wiped out through passage of bad legislation.

It's a simple and obvious fact that when Congress is under the control of bad legislators, reactionaries who want to turn back the clock, restrictive legislation results.

Your COPE dollar is aimed at the defeat of bad legislators, the election of good ones. It's that basic.

It's a matter of record that most anti-union candidates for political office have plenty of campaign funds to spend. They are generously supported by business and industrial interests hostile to trade unions. Corporation executives can give thousands of dollars to anti-union candidates, and many of them do.

Working people just don't have that kind of money. But there are millions of union members, and if each one gives a dollar to COPE—just two cents a week—that evens up the odds.

Just one dollar a year for COPE, the price of four packs of cigarettes. That's all COPE asks.

Every union member can afford such low-cost insurance for the gains he's made through collective bargaining. No union member can afford to be without such insurance.

You might ask yourself, "Why does COPE collect money from trade unionists in 'off-years'—when there will be no national or Congressional elections?"

The answer to that is very simple. It is this:

It will be necessary to build up a backlog of funds for use early in 1964 for Congressional races in that year.

Early Primaries in 1964

Many important elections will be held next year in the South. Now, nearly all political contests in the South are decided not by general elections in November, but by Democratic Party primary elections held anywhere from late winter and early spring through the summer. Whoever wins the Democratic nomination in the primary is, with extremely few exceptions, assured of election.

That is why it is doubly necessary that COPE be prepared well ahead of the '64 campaign itself. Many good, forward-looking candidates in Dixie will have to know before this year is out whether they will be financially able to make a try for the Senate or House of Representatives.

And there is only one place where liberals can look for help: Trade union members and their families and friends.

Who Won't Help

The oil companies won't help a liberal, but the oil worker can. The department store owner won't help, but the retail clerk can. The building contractor won't, but the lather can. The dress manufacturer won't; but the clothing worker can. The steel maker won't, but the steel worker can.

So, if you haven't seen your local COPE collector, do so TODAY.

It's never a mistake..

To tell a person how clever or smart or interesting he is.

To say "I don't know" if you really don't.

To ask the advice of an expert.

To take the time and trouble to put another person at ease.

To listen politely to a child.

To give an older person an expression of regard.

To praise your husband or wife for the good qualities you appreciate.

To let the host as well as the hostess know you had a fine time.

To tell a man you value his opinion.

To tell a parent something complimentary about his child.

To guess a woman's age as five years under what it could possibly be.

LATH LAUGHS

'So what if our product costs pennies to manufacture . . . Somebody has to pay for the tricky package design.'

A lawyer was reading the will of a multi-millionaire, recently deceased, to the surviving members of his family.

"And to my playboy son, Stanley, whom I promised to remember—'Hi there, Stan!' "

The drunk approached a stranger with the lament that he could not remember where he had parked his car.

"Why don't you take a bus?" inquired the stranger.

"No earthly use, old boy," replied the drunk. "It wouldn't go in my garage."

A young miss was walking down the street sporting one of those gosh-awful hairdos which women wear today. As she passed two men, one of them turned to the other and muttered: "Looks like her reprieve came through just as the warden pulled the switch."

"Wonderful sermon," purred the dignified old lady as she approached the pastor after services. "Everything you said applies to somebody or other I know."

"The boss sent me down after a pane of glass, ten by fourteen," said the workman to the hardware man.

"Well, Pat, I don't think I can give you a ten by fourteen, but I can give you a fourteen by ten if you think you can make that do."

"Just give me one of them, and I'll jist turn the sideways of it lengthways, and I don't believe the boss himself would ever know the difference."

The machine that once did away with horses is now well on the way to doing away with people.

A doctor was warning his patient that he should have regular habits. A hurt look in his eye, the man protested:

"But I do, I do!"

"Well," said the doctor, "how come I saw you with the luscious blonde at four o'clock the other morning?"

"Oh, that," replied the patient, "that is one of my regular habits."

A father turned to his daughter and said: "Your young man approached me this afternoon and asked for your hand, and I consented."

"But father," cried the daughter, "I don't want to leave mother."

"I quite understand," he said, "but don't let me stand in the way of your happiness—take your mother with you."

The cub salesman asked his boss if he could refund the money to an irate customer who had discovered that the lot he bought was under water.

"What kind of a salesman are you?" demanded the boss. "Go out there and sell him a motor boat."

A man was moving along a dimly lighted street when a stranger slipped from the shadows and stopped him. "What do you want?" asked the man nervously.

"Would you be so kind," asked the stranger plaintively, "as to help a poor unfortunate fellow who is hungry and out of work? All I have in this world is this gun."

"Fenwick, your suggestion has enabled the firm to save two million dollars during the past three months. Please accept our heartfelt thanks."

MEMORY

Do you forget to remember?

faces, facts and figures.*

OF ALL the people a secretary contacts, the most often called by far is Mr. I-don't-recall-his-name. Rare is the boss who doesn't ask a couple of times a day to "get me you-know, that fellow over at Smith and Company." Rare, too, is the secretary who does not recall you-know's name, and probably his telephone number and extension, and his wife's name and how many children he's got.

This illustrates perhaps the key fact about memory: that the way to get a good memory is to use it. The man who can't remember the name of his contact at the Smith Company just isn't trying; the girl who does recall his name is trying . . . as a matter of professional pride. But both of them have precisely the same equipment.

If you think you've got a poor memory, you're in for a surprise: your mind can store 600 memories per second for a lifetime of 75 years and still feel no strain. We've all got good memories; some of us are just not using ours well. For memory is like reading and writing—it works better with training and use.

Perhaps you'd like to be able to recall all the 'phone calls you've put through in one morning? Or maybe you'd just like to repeat the names of 50 people after meeting them for the first time and recall some personal detail about each? Well, this last is just one standard graduation exercise after only ten lessons at one New York memory training school! And with practice, you can even match the feat of one summer stock actor who managed to memorize a 110-page part perfectly on three days' notice.

How does he do it? Of course he uses a system. But that's not all. Memory systems can improve recall by 200% to 400%. But they won't do the work by magic. You'll never recall anything unless you've memorized it properly first. The classical "absent-minded professor" doesn't forget his umbrella as he leaves. He forgets it as he arrives!

Thus, the whole secret of a good memory is "remembering to remember"—concentrating on the details in the first place with the conscious idea that you'll want to recall them later. This holds good for telephone numbers or names or grocery lists. All the memory systems that have evolved over the past 400 years are based on the same principle.

There's no magic in it. The way in which memory works is well established. In a simplified form, when you think of Mr. Brown a series of electrical circuits or parkways open up in your mind. One leads to his telephone number; another to the job he does; yet a third of his address or to the way he looks. And every time those pathways are used they etch a little more deeply in the mind, are easier to use next time.

For memory can be trained just like any muscle. Just as you walk to keep yourself limber, so using the memory will keep it in top form. There are some tricks, however, to make the job simpler:

1. Concentrate on what you want to remember.

Every waking moment, the mind is absorbing impressions by sight, sound, touch, taste and smell. We'll forget 90% of them because our senses skim them. Quick—without looking—what's the color of the wall nearest you right now? You must be selective about what you want to remember—at least at the start, until memory becomes more of a habit. Then you must study it, play around with it, think about it.

2. Find a reason for remembering.

We all know small boys who struggle desperately with arithmetic . . . but can reel off baseball batting averages. Baseball makes sense to them, because they're interested. But what about that person you met at the party last week? Can you recall her name or her face? Probably not: you had no reason for remembering. But think of her dress or something you discussed that was of mutual interest. Chances are her name and her appearance will come back to your mind.

3. Repeat what you want to recall.

The young baseball statistician we mentioned before, according to psychologist William James, thinks often about baseball and each time, unconsciously, he reviews past games and scores. Repetition anchors the memory. If you're trying to remember a part in a company amateur dramatic show, you'll find that repetition anchors your lines. But instead of doing all the repeating in one day, spread it over several days; you'll fix the memory with less effort because it takes time to sink into your subconscious.

4. Don't write it down!

Memory becomes stronger with use; and every crutch makes it weaker. Take a chance next time you have something to remember . . . and trust your memory, instead of a slip of paper. Obviously, if you make a jotted note of a lunch date next week, you'll be less inclined to bear it in mind. Then, you're also less likely to look up the reminder in your notebook when the time comes! "Memory strengthens as you lay burden upon it," Thomas DeQuincy wrote, "and becomes trustworthy as you trust it."

5. Visualize an association around a notable feature.

The trick is to attach a handle to the memory before letting it sink into your brain. "That fat lady's name is Mrs. Ful(1)ton." When it comes to remembering names, for instance, try imagining Jack Warner sweating (warmer), Helen Hayes forking hay into a barn, Clark Gable mending a gabled roof. The more ridiculous the association, the better it works.

Magazine writer Maurice Zolotow once said that he reminds himself to mail letters by visualizing the friend to whom he has written sitting atop a mailbox. Then, when he passes the box, he "sees" his friend sitting on it . . . and drops in the letter!

6. Fit the memories into a pattern.

Try this trick next time you drive to the drugstore. Say you have to buy cigarettes, candy, powder, a magazine and toothpaste. To be sure of remembering each of these, think of the word "compact" and run through what it means a couple of times as you drive down. Then when you arrive, you'll buy candy, magazine, powder, cigarettes, toothpaste . . . all strung together in a pattern that links these otherwise unrelated items. If necessary, you could have a word or a short sentence to cover all of the items within each group.

You could create a pattern for a longer list—say a week's groceries by grouping all the dairy items, and all the vegetables, etc., so that the store's various counters are themselves your "chain" for recall. If necessary, you could have a word or a short sentence to cover all of the items within each group.

Try some of these devices. Before you know it, they'll become an unconscious habit. Then, suddenly, you're free—wonderfully free of the tyranny of the scribbled reminder—the shred of paper you can't afford to lose, the panic when you do!

Once you make a habit of remembering to remember, once you learn to trust your own memory, you'll find it gets easier and easier.

Yes, you can, too, be a memory wizard: you've got what it takes. ●

SATURDAY, March 2nd, 1963, saw the second Products Prevue presented by the St. Louis Lathing and Plastering Industry Council, manufacturers and material dealers.

Due to the success of the 1962 Prevue it was requested that this year's program be held.

All were most gratified by the manufacturers participation who displayed their products for the lathing and plastering contractors, their superintendents and their lead foremen to view. There were 15 table top displays.

The day started at 9:00 A.M., with an hour free to enjoy coffee and pastry. While this was being served it afforded an opportunity for all to renew friendships and to view the displays that were all in place and ready.

The morning session heard product presentations for National Gypsum Company by Mr. W. W. 'Wayman' Smith, Jr.; Tiger Brands Division of Gibsonburg Lime Products Company by Mr. Harry Rourke; Zonolite Company by Mr. John McEachern.

All broke at noon for a stop at the refreshment stand and then to a most delicious dinner, with time to again chat and view Table Top Displays.

The afternoon session started at 2:00 P.M., and in this period were products presentations for United States Gypsum Company by Mr. Jack Hayden; Metal Lath Association by Mr. Jack Fisher and Mr. Bill Heyward for St. Louis Lathing and Plastering Industry Council.

Addresses were given by Mr. Lloyd Mashburn, President of Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers International Union; Mr. Vince Lee, International Vice-President, Operative Plasterers' and Cement Masons' International Association and Mr. K. What do physical educators really teach your child?

The important role of physical educators in your child's total development embraces more—far more—than supervising simple exercises or coaching athletic teams. In fact, these teachers make many contributions to your child's education that are vital to his future.

It is the physical educator who largely instills in your son or daughter the will or the desire to work for fitness—physical and mental. Indeed, many of the good health habits and sound mental attitudes which you want for your child can best be developed under the guidance of a competent, qualified physical educator.

It is the teacher of physical education, too, who helps youngsters learn and appreciate the values of teamwork and self-discipline—factors of the utmost importance in shaping a child's character and personality.

In fact, the youngster who learns early in life how to discipline himself in those daily habits upon which his continued fitness largely depends—and how to conduct himself as a good citizen—acquires training that will be invaluable to his future.

Our children's physical fitness has declined sharply in recent years. It can be improved if more and more of our schools provide adequate programs for fitness under the direction of well-trained physical educators. Know and support your child's teacher of physical education—just as you know and support his teachers of the academic subjects.

NIGHT DRIVING IS DANGEROUS !

It's 20 per cent more dangerous to drive at night than during the daylight hours, even though traffic is usually lighter then, according to an expert on traffic safety. And, on the basis of mileage driven, night driving is two to three times more dangerous than daytime driving.

"Fatigue and sharply reduced vision are primarily responsible for this greater danger," he said in an advisory bulletin to motorists. "It is also true that drinking drivers are more likely to be on the road at night.

"The basic rule for safe night driving is never outrun your headlights. Your stopping distance should always be less than your sight distance. And the law requires that the light from your headlights shall be strong enough to see anyone or anything as much as 200 yards ahead of your car on the highway.

"Speeds of 50 miles an hour, safe and legal under good conditions in the daytime, may be unsafe and illegal at night. They are unsafe because, by the time your headlights reveal the danger, it may be too late to stop. They may be illegal under the basic provision of the speed statute which makes it unlawful to drive at a speed greater than is responsible and prudent under existing conditions.

"As a general rule keep your speed under 50 miles an hour at night. On curves and hills your speed should be even lower—low enough so that you are always able to stop within the range of your headlights."

Report from the

GENERAL PRESIDENT

IN previous Reports I have tried to keep you advised by giving you a running account of the affairs of the National Bureau for Lathing and Plastering. This also affects the Local Bureaus in which you are participating. I advised you that we had filed a petition for a Writ of Certiorari in the matter of the Paramount Case, which originated in Los Angeles, in which Judge Leon Yankwich decided that 302 of the Taft-Hartley Act would not permit participation of Labor on a joint committee where funds were contributed by the Employer for the purpose of promoting lath and plaster. We appealed this decision to the Ninth Circuit Court and the decision of Judge Yankwich was upheld. We then appealed the decision of the Ninth Circuit Court to the U. S. Supreme Court for a Writ of Certiorari and review. The Supreme Court refused to review the decision of the Ninth Circuit Court. This meant that the decision of the Ninth Circuit Court stands and Labor may not participate except in an advisory capacity in the Bureaus where funds are contributed by the Employer for the promotion of lathing and plastering.

As soon as this decision was rendered President Loyd Peterson and myself, as Secretary, called a meeting in Chicago. At this time action was taken that the Employer representatives on the Board of Governors would be the Trustees with Labor represented on the Board of Governors in an advisory capacity. This seemed to be the only thing to do in order to conform with the decision unless we wanted to dissolve the National Bureau as well as the Local Bureaus and no one wanted to do this since the Bureaus have been of great service to our industry.

While we encourage the continuation of the National and Local Bureaus, Labor may not strike for the purpose of forcing the National Bureau Clause, that we are all familiar with, into a collective bargaining agreement. If it can be done on a voluntary basis this would be all right. However, this creates a problem with contractors who refuse, voluntarily, to become a part of an agreement containing this clause since you may not strike to obtain the clause nor may you strike to enforce the clause even though it is in your agreement; particularly if you have a savings clause in your agreement which most local unions do as contained and set forth in the International sample Working Agreement which provides, generally, that if this agreement, or any part or parts of it, is declared illegal it must be renegotiated or eliminated. I, again, emphasize to the local unions that they should not strike in order to include our regular promotional clause in the contract nor should they strike to enforce contribution where any savings clause, such as the one set forth in the sample Working Agreement, is included.

It appears that our only solution to this problem in order to function jointly with the Employers, as we previously did, is legislation amending Section 302 and 8(3)b of the Taft-Hartley Act. This legislation has been introduced but, as yet, we have not had a hearing of the House Labor Committee; and we have not proposed such a hearing because a number of other sub-trade organizations, both Employer and Employee, are interested in this legislation and until such time as we have them together to reach an agreement on the Bills with those who are in favor of and interested in this legislation we do not intend to ask for a hearing. We believe there are a number of sub-trades, Employer and Employee organizations, that we can get to reach an agreement on the Bills submitted. As soon as this is done we will, again, be writing to you to ask you to have your Congressmen and Senators support these measures.

We encourage the Local Bureaus to continue to function on a Trusteeship basis and since it is illegal for Labor to participate, except in an advisory capacity, it is my opinion that wherever we have officers, members of Labor, of the Local Bureau they should resign as such officer, particularly the office of Treasurer.

It is with deep regret that I make this report since I have spent ten years, personally, serving the National Bureau as an officer and a member of the Board of Governors and I believe that the National and Local Bureaus have done an outstanding job in the promotion of the industry; but we must comply with the law in all respects and hope that we will be successful in passing amendments to the Taft-Hartley Act which will permit us to return on a joint participation basis.

For your information, Ed Venzie of Philadelphia is Chairman of the Board of Trustees with J. Carroll Duncan and George H. Brueggeman also as Trustees with Loyd Peterson, Contractor, as Advisor to the Trustees. Representing Labor in an advisory capacity are Edward J. Leonard, General President of the Plasterers, Thomas F. Murphy, Secretary of the Bricklayers, and myself. Since we do not at the present time have a Director any communication should be directed to the National Bureau office and it will be handled by Miss Jeanne Rethwill, Office Manager.

Faternally yours,

Prefabbed panels in place where truss extends beyond the central luminous ceiling of the Air Terminal Building.

Prefabrication Beats Sub-Zero Weather

MORE efficient all-weather operation was attained by the lathing contractor of the new $10 million Air Terminal Building, International Airport, Winnipeg, Canada, through on-site shop prefabbing of 152 metal lath panels, 15 ft. wide and 8 ft. 9 in. high.

The Air Terminal is 106 ft. wide and 481 ft. long. Twenty rugged trusses 24 ft. on center span the width 46 ft. above the floor. These trusses are almost 9 ft. from the top to the bottom chord, and are braced by several rows of bridging. Two rows are full-truss type and run the length of the structure at mid-span. Two rows, about 15 ft. in from each side-wall, are lower chord bracing only. There is perimeter bracing in addition. To accommodate a central catwalk that runs the length of the building for access to mechanical equipment, the main trusses are open in the area between the two rows of bridging at mid-span. This area is 46 ft. wide and has a luminous ceiling suspended below the trusses and the catwalk.

When lathing started in the winter of 1961-62, the building was still open to the bitter cold. The steel members of the bridging system and the trusses in the center area had to be wrapped with metal lath and plastered individually. However, lath-ing contractor Halldor Sigurdson & Son, Ltd., Winnipeg, decided it would be more efficient to prefab in their shop enough panels to enclose the 30 ft. of structural steel at each end of the trusses. This would keep lathers busy in relative comfort and allow the job to proceed when temperatures dropped to 20 and 30 degrees below zero.

The panels consist of $\frac{3}{4}$ " channels that run vertically and are spaced 12" apart, three $1\frac{1}{2}$ " channels that run horizontally about 34" apart, and 3.4 diamond mesh metal lath wire tied to the $\frac{3}{4}$ " channels. They were made on a jig in a shop set up at the site. As they were finished, the panels were stock-piled outside the shop and were tied to the trusses when the weather moderated.

Two panels were used on each side at each end of a truss—a total of eight panels per truss. The panels abut the upper and lower flanges of the I-beam chords, and were tied together from each side on the $\frac{3}{4}$ " channels with No. 8 gage wire. The bottom soffit of the trusses was wrapped with metal lath and plastered.

The vermiculite plaster was machine-applied in two coats to a $\frac{5}{8}$ " thickness on the sides of the truss, $1\frac{1}{2}$ " on the bottom soffit. Cross-bridging members have a $1\frac{1}{2}$ " thickness applied manually.

Where the truss shapes are visible on each side of the luminous ceiling, they will be clad with baked enamel steel paneling. This 30-foot-wide strip on each side of the luminous ceiling will have a ceiling of metal lath and vermiculite acoustic plastic suspended about six feet higher than the luminous portion. The total effect should present an interesting combination of materials and textures.

Green-Blankstein-Russell Associates are the architects. The general contractor is Commonwealth Construction Company. Both are Winnipeg firms.

Union Eye Care Expands in Northwestern Ohio

Union folks around Northwestern Ohio like the glasses and the prices available at Union Eye Care Center, Inc., so the all-union owned enterprise is doubling its facilities to bring its services within easy driving range of all.

Simultaneous grand openings are planned for May 6 for new eye care centers in Cleveland's east side and on the highway between nearby Lorain and Elyria. Union Eye Care already has centers in downtown Cleveland and on the city's west side.

The step was taken to bring first quality glasses not only within the financial reach but also within easy driving range of the 200,000 union members whose locals and lodges own the enterprise.

Doubling the size of the operation is taking a lot of planning, but Union Eye Care's all-union executive board, after a careful survey, determined the need was there and decided to move ahead.

Helping make the expansion possible was the response of Local 2, L.I.U., subscribing member to the corporation.

Like similar enterprises in other cities, Union Eye Care Center has as its goal providing union members and their families with first quality glasses at the lowest possible price.

A centralized switchboard will serve all three of the outlets in Cleveland while the Lorain-Elyria center will have a telephone connection with each of the phone systems in these neighboring cities. To avoid needless waiting, service is by appointment only, except for repairs.

All four centers will carry a huge selection of frames. Each will be tastefully furnished for the comfort of members and their families. All will lease space to licensed optometrists and all will be equipped to handle emergency repairs.

Union Eye Care Center, Inc., got started five years ago when a group of union leaders decided to launch the enterprise. Stock was sold to participating unions on the basis of 25-cents a member.

Any local union wishing to give its members and their families the chance to make substantial savings on glasses may join.

St. Louis Lather Receives Award

The St. Louis Chapter of the American Institute of Architects, at their Annual Craftsmanship dinner honored one of our journeyman lathers and one of our journeyman plasterers at this event.

Various members of the building trades are recognized at this annual event. The craftsman must be recommended by a member of the AIA Chapter. The man's work is viewed and judged by members of the Award Committee and then he is finally approved or disapproved for the award.

The journeymen of our industry so honored were: Joseph P. Cook, lather employed by the firm of George Stroup Lathing Company and Thomas L. Hart, plasterer, employed by the firm of Harry Huskey.

Joe Cook was recommended by the architectural firm of Kramer and Harms, Tom Hart was recommended by the architectural firm of Pearce and Pearce.

The Craftsmanship award plaque read as follows:

"The St. Louis Chapter of The American Institute of Architects presents this certificate of Award to (name) for Superior Craftsmanship as a (plasterer or lather)."

We are real proud of these two men and say congratulations to them and the many other fine journeymen of our industry.

HAMBURGERS and marblecrete might not seem compatible and for a combination to eat they are not recommended; however, if you're in the business to attract and sell hamburgers to thousands of customers, marblecrete may be the answer to your problem. At least Anne and Max Penner, owners of Art's Hamburgers at North Seventh Street and Cave Creek Road, Sunnyslope, Arizona, think so.

The Penner's success with marble-have been attracted to the place since the sign was erected. When they stop to admire the sign, and to take pictures—the base makes a perfect place to hoist the little ones and get set for color snapshots—they buy hamburgers. Mrs. Penner has ample cause to enjoy the marblecrete for several reasons. First of all, she says, is that it's most attractive and easy to work around. We keep the outside clean just by hosing down, and it looks like new. We think the rough textured surface is vandal-proof since the kids can't make marks with pencils, crayons and lipstick.

Our sign was most economical, says Penner, costing about $1,500 for the total including all electrical work and floodlights for the sign and parking area. Howard Erb, Phoenix, was the plastering contractor.

We are so pleased with marblecrete as a building material that we plan to use it when we build our series of three-plexes, says Penner.

Marblecrete Sign Good for Business

crete on the front and sides of their eating establishment led them to suggest the possibility of a sign of the same material to advertise the restaurant.

After preliminary plans were approved, construction started on the sign. The base is 8 ft. in diameter and 26 in. high. To form this, $\frac{3}{4}$ -in. angles were driven in the ground with metal lath wire-tied in place. The center of the sign is supported by an 8-in. steel pipe set 4 feet in the ground in concrete. Splayed supports of $1\frac{1}{2}$ -in. light iron were extended from four points of the circular base, bent to a semi-radius and tied to the sign proper.

The sign is 8-in. thick and 5-ft. high and measures 10-ft. across. All of the sign is built up of $\frac{3}{4}$ -in. light iron. The sign and base were given a scratch coat of cement plaster doubled up to a $\frac{3}{4}$ -in. thickness. The circular base was then prepared with a $\frac{3}{8}$ -in. red color coat of exterior portland cement plaster for imbedding darker red chips of quartz aggregate. The standard and sign were given a final $\frac{3}{8}$ -in. coat of white portland cement for the number 2 and number 3 white quartz aggregate. The diamond theme in the sign is made of red color in the bedding coat with red quartz. All letters were cut from masonite. After drying, a coat of desco glaze was sprayed on followed by ground sparkle sprayed into the wet glaze.

The owners are extremely pleased with their marblecrete sign and marblecrete building improvements. Max Penner says that many new customers

Ask your U.S.G. Man to show you the EYE-POPPING TEST! This eye-dropper demonstration by your U.S.G. Representative proves ROCKLATH Plaster Base is your best choice—SAVES YOU MORE TIME AND MONEY.

HERE'S HOW THE 2-WAY ACTION of ROCKLATH face paper gives you better plastering: (1) Moisture-Blotter Action of three outer layers takes up moisture from mix—does it so uniformly, and so quickly, your plaster takes on “anti-slump” strength before it can slide; (2) Moisture-Barrier Action of three inner layers repels moisture—prevents it from softening the gypsum core, so ROCKLATH doesn't sag.

Thus, ROCKLATH gives you effective control of slide, freedom from sag, a bonus in better bonding—smoother plastering, more saving of time and money than you get with any other plaster base. And remember: plaster base is ROCKLATH only when it's made by United States Gypsum.

ALL ABOUT Churches

Early Christian churches were low, fort-like structures, built of stone and timber. Support of roofs and ceilings was made possible only by extremely thick walls. Windows and doors were small and few. Short columns cluttered the dark and gloomy interiors of these early medieval churches.

As masonry construction improved in the late middle ages, churches grew taller, more graceful. Gothic churches such as Amiens cathedral in France were high-ceilinged and spacious, with natural light pouring through many windows.

Modern building materials, such as metal, glass and concrete, have forged a revolution in church architecture. Plaster-covered metal lath has enabled architects to design beautiful low-cost, durable modern houses of worship.

"All About Churches" is the title of the second in a series of educational line drawings which the Metal Lath Association is distributing to newspapers across the nation. Through the use of simple drawings and brief captions, the current release traces the changes in church design and construction from the low fort-like structures that were early Christian churches to the highly diverse and imaginative concepts of today's places of worship.

Fisher Resigns, Parker Named MLA Director

Richard N. Parker has been elected managing director of the Metal Lath Association, Cleveland, following the resignation of Jack Fisher, who had been with the Association for ten years. Mr. Fisher was for six of these years the technical director, and was managing director for the last four years. Contacted at the Cleveland headquarters of the Association, Mr. Fisher explained that he had resigned in order to devote more time to his personal interests. He is a graduate of Rochester Institute of Technology where he majored in architecture.

During the decade that he was affiliated with the Metal Lath Association, Mr. Fisher reported, "I was privileged to see the industry make some of its most exciting advances, including the development and acceptance of metal lath and plaster membrane fireproofing of steel buildings, the design and construction of thin shell metal lath and portland cement plaster structures and the reawakening of demand for exterior stucco through the use of qualified materials and improved techniques of application over metal lath. With the increasing construction of commercial buildings, with the present day research on development of durable and economical metal lath and plaster assemblies, the use of the material will increase over the years.

"The industry is sparked with enthusiasm that has resulted in the development of new metal lath accessories, as well as the development of new applications," he concluded. Mr. and Mrs. Fisher and their daughter, Nanette, reside at 3866 Washington Boulevard, University Heights, Ohio.

Jack Fisher, after ten years with the Metal Lath Association—the last four as managing director—has resigned to devote more time to his personal interests. He will continue as a consultant to the Association.

APPRENTICE FUND GROWS

The first contribution to the Apprentice Fund from South Bend, Indiana was received May 3, 1962. This was a result of the latest negotiations between Local 82 of South Bend and the Contractors agreeing to one-cent per hour per member and apprentice into the National Lathing Industry's Joint Apprenticeship Fund.

We wish to thank the local for negotiating this contribution, and the Contractors for making the contributions. Each local that can negotiate one-cent per hour for the Apprentice Fund will add to the success, and operation of this Fund.

Work is presently being done in conjunction with the Apprentice Section of the Labor Department toward arranging for, and developing an Instructors' Manual, and a Text Book to be used in the Apprentice Program. We urge all of our locals to negotiate the one-cent per hour in order that we may develop a uniform Apprentice Program throughout the United States, and Canada, and so that we can make the necessary material available for apprentice training through the National Lathing Industry's Joint Apprenticeship Fund.

Mr. Parker, a civil engineering graduate of Ohio State University has been with the Metal Lath Association for four years, serving successively as technical representative and technical director. In his work for the Association, he has been responsible for the technical administration and related assignments. He has also conducted fire, impact, load, shear and sound tests. Mr. Parker will assume the duties of managing director on June 1, 1963. Mr. Fisher will continue as a consultant.

Richard N. Parker, who has been elected managing director of the Metal Lath Association, was formerly technical director of that organization. He will assume the duties of managing director on June 1, 1963.

Report from the

GENERAL SECRETARY-TREASURER

Every Vote Counts—So Does Every Dollar

IN THE same sense that every single vote counts in an election, every single dollar counts. That's why the COPE Dollar, the voluntary dollar that you contribute to the AFL-CIO Committee on Political Education, is so important.

Soon you will be asked by your local union to make your contribution. I as your General Secretary-Treasurer know full well the importance of each and every dollar. Here in the nation's capital, we see first hand what our friends and foes are doing in the Halls of Congress. We also see what employer groups such as the National Association of Manufacturers, Chamber of Commerce, etc. are doing to hinder our progress.

The COPE Dollar goes to help friendly candidates for the U. S. Senate and House of Representatives who will support progressive laws that are good for working people and oppose restrictive laws that would hurt working people. It's that simple.

The blunt fact is, our friends have nowhere else to turn for financial aid than to the labor movement. On the other hand, their conservative opponents are backed up by the vast funds of big business, big industry and big finance.

COPE Dollars often can spell the difference between victory and defeat for a liberal candidate. Let's take a look at the crucial role they play in close elections.

In Minnesota in 1962, longtime incumbent Walter Judd, an ultra-conservative, was defeated for the House by liberal Donald Fraser. Fraser won just 51.8 percent of the vote. In Ohio, liberal Bob Secrest dumped reactionary Rep. Tom Moorehead, winning 51.1 percent of the vote. In Indiana, Birch Bayh won the race for the Senate, defeating four-term Homer Capehart, a down-the-line conservative. Bayh captured only 50.3 percent of the vote. And in South Dakota, progressive George McGovern just nudged right-winger Joe Bottum with 50.1 percent of the vote.

These liberal candidates, and many others like them, are the type of men who are helped in their campaigns by the COPE voluntary dollar.

Without that dollar, they might well have lost.

In short, without that dollar, we might now have the most reactionary Congress in years.

I can only strongly urge you to make your contribution. I know that the dollar asked by COPE can well be afforded. It will pay dividends to all of us who work for a living.

MODERNIZING CONGRESS

by Senator Hubert H. Humphrey

Since the end of the 87th Congress last October, there have been increasingly strident pleas and demands in Washington and throughout the country that "Congress modernize itself."

I agree and I am hopeful that one of the major efforts of the 88th Congress will be a legislative reorganization act which will enable the Senate and the House of Representatives to meet the nation's domestic obligations and international responsibilities more efficiently.

The waning weeks of the 87th Congress last year were significant for three reasons—all of which should be considered in any discussion of the need to "modernize" Congress.

First, the 1962 congressional session was one of the longest peacetime sessions in history.

Second, the 87th Congress approved more major legislation than at any time since the 1930s.

Third, the long delays and petty bickering which marked the final weeks of the 1962 session obscured the real record of accomplishment of the 87th Congress and cut into the confidence of the people in the legislative branch of their government.

The length of the 1962 congressional session is often cited as one of the glaring examples of congressional backwardness and is mentioned as dramatic proof of the need to modernize Congress.

This is misleading. Whether we like it or not, long congressional sessions will remain common. Members of the Senate and the House, and the public, must realize that Congress today has a full-time-year-long job.

The reason is a matter of simple mathematics. Since 1946—the time of the last Legislative Reorganization Act—the population of the United States has increased 33 percent. Our government's domestic obligations have multiplied. Our nation's international responsibilities have become constant, instead of occasional.

But in the same period, the number of members of Congress has remained substantially the same.

The result is that there is today far more for Congress to do, but only the same number of members to do it. It is thus inevitable that members of Congress must work harder, for longer hours and through longer sessions of Congress.

As the flow of demands on Congress has increased, so has the flow of legislation.

In the Congress which approved the last legislative reform (the 79th, in 1945 and 1946), less than 13,000 bills or resolutions were initiated.

The 87th Congress which ended last year initiated, by contrast, more than 20,000 bills or resolutions—a 60 percent increase.

The total of major bills actually passed by Congress has also increased in the past decade.

The 87th Congress approved 73 major legislative proposals. The 83rd Congress, representing the first two years of the Eisenhower Administration, approved 29 major legislative proposals. The number of public bills approved by the 87th Congress was about double the number of public bills approved by the 83rd Congress.

I pause briefly here to stress a positive point. In all the criticisms of Congress, we must face the fact that the most recent Congress—the 87th—did produce an impressive record of legislation.

Here are just some of the domestic programs approved in 1961 and 1962:

The area redevelopment program, investment tax credit, public works acceleration, increase of minimum wage, manpower training to give new skills to the unemployed, an expanded loan program for college students, an increase of the lending authority for both the Small Business Administration and the Farmers Home Administration.

Also approved were liberalized social security benefits, revision of public welfare programs (with emphasis on rehabilitation), the most comprehensive housing program in our history, water pollution control, the Federal Airport Act, two comprehensive farm bills, the drug control bill and extension of the Civil Rights Commission.

On legislation relating to international relations, the record of the 87th Congress was equally impressive. Here are some of the actions of that Congress on the international front:

A 20 percent increase in funds for defense forces, including a doubling of the Polaris missile program and a fourfold increase in anti-guerrilla forces, a 200 percent increase in our budget for space programs and the Communications Satellite Act.

Other key actions included the Trade Expansion Act (the most important new foreign policy tool in 15 years), the Peace Corps (established in 1961 and expanded in 1962), the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, the Alliance for Progress, approval of longterm foreign aid, expansion of the Food for Peace program, approval of the United Nations bond issue and strengthening of the United States Information Agency.

I cite the record of the 87th Congress not as a boast, but to place any criticism of the structure, procedures and approach of Congress in proper perspective.

The basic problem is not the length of congressional sessions. It is not in the amount of legislation handled or approved.

The problem rests partly with the way in which members of Congress spend the time they do have.

A common complaint of members of Congress is that they "don't have time to be legislators."

It is a conservative estimate that every member of Congress spends more than half of his time in direct service to constituents. Many members of both the Senate and the House spend up to 90 percent of their time (and the time of their staffs) answering mail, meeting with constituents and handling individual constituent complaints or requests.

The volume of work involving direct service to constituents has increased sharply in recent years—for two reasons. First, as government has grown bigger and less able to respond to individual needs and complaints, the average citizen has become aware that he can "get through" with his own request only by dealing with his individual congressman or senator. Second, speedy air travel and campaigns to "write your Congressman" have caused a big increase in the flow of visitors and mail to congressional offices.

My own experience can stand as an example.

In my first year in the Senate—1949—an average of 150 letters were received each day. Today, the daily average is between 800 and 1,000 letters. In 1949, 30 telephone calls was typical for one day. Today, 500 phone calls to my office are normal in one day. In 1949, a personal visit to the office by a constituent was a special event. Today, more than 100 citizens visit my office each day, about half of them constituents from my home state of Minnesota.

The member of the Senate or the House does not complain about this pattern. He accepts the heavy constituent workload as a natural part of his job. Nothing can be done—or should be done—to reduce it.

But the remaining time a congressman has can be used more efficiently to handle his legislative duties.

Several steps are possible and they should be taken soon if members of Congress are to be able to have enough time to study the issues they face carefully and to act—and vote—wisely.

First, there should be more joint meetings of congressional committees and subcommittees. Too often, a senator or congressman serving on more than one committee must hear substantially the same testimony repeated at different times before two different committees.

Second, there should be more standing joint committees of Congress. This would save the time of Congress as a whole, especially towards the end of each session when late-rising differences between the Senate and House on legislation often stall the work of both bodies.

Third, a change should be made in the "morning hour" in the Senate to permit members to send their speeches or articles to the clerk for insertion in The Congressional Record, without taking their own time and the time of the whole Senate for the speeches to be read word-by-word.

Fourth, there should be application of the "rule of germaneness" to the Senate, to require members to restrict their remarks to the issue formally listed as the business of the Senate.

Fifth, there should be more efficient scheduling of the workdays of Congress. Specific days—particularly in the earlier months of the session—would be reserved exclusively for committee hearings and action. As the legislation begins to flow out of the committees, more days would be reserved exclusively for debate and action by the full Senate and House.

One additional change would, I am convinced, improve the efficiency of Congress—particularly in the later months of the session: a summer recess of at least three weeks.

The immediate value of such a recess would be the opportunity for members of Congress to spend some time with their families during the school vacation period and to visit their home states or districts for renewed contacts with constituents.

Congressmen are human beings; they get tired and their nerves can become frayed from long months of pressure and hard work. I am convinced the change of pace of a summer recess would reduce the tensions and bickering which are now so common in the final few months of congressional sessions.

The second key problem in Congress today involves the divisions of congressional power and the lines of authority for specific issues on which Congress is called to legislate.

The first several weeks of the 88th Congress, in the Senate, were spent in an attempt to modify one antiquated device of power—the filibuster.

Liberals in the Senate sought to reduce from two-thirds to three-fifths or a 51-vote majority the number of votes necessary for cloture—the closing off of a debate to bring an issue to a final decision.

Our effort was not to establish a "gag rule" on debate nor was it to quash the rights of the minority in the Senate.

Our proposal included the assurance of adequate time for debate on any legislative issue. It assured the rights of the minority in the Senate.

But it also called for the basic right of a majority of the Senate to decide an issue—to cast a "yea" or "no" vote—after a reasonable period of full and free debate.

The efforts of liberals to amend Rule 22 and to place the filibuster under control in the Senate did not succeed this year.

We were set back, but not defeated. The test vote found 54 members—a clear majority—joining the group seeking the change. This was shy of the two-thirds vote necessary. But it offered new and encouraging evidence of a pattern towards victory on this issue. Ten years ago, Senate liberals could muster only 19 votes in support of a change in Rule 22.

Another major defect in the congressional structure involves the lineup of committees in Congress.

There were two weeks of confusion in 1961 after I introduced a bill to establish a United States Arms Control and Disarmament Agency. The measure was first assigned to the Foreign Relations Committee, then switched to the Government Operations Committee, then back to Foreign Relations. On one day, it almost went to Armed Services Committee for consideration.

The bill was finally debated and approved, but the delay was an example of the need for more clearly defined lines of authority in the congressional committee system.

One specific suggestion I have advanced is the establishment of a Joint Committee on National Security Affairs.

Today, as an example, the subject of nuclear test ban proposals involves the Foreign Relations Committee, the Armed Services Committee and the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy. This crucial issue need not bypass any of those committees. But there should be one central committee which can seek to harmonize the various viewpoints of the other committees into a basic consideration of the national security issue involved.

My comments have touched on only a few of the specific problems and needs in Congress. There are many more.

What is clearly needed is a complete and detailed review of the overall structure and workings of Congress—and a set of recommendations to improve the efficiency of Congress.

A resolution sponsored by Senator Joseph Clark (D-Pa.) and 31 other senators of both political parties calls for a "Joint Committee on the Organization of Congress." A companion measure in the House agrees this committee should conduct a full review of the legislative branch and produce recommendation for change.

I am hopeful that this resolution will be adopted and that the joint committee can begin its work soon. A review and reorganization of Congress is long overdue.

Congress must update its procedures. In a free nation with a representative government, we cannot expect total order and absolute efficiency in the legislative branch. But we can expect—and must demand—a congressional system willing and able to remain responsive to a fastchanging nation and world.

The Trouble With Congress

ABC television commentator Howard K. Smith, in his March 3rd program, discussed "The Trouble With Congress" with senators of both parties and with political observers. While a few felt Congress is representative of the people, the prevailing view was that it is not and is out of touch with urban America—worse, that its drift could bring the nation to disaster.

Smith opened by saying "The United States at present is involved in a wastage of its human resources that no other major nation, free or communist, is permitting itself." Smith cited the nation's 6 percent unemployment, 15 to 20 percent idle plant capacity, the resulting $30 billion a year in lost wealth, the 30 to 40 million Americans in poverty and despair, the 750,000 school dropouts each year, the 250,000 top-level high school graduates who fail to go on to college for lack of funds or motivation, the rising crime rate.

Following are excerpts on the exchange between Smith and Professor James MacGregor Burns, author of "The Deadlock of Democracy."

Smith: Now, how is it exactly that Congress is kept in a negative frame of mind in a nation that requires so much affirmative action?

Prof. Burns: It's kept this way by all of us—by all of us who feel that the (constitutional) checks and balances are the only way to run a nation. It is one way to run a nation, but we tolerate a rather old-fashioned system of government and are not very willing to modernize it. So a lot of us passively accept it. Secondly, it's kept this way by the hundreds of one-party districts in this country—one-party districts especially in the election of representatives to the House of Representatives. And then, third: the gerrymandering, which means, practically speaking, that the House of Representatives greatly overrepresents the rural dwellers in this country; the city dwellers get cheated in the way that the districts are drawn. And then fourthly, we have the system because the machinery of Congress perpetuates it. We've recently seen a good example in the filibuster rule as a result of the power of those who benefit from the filibuster rule, and for some reason wish to keep it.

Smith: Now many people say that Congress today represents the conservative mood of the nation, but in your book you say it's not really conservatism it represents so much as the negative, sterile, conformist, small-town establishment of the nation . . . Paradoxically, there are probably more outstanding and capable individuals in Congress today than at any time in its history. Unless they find a way to break the institution's deepening negativism, the nation is in longterm danger . . . History shows Congress needs a fighting President to stimulate it. The present President has seemed to let one piece of urgent legislation after another go down to defeat in Congress with barely a protest. . . .

Prof. Burns: I think that's a correct impression and I think where Mr. Kennedy is mistaken. I think he should make it clear how he feels about the legislation that goes down the drain. Otherwise, he gives a false impression. He gives the impression that he doesn't care deeply about the legislation and I know that he does care about the legislation. And I think he won't have the real impact on the people that he wants until the day comes that he's not only on television, but he's on television fighting mad—telling the people what's going on here—just as Harry Truman did so effectively in 1948.

Federal Aid to School Construction Modified—A modification has been announced in the arrangements for the federal Government's contribution toward provincial expenditures in respect to technical and vocational training construction projects under the Technical and Vocational Training Assistance Act. The 75-per-cent federal contribution will now apply to that part of the construction carried out before October 1, 1963 on approved projects for which contracts have been awarded before April 1, 1963.

This is similar to a provision made last fall covering the purchase and installation of equipment in technical and vocational schools.

Before the modification, the federal contribution was scheduled to be reduced on April 1 from 75 to 50 per cent.

The Minister of Labour said, when announcing the modification, that the main purpose of the contribution of 75 per cent during the initial period of the joint-federal-provincial agreement was to stimulate the development of much needed training facilities. In spite of their best efforts, some provinces have been unable to make as much progress in developing their new training facilities and thus it is desirable to have the 75-per-cent federal contribution apply over a further six-month period.

Up to mid-February, federal approval had been given for new construction on 468 technical and vocational high schools, institutes of technology and trade schools across Canada. These facilities will provide accommodation for 130,000 students.

The estimated cost of these projects, additions, alterations and equipment will be in excess of $457,000,000, of which the federal Government contribution totals $292,000,000.

Human Rights Award to CLC President—The Jewish Labour Committee of Canada presented a plaque to CLC President Claude Jodoin to honour him personally and to bring to public attention the efforts of the trade union movement in Canada in the promotion of human rights. The CLC president, in accepting the award at a dinner in Montreal said, "This award belongs to the whole labour movement and all those men and women who worked to further those principles of equality and justice in which we all believe. It belongs to the Jewish Labour Committee which has pioneered in this field in Canada."

Industrial Relations Conference Planned—The establishment of a planning committee to organize the British Columbia Conference on Industrial Relations was announced last month. The holding of the conference, on June 26-28, was announced in the Speech from the Throne in the provincial Legislature.

The planning committee consists of representatives of trade unions, employers organizations, the University of British Columbia, and the provincial Department of Labour. Dr. J. T. Montague, formerly of the federal Department of Labour, and now Director of the Industrial Relations Institute of the University of British Columbia, is one of the members of the planning committee.

Hon. L. R. Peterson, Minister of Labour for British Columbia, said in speaking before the Legislature on the subject that the purpose of the conference was to bring together representatives of management and labour to discuss their common problems in collective bargaining at a time other than during such bargaining, and to hear the views of speakers who have a special knowledge of the subject.

The purpose and objectives of the conference will be: (1) To identify the objectives of collective bargaining; (2) To identify areas of co-operation between government, labour, and industry with respect to industrial relations in British Columbia; and (3) To identify possible studies and co-operative programs.

Representatives of trade unions, employers, employers organizations, and other interested parties are being invited to attend.

Other members of the planning committee are: R. B. McDonnell, representing the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, (B.C. Division); E. P. O'Neal, representing the British Columbia Federation of Labour; R. K. Gervin, representing the Vancouver Builders Exchange; H. F. Taft, representing the Vancouver and New Westminster and District Building and Construction Trades Council; John Billings, representing Forest Industrial Relations Limited; and F. Fieber, representing the International Woodworkers of America.

Living Costs Up—Living costs inched upward again in December, 1962; the index, based on 1949 equalling 100, touched 132 in December compared with 131.9 a month earlier.

Living costs rose in eight of 10 selected Canadian cities. One city showed a drop—Winnipeg. Others—Saskatoon and Regina—were unchanged. Higher food prices were the cause.

MLA Prexy Traces Versatility of Metal Lath, Foresees Fine Future

Drawing for analogy upon its versatility and vigor in meeting and solving a broad variety of construction problems, Gordon W. Matthews, President, Metal Lath Association, likened metal lath to a youth who is just coming into his prime, even though the product will be 125 years old next year. Speaking before architectural, building and fire fighting officials of the State of California and the City of San Francisco, and representatives of the architectural and building magazines and daily papers, Mr. Matthews drew the parallel while tracing the development and estimating the rising potentials for the plaster basing material. The occasion was a meeting of the Metal Lath Association, Clift Hotel, San Francisco, April 24-25.

"Today," he pointed out, "after a post war acceptance of other construction techniques that appeared to be quick, slick and low cost, the long range values of metal lath and plaster are again attracting consumers, builders and architects." Mr. Matthews quoted the record of metal lath and plaster assemblies with respect to fire and shock resistance and cited several of the highly diversified uses to which it has been put advantageously in outstanding buildings. "Metal lath is being used in the new as well as the old, in imaginative shapes as well as in the traditional—in Pier Nervi's thin shell concrete domes, as well as in the cosmetic resurfacing of old walls.

"Next February 22," he concluded, "metal lath will share an anniversary with George Washington. It will be the 125th for metal lath, and in the light of the versatility and vigor of the product, it will be an anniversary of youth, with its greatest potential for growth still in the future."

Chief Albert Hayes, Division of Fire Prevention and Investigation, San Francisco Fire Department, emphasizes the importance of fire resistive construction while talking with Gordon Matthews, president, Metal Lath Association, and Lt. Peter Foley, also of the Division of Fire Prevention and Investigation.

Alfred Goldberg, left, of the Bureau of Building Inspection, City and County of San Francisco, must have raised a thought-provoking argument, judging by the expression on the face of Gordon W. Matthews, center, president of the Metal Lath Association. An interested participant in the three-way exchange was Fred W. Cheesbrough, of the School House Section, California State Division of Architecture. They were seen in conversation after Matthews had discussed the promising record of metal lath, its reception for fire prevention and building officials and the press, during the quarterly meeting of the Association, at the Clift Hotel, San Francisco, April 24th and 25th.

Right Material Reduces School Building Costs

Savings in school construction costs of more than $4 per square foot below the regional average were accomplished in the designing of the Pinnacle Hill School, Rochester, New York.

This is reported in an Architectural Record story, published in the magazine's March issue, which revealed that the savings resulted from the use of metal lath and plaster partitions and long-span tensioned concrete block planks.

The school, which was occupied at the beginning of the 1962-63 school year, was designed by Detlev Kohlstaedt of Stickney & Kohnoff, Rochester architects, who ascribes the savings to lightweight partitions of metal lath and plaster which eliminated the need for columns or bearing walls beneath each run of partition. Contributions Appreciated

In the April issue of "The Lather" we had published an "In Appreciation" on behalf of Local 42, and Brother William F. Ferre, Sr., #24642, who has since passed away. We have been requested by Mrs. Leone Ferre to express her gratitude, and thanks for the contributions made by the locals, and councils in reference to this request. All contributions were greatly appreciated by both Mrs. Ferre, and her late husband.

dition, pipes and wiring were completely concealed within the partitions.

Mr. Kohlstaedt has told the Metal Lath Association that the quality of the construction was of the highest and, even though produced more economically than the average, included many "plus features." Not the least of these is the long range economy realized through the use of durable metal lath and plaster fire resistant partitions.

Lightweight metal lath partitions avoided the need for intermediate support of precast slabs at the Pinnacle School, Rochester, New York.

Construction Time On Milwaukee

A LATHING and plastering contractor was able to reduce two weeks from construction time by on-the-job fabrication of channel iron and production line installation of diamond mesh metal lath in Milwaukee's new $17 million 22-story Marine Plaza Office Building.

The exterior of the 84 by 252 foot building consists of spandrelite glass in aluminum frames accentuated by vertical columns of stainless steel. Diamond mesh metal lath and plaster were used throughout the 450,000 square foot floor area interior for column and mullion panels at exterior walls. It was used for suspended ceilings, column fireproofing, hollow partitions with prefabricated metal studs and for an extensive arrangement of light troughs.

Idea for prefabrication and production-line techniques was developed by the lathing and plastering contractor Richard J. Champeau, Inc., after lathing was held up two weeks by delays in the construction schedule. But the Champeau-developed technique enabled the lathers to pick up the two weeks and to finish the lathing on the scheduled completion date.

Since units to be lathed were repeated uniformly from floor to floor the Milwaukee lathing and plastering contractor was able to effect savings in time by modular style cutting, fitting, and erecting of prefabricated framework for each typical area.

Forty-two lathers were organized into separate crews, each of which worked on one specialized type of fabrication and installation procedure. One operated a frame assembly line consisting of a channel cutter and jig table. Channels were cut into four standard lengths required for each frame, the parts assembled, squared in the jig and wire-tied together. The second crew installed the frames. A third crew followed with the metal lath and in turn, was followed by the last crew who installed corner beads. As a result of the systemization, only two days were required to complete all the metal lathing required for the exterior walls and columns for each floor.

All metal lath and metal plastering accessories were delivered directly to the levels on which they were to be used, and the frame assembly line was moved up to the next stock of materials as soon as it completed all the frames for one story.

Twenty-five plasterers organized into three crews worked the exterior walls and columns and the central core area in the wake of the lathers, with one of the crews concentrating on the lower level areas to be occupied by the bank.

Harrison & Abramovitz of New York were the architects with Robert E. Rasche of Milwaukee as associate architect. Turner Construction Company of New York and Chicago was the general contractor.

The diamond mesh metal lath installation was complemented with metal plastering accessories which included cold-rolled channels, corner beads, casing beads, partition track, and access doors. Twenty-four thousand feet of casing bead was specially fabricated for use as plaster terminals around the windows.

Lather, Felix Mecikalski, ties Milcor No. 1 Expansion Corner Bead in place as final step in systematized lathing procedure.

Report from the

GENERAL PRESIDENT

IN my Report in the May, 1963, Journal I gave you a run-down on the situation of the Promotional Program caused by the various legal decisions rendered, which I checked with Attorney Wilderman after I had written it and prior to the time it was sent out. The Promotional Program is not illegal. The question arises over the administration of the Promotional Program prohibiting Joint Labor-Management Committees. If the Local Bureaus continue to function on a Trusteeship basis then Labor may act only in an advisory capacity. If the Bureau is set up on this basis then, in my opinion, this would be in accordance to the decision rendered; but Labor may not strike to force the contractors to put the Bureau clause in their agreements.

Apparently, due to the activities of the National and Local Bureaus in promoting the use of lath and plaster, we have not kept up our Apprenticeship Training Program to the point where we can man the work that we promote. We have shortages in a number of places. New York City, San Francisco and Denver have a definite shortage of journeymen lathers. However, before sending men into these areas the secretary of the local union should be contacted because conditions change rapidly.

Getting back to the Apprenticeship Training Program, we had a meeting of our National Joint Apprenticeship Committee in Gatlinburg, Tennessee, on May 18. The minutes of the meeting are in another part of this Journal. I want to emphasize two of the actions taken by the Joint Committee—the employment of a National Director for the Committee and his first responsibility which will be to gather the loose ends and, with our help and assistance, write an Instructor's Manual. This Manual will be furnished to the Instructors of the Local J.A.C. Committees. The fact that we are lathers does not necessarily mean that we know how to impart our knowledge to the apprentices. I learned this in California in the early 1930s when we set up our Apprenticeship Training Program and was required to have our instructors attend a school of instruction to learn how to impart their knowledge to the apprentices before we could get Federal and State funds. We hope that this Instructor's Manual will be a substitute for that since in many areas our local unions do not have the facilities of a vocational training school to teach instruction. Also, many of our smaller local unions do not have an advanced Apprenticeship Training Program and we hope to develop lessons that may be mailed to the local union for any apprentice wishing to take this course. It is my belief that in almost every local union we have a journeyman who is qualified and willing to assume these responsibilities if the material is placed in his hands. At least, I sincerely hope so since this project will run into considerable money.

We now have enough money to get this project started, however, many of our local unions and local chapters of contractors have not negotiated the one cent per hour worked by journeymen and apprentices into their agreements to be sent in to the National Committee. This will have to be done otherwise there will be insufficient money for the National Committee to do the kind of job they feel is absolutely necessary. Each local union and chapter of the contractors have been sent a copy of our Apprenticeship Manual and Standards. The Instructor's Manual is proposed to implement the material which you already have; and while we are moaning about the Court decisions rendered which are adverse to the Promotional Program we are presently short of skilled and competent mechanics to do the work we have already promoted. Pending the time that we are working with legislation on a national level, which Bills have been submitted, we want to catch up with our training of sufficient skilled and competent mechanics to be able to meet the manpower needs of the industry. It is my firm opinion that had this training program been adopted ten years ago the industry would not be faced with a shortage of manpower nor would they be as much concerned about the Promotional Program as we are at the present time. It is also my firm opinion that if the industry trains sufficient skilled and competent mechanics to man the work as needed without restrictive practices there will be less substitutes because there is no real substitute for quality lathing and plastering. We sincerely hope that in your coming negotiations you will see that the one cent per hour worked by journeymen and apprentices is included in your collective bargaining agreement and that the payment thereon is enforced which is perfectly legal, in order that the National Committee will have sufficient funds to do the kind of training job that we know to be necessary in order to maintain and promote the industry. It will be my recommendation at our coming Convention that this be made a mandatory clause in our agreements by Convention action.

Fraternally yours,

Minutes of the National Lathing Industry's Joint Apprenticeship Committee

Representing Employer Members of the CPLIA and the Lathers International Union

THE MEETING was called to order by Jeremiah Burns and Lloyd A. Mashburn, Co-Chairmen, on May 18, 1963 at the River Terrace Motel, Gatlinburg, Tennessee, at nine A.M., with the following members of the Committee in attendance:

Representing the Contractors:

Jeremiah Burns
James Frouge
John Bees
Robert A. Pierce
George F. Robertson, Jr.

Representing Labor:

Lloyd A. Mashburn
John Tierney
L. F. Shipman
Edward R. Goff

In view of the fact that Secretary Mills was absent it was agreed that Co-Chairman Lloyd A. Mashburn would act as Secretary and write the minutes for this meeting.

The Minutes of the previous meeting held October 22, 1962, in Miami, Florida, were read and approved as drafted.

The report of the Secretary-Treasurer was read and approved as submitted. In discussing the amount of money in the National Fund it was felt by some members that there was not sufficient amount of money from the Fund invested with interest; and the money should be invested drawing interest with a lesser amount in a reserve fund to pay immediate expense. It was finally agreed that Co-Chairmen Mashburn and Burns would determine where and how the money should be invested and how much should be held in reserve in the checking account for the operating expense of the Committee.

At this time Co-Chairman Mashburn made a report to the Committee that only three cities were paying in the one cent per hour to the National Fund. These three cities being New York City, Louisville, Kentucky and South Bend, Indiana. A long discussion then ensued regarding ways and means to see that the one cent per hour, approved both by Labor and Management, be included in all agreements and paid to the National Lathing Industry's Joint Apprenticeship Fund.

Co-Chairman Mashburn advised the Committee that he had appointed Vice President Shipman of the Lathers to work with a technician from the Bureau of Apprenticeship and Training, U. S. Department of Labor, to develop an Instructor's Manual, as well as a correspondence course, and asked Vice President Shipman to make a report to the Committee. Co-Chairman Mashburn stated there are two things to really get the program functioning. If services were rendered to the Industry, such as an Instructor's Manual, together with a representative in the field, and with all parties cooperating, the one cent per hour could be negotiated in all local agreements with much less difficulty. Vice President Shipman was then called upon to make a report on his work with the Apprenticeship Division of the Labor Department to produce an Instructor's Manual, as well as a correspondence course to the smaller local unions. After listening to the report of Vice President Shipman and looking at the material that was developed the Committee commended him for his presentation and submission but felt they were not yet ready to enter into such an ambitious program; but it was unanimously agreed that the Co-Chairmen would be authorized to interview applicants and employ a National Director for the Joint Committee. This Director would work under the direction of the Co-Chairmen, first of all to assist in developing an Instructor's Manual which would be condensed since it was felt that many of the smaller local unions and Joint Apprenticeship Committees would probably not have a paid instructor but instead would name one of their members as the apprenticeship instructor and that we should start with a more condensed manual than the one we had been discussing. The Director, when employed, would work under the direction of the Co-Chairmen in condensing the manual as well as carrying out many other duties discussed by the Committee.

Co-Chairman Mashburn offered space in the Lathers' Building for the National Director when employed since much of the information which would be needed in developing the Instructor's Manual could be obtained at the International Headquarters. This was to be on a temporary basis.

Further discussion took place regarding the duties of the National Director and it was finally agreed that the Co-Chairmen would have authority to establish the duties of the Director when employed and to furnish him with a secretary and office equipment to do the job.

A discussion then arose regarding the amount of fee to be paid the attorney and it was finally agreed that the Co-Chairmen would be authorized to pay the attorney $2000 (Two-Thousand Dollars) for his previous work in writing and legalizing the National Trust Agreement and having it approved by Internal Revenue, as well as other miscellaneous items; and that the payment of $2000 (Two-Thousand Dollars) would include the payment of a retainer of $500 (Five-Hundred Dollars) for the year 1963.

The Co-Chairmen were authorized by the Committee to make the necessary contribution to the New York J.A.C. for the year of 1963, to continue their apprenticeship program.

Co-Chairman Mashburn showed the Committee copies of letterheads which he had been instructed to obtain at the meeting of October 22, 1962. The Committee finally made a selection and instructed Co-Chairman Mashburn to have the necessary letterheads printed with the insignia and names of the Committee of the C.P.L.I.A. on one side at the top of the stationery; and the names of the members and the insignia of the L.I.U. on the opposite side at the top of the page.

Meeting adjourned at One P.M.

Unions Gain In Bargaining Victories During Fiscal '62

Unions won bargaining rights in 59 per cent of representation elections in fiscal 1962 as compared with only 56 per cent the year before.

In its 27th Annual Report to Congress, the National Labor Relations Board reported a steady increase in the number of elections held—from 4,337 in 1958 to 7,355 during 1962. There was a 13 per cent increase in the number of elections from 1961.

Bargaining agents were chosen to represent units totaling 305,976 employees, or 57 per cent of those eligible to vote. This compared with 51 per cent in 1961.

AFL-CIO unions won 2,708 elections out of 4,092 elections held and added 190,615 members to their ranks. Unaffiliated unions won 1,597 elections involving 115,000 workers.

The year was a year of record statistics:

- More new cases were filed with the Board than ever before—24,848. Unfair labor practices charges totaled a record 13,479; representation petitions were a record 11,369.

- More cases were concluded—24,848—by decision, settlement, withdrawal or dismissal than ever before.

- More collective bargaining elections were held than ever before.

- More formal complaints in unfair labor practice cases were issued by the General Counsel—1,470—than ever before.

- More settlements of unfair labor practice charges were concluded—2,752—than ever before.

- More back pay was collected—$1,751,910—for employees unlawfully discharged than for any fiscal year except one.

The year also was marked by a number of important decisions, some of them reflecting the thinking of the newly appointed Kennedy members of the Board.

Highlights of these decisions were:

- A Board majority decided that the agency shop is a lawful form of union security contract and is a mandatory subject of collective bargaining.

- An economic decision to contract out work must be discussed by an employer with a representative of the employees affected.

- The Board held that an employer violated his duty to bargain and unlawfully discriminated against his employees by shutting down his plant and moving to another state and by discharging workers as a means of forcing the union to accept his contract proposals.

- The Board liberalized its rules on the appropriateness of bargaining units. It revised previous decisions which excluded technical workers from production units pointing out that there has been a steady increase in the number of technical workers who perform essentially production work.

- It opened the way to the organization of insurance agents on less than statewide basis.

Right-Wingers Gird for 1964 Contests

WHEN liberals talk about the Class of '58, they're not referring to graduates of Harvard, Yale, Princeton or Podunk College, but to the men who were elected to the United States Senate that year. By and large, the Class of '58 has produced more progressive, pro-labor senators than any group in recent times.

In case you haven't checked your calendar, the Class of '58 comes up again in 1964. Its members either will get the go-ahead from voters for a six-year post-graduate course, or will be rejected for further service.

One thing is certain: the manpower of the reactionaries and the money of big business will be poured into an all-out effort to rout Class of '58 liberals. The right-wingers know that if they are successful in 1964, conservatives will hold effective control of the Senate for years.

They are determined to win, and they have picked out their targets well in advance.

In Wyoming, for example, the John Birchers and other rightists who have gained a stranglehold on the state, are training their guns on liberal Gale McGee. In Ohio, the conservatives are out to get Stephen M. Young; in Maine, Ed Muskie. Other members of the Class of '58 on the rub-'em-out roster of the right wing are:

Clair Engle of California, Vanece Hartke of Indiana, Phil Hart of Michigan, Eugene McCarthy of Minnesota, Howard Cannon of Nevada, Harrison Williams of New Jersey, Frank Moss of Utah, Robert Byrd of West Virginia, Thomas Dodd of Connecticut.

Among them, these 12 liberals have rung up a composite voting record on the COPE scoreboard of 314 "right" votes on important legislation against only 31 "wrong." (Included in the tabulation are votes cast by those members of the 1958 Senate class who previously served in the House.)

Other liberals hand-picked for the treatment by ultra-conservatives next year, non-members of the Class of '58 are: Quentin Burdick of North Dakota (who won a special election in June 1960), Ralph Yarborough of Texas and William Proxmire of Wisconsin (who won special elections in 1957) and Mike Mansfield of Montana, Albert Gore, Tennessee.

Among them, they have scored 133 "right" votes to only 22 "wrong."

In all, a total of 22 incumbent liberals and moderates will be running for the Senate in 1964, and only 12 conservatives will be on the block.

Small wonder Americans for Constitutional Action, the John Birch Society, the American Farm Bureau, National Association of Manufacturers, U.S. Chamber of Commerce, and other ultra-conservative groups have launched their campaigns already. They hope to bag a big catch for their trophy rooms and to oust most liberal incumbents, replacing them with reactionaries.

Typical of their strategy and tactics is the method now being applied in Wyoming as they try to march Gale McGee to the guillotine.

It is no secret in Wyoming that the John Birch Society is in the saddle. It seems to control the reins on a state legislature that has passed a phony "right-to-work" bill; adopted three right-wing sponsored resolutions calling for a curb on the U.S. Supreme Court and altering procedures to amend the Constitution (Political Memo, May 20, 1963); put through a reapportionment plan to strengthen rather than diminish rural control of state government; urged Congress to kill foreign aid and to get the U.S. out of the United Nations and vice versa.

There are only 23 radio stations in the state of Wyoming, and 15 of them are on $1,000 a month retainer of a coalition of rightist groups. Every day, hours of taped programs produced by extremists Billy James Hargis, ex-Gen. Edwin Walker, Dan Smoot and other ultras, foul the airwaves and brainwash the citizenry.

Three John Birch organizers have entered Wyoming from outside the state to help mastermind the attack against McGee and liberal programs.

For months, the John Birch crowd has swung into action with midnight phone calls to leaders and members of any organization considering inviting McGee as a speaker.

Matters reached such a preposterous extreme that McGee was temporarily denied permission to speak at the University of Wyoming. Ironically, before he was elected to the Senate he taught history and political science for 12 years at that same university.

Meanwhile, McGee's office in Washington has been deluged with hate mail from rightists. So have the offices of most liberals.

Based on the activities of recent months, there can be no question, that the right-wing will throw everything it has into next year's elections to decimate the ranks of the Class of '58 and to riddle the liberal bloc in the Senate.

There is more at stake than simply the winning and losing of a cluster of seats in the Senate. The liberals up for election in 1964 have been building up seniority during the past six years. In the Senate, seniority is the crucial key to committee leadership and influence, and it is the committees and their subcommittees that shape bills and either boost or bury them.

Good legislation is possible if union members start now to plan for the 1964 elections by supporting COPE, by giving a buck so that liberals who will be the targets of right wing attack can conduct adequately-financed campaigns, by assisting the COPE program in their communities and by determining to defeat the ultras where the challenge has been issued, at the polls.

King Size Builder Gets Princely Savings

BY USING metal lath, rather than masonry, as a plaster base, in the construction of Lefrak City, we saved an estimated $4.63 per square yard of partition," reports Murray Puchall, vice president-construction, The Lefrak Organization. "The difference is represented by the extra direct labor costs necessary for the latter type of construction.

"In addition, construction time was saved through the use of metal lath, for plaster can be applied immediately after metal lath has been installed; by contrast, we usually require a waiting period before plaster is installed over a newly completed masonry wall. These advantages of metal lath construction are highly important, in the highly competitive market of today, particularly since the metal lath assembly is equal or superior to plastered masonry as regards to the combined benefits of weight, fire resistance, sound transmission loss, space saving, appearance and lower maintenance cost."

Metal lath and two-inch solid plaster partitions were originally specified for the entire 6000-apartment, 24-building project, which is located on a 40-acre landscaped tract in North Forest Hills, 20 minutes from mid-Manhattan, New York City. As installed in the first four of the 18-story buildings, the partitions consist of "z" runners fastened to ceiling and floor, with $\frac{3}{4}$ " cold-rolled channels affixed to the "z" runners and flat rib metal lath wire-tied to the channels. After plastering on both sides of the metal lath, the result is a solid two-inch thick partition, little more than half the thickness of conventional hollow assemblies having qualities of fire resistance, sound transmission loss and low maintenance. According to computations by the Lefrak construction office, the use of this type of partition has resulted in savings of nearly six-thousand square feet of floor space in the first four buildings—a dividend that will be passed on to tenants in the increased sizes of the apartments in these buildings. The space saved through the use of two-inch solid metal lath and plaster partitions is about equal to the usable space of one-half of one of the floors of one of these four buildings: It is the equivalent to six apartments.

In each bathroom of Lefrak City, a suspended ceiling of channels, metal lath and plaster provides a concealed space for pipes. The suspended metal lath and plaster ceiling in the lobby of each building conceals air conditioning duct work, and provides the decorative center and edge lighting troughs.

Lobby columns are enclosed with circular vertical furring of metal lath and plaster 48 inches in diameter. Recessed into this metal lath furring assembly, 10-feet high, vertical lighting troughs provide an unusual and dramatic decorative effect.

The Lefrak choice of metal lath, as an element in the drive to create superior structures, is in keeping with the thoroughness of the entire concept of providing tenant satisfaction. Built-in-the-wall air conditioning will serve each room, while in addition, the living rooms of the larger apartments open upon private terraces. Apartments are electrically heated and kitchens are all electric. Supervised recreational programs will be conducted in the recreation areas and in the several olympic-size swimming pools which are being built. Formal gardens are being planted to enhance the contemporary exterior design of the buildings. Nearly 80% of the community's 40 acres have been set aside for gardens and recreational areas.

Shopping centers, including national chain stores, automatic laundries and other services will be connected directly to each building. Adequate space for tenant on-site parking is being provided, as is attended underground garage facilities. Accredited nursery and kindergarten schools are being operated on the premises for the convenience of tenants.

On the planning boards since 1952, much of the intervening time was devoted to research and analysis of building techniques and materials, as well as to studies of economic and living trends, according to President Samuel J. Lefrak.

Entrances glow with indirect light from coves of metal lath and plaster.

Safety Standards Revisions Asked

The AFL-CIO has proposed revisions on Safety and Health Standards for Federal Supply Contracts covered by the Walsh-Healey Public Contracts Act. These revisions have been submitted to Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz.

The promulgation of these safety and health standards by the U. S. Department of Labor will give much needed additional protection to several million members employed in establishments covered by the Walsh-Healey Public Contracts Act and will substantially reduce unnecessary injury and death to all workers employed in such plants.

Various management groups will undoubtedly attempt to influence the Labor Department not to issue these regulations, or to weaken their effectiveness by drastically changing them.

The help of each member in communicating with their senators and congressmen soliciting their support in this important matter would be greatly appreciated.

Copies of the publication of the revisions may be secured by writing to John D. Connors, Executive Secretary of the AFL-CIO Committee on Safety and Occupational Health, Room 805, AFL-CIO Building, Washington 6, D.C.

Lather Locals Receive Awards

Honor Awards from the Committee on Political Education have been presented to Local 31, Holyoke, Massachusetts and Local 235, Daytona Beach, Florida in the 1963 COPE Voluntary Contribution Drive.

Each of these locals was given the award for their contribution of at least one dollar from each member of the entire membership. These contributions are very important as they are needed to secure good labor laws both on the state and national levels.

Construction Trades Dept. Supports HR 2029 and S 757

The Executive Council of the Building and Construction Trades Department AFL-CIO, adopted a resolution at its meeting held in St. Louis, Missouri, May 7-9, 1963 supplementing the action at a previous Executive Council meeting in Miami, Florida, November 1961. This Resolution supports Legislation now before the Congress contained in H.R. 2029 and S. 757 providing for the exemption of the construction industry for the Set Aside Program of the Small Business Administration.

The Executive Council would deeply appreciate your cooperation by writing to your Congressmen and Senators asking them to support this Legislation in order that the construction industry may obtain this much needed relief.

The following is the resolution that was adopted.

RESOLUTION

WHEREAS The Executive Council of the Building and Construction Trades Department in its meetings in Miami, Florida, November 1961, did adopt a resolution supporting legislation which would remove the construction industry from the Set Aside Program of the Small Business Administration and

WHEREAS H. R. 3690 and S. 1363 were introduced in the Congress and considerable progress was made upon the legislation during the year 1962, but without passage, and

WHEREAS The Set Aside Program of the Small Business Administration continues with intensity—doing injury to the competitive bidding system in the construction industry and to the industry in many other ways, and

WHEREAS New Bills have been introduced in the 88th Session of Congress, identified as H.R. 2029 and S. 757, therefore

BE IT RESOLVED, That the Executive Council of the Building and Construction Trades Department do adopt this resolution reaffirming its support of H. R. 2029 and S. 757 and will request all affiliated councils and State organizations to write, wire and meet with their Congressman and Senators requesting their support of this legislation, and the Department will request each International Union to communicate with each of their affiliated local unions to take the same action as provided herein.

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, That

Adopted by the Executive Council of the Building and Construction Trades Department this 7th day of May, 1963.

Union Industries Show Booth Big Success

Lathers District Council in St. Louis participated in the annual Union Industry Show with the Operative Plasterers' & Cement Masons' International Association. The booth, as in the past years, stressed the beauty and the fire resistant features of lath and plaster. This booth proved to be a real attraction at the show which attracted thousands.

Statistics Reveal Surprising Facts

A BOOKLET from the Bureau of Labor-Management, reports section, entitled "Summary of Operations—Bureau of Labor-Management Reports—Fiscal year 1962," has just been issued. Sometimes, Government bulletins are difficult for the ordinary citizen to comprehend. This one was clear and concise and made interesting reading, and we think the Bureau should be commended.

Some significant facts were brought to mind in the statistics presented in the summary. We think they are so significant we bring them to our readers on the Editorial page this month.

Let us review for a moment the number of unions and employers filing reports under the law. The total number of unions reporting was 52,237, while employers filed 623 reports. Those two figures might well take a little contemplation. To fulfill an act entitled Labor-Management Reporting and Disclosures Act, with certainly many more individual employers in the nation than there are local unions, this proportion seems all wrong to us. Of course, stipulations under the law apply only to some employers, those which have pension and welfare plans, etc. Why, then, does that stipulation not also apply to local unions, the vast majority of which do not have local union pension and welfare plans either? It just seems to us that there's something wrong in a law presumably designed to treat labor and management alike and, where there are many more management establishments involved than labor unions, that the law requires 52,237 labor unions to report and makes only 623 employers file reports. Incidentally, 782 labor relations consultants were also required to file reports.

Now, let's take a look at another set of figures taken from the table of possible violations investigated by the Bureau. It seems that there were 5,408 alleged violations. We cannot go into all the types of violations here, but, looking at just one into which most of the violations fell—3,942 of them—"Inadequate Reports to BLMR under Title II," we find 3,019 "Reports of Labor Organizations" listed. That's out of a possible 52,237.

And, out of a possible 100 per cent of 1,405 employers and labor relations consultants combined, we find 660 reports in question!

We're certainly not experts in this field of reporting and labor law, but it seems, in light of figures like that, the Bureau of Labor-Management Reports might well take a second look. The general public is certainly of the opinion that it is labor unions which need to be watched, which must be forced to report. Figures like these surely, to the non-legal minds of our members, seem to raise a legitimate question—if legislation is needed, which group needs it more? And why are labor unions being unfairly treated under the law of the land?

Education Conference—Various views about the future of the trade union movement in Canada were expressed by speakers at an Ontario Federation of Labour educational conference held during the latter part of February in Niagara Falls. The meeting, which was attended by between 700 and 800 delegates from unions all over Ontario, was addressed by labour leaders and by two university professors who are specialists in industrial relations.

Difficulties facing the labour movement the speakers agreed, included a falling off in union membership, lack of success in organizing white-collar workers, who are increasing in number at the expense of blue-collar workers; the need for adjustment to changing industrial and economic conditions; internal dissension in the movement; and a measure of public hostility toward trade unions.

Measures proposed by labour speakers to meet these difficulties included: increasing the powers of the Canadian Labour Congress, merging of small national and international unions to form larger and more effective units, appointing more specialists to union staffs, and giving more attention to labour's "public image."

Home Improvement Market in Winter—More than 55 per cent of all occupied dwellings in Canada were more than 15 years old, and will be requiring a continuing program of maintenance, repair and improvement, said Dr. W. R. Dymond, Assistant Deputy Minister of Labour, in an address last month to the Home Builders' Association of Greater Ottawa.

Experts estimate that the home improvement market, which currently exceeds half a billion dollars, could reach an annual potential of one billion dollars. This amounts to more than one third of the total estimated expenditure on new dwellings, he added.

"The experience of those who have been successful in the home improvement market indicates that it is an ideal winter operation. Winter is the time when house building tends to slacken off. As employers, you are no doubt interested in keeping your key staff intact during the winter months. In addition, you would probably welcome a new winter market that would enable you to more evenly amortize your capital and other costs over a 12-month period," Dr. Dymond said.

He gave examples of the ways in which building supply dealers had exploited the advantages of getting home improvement work done during the winter months, with profit to themselves and to the benefit of customers and of building construction tradesmen, who were thus kept at work instead of being laid off during the wintertime.

Builders, either individually or collectively, should make sure that the public was informed of "the many advantages of home improvement."

Research Grants in 1962—During 1962, the Department of Labour awarded seven grants, totalling $8,700, under the Labour Department-University Research Program. These grants support studies in industrial relations, manpower requirements, investment in education and training, and all other aspects of labour economics in Canada.

Subjects for studies and the recipients approved by the Labour Department-University Research Committee—a joint body of university representatives and of the Department of Labour—for the 1962 program were:

—Scientific manpower in the economy of Canada, by Agnes M. Ferguson, McGill University.

—Origins of the legislative policy of Quebec in labour relations matters, by Stanley Hartt, McGill University.

—An economic analysis of financing unemployment insurance in Canada, by L. A. Kelly, Queen's University.

—Wage differentials in Canada, by G. Marion, University of Montreal.

—The labour implications of recent developments in the coal mining industry of Nova Scotia, by W. J. Woodfine, St. Francis Xavier University.

—Effective utilization of manpower in the Canadian construction industry (completion of study), by David C. Aird, University of British Columbia.

—Legal status of collective agreements in Canada, the U.S.A. and Great Britain, by Bernard Leo Adell, Wadham College, Oxford University.

Winter Works Program—By March 22, projects accepted under the Municipal Winter Works Incentive Program numbered 6,955; they provided an estimated 5,571,247 man-days of work during the period of the program. Projects approved under the 1961-62 program numbered 8,247 and man-days of work provided, 5,784,374.

The estimated number of men to be hired during the program period had reached 124,397 by March 22.

Collective Bargaining—During the first quarter of the year, 42 major collective agreements covering approximately 59,000 workers were signed. Among them were contracts in such sectors as chemicals and allied products, aircraft, sheetmetal products manufacturing, logging and other industries. Other settlements during the quarter involved municipal governments, hospitals and telephone corporations.

Major negotiations were at various stages by the end of March at a few pulp and paper mills and in the rubber manufacturing industry in eastern Canada, in the longshoring industry in the Maritime Provinces, Quebec, Ontario and British Columbia, as well as in other industries across Canada.

"Most retired folks are well enough fixed to take care of their bills
if they get sick."

"Why, just reading those newspaper ads will tell you that there are plenty of medical insurance plans for older people if they weren't so close with their money."

"Anyone in this country can get medical care when they need it, even if they can't pay for it."

Some people sincerely agree with one or more of these statements. And because they do, they are convinced that a federal program of health insurance for the aged, under the social security system, just isn't necessary.

They are wrong—tragically wrong. Tragically, because those who today are so sure there is no real problem will awaken tomorrow with that very problem before them.

The statistical proof is overwhelming. But before reciting the figures, let us consider a few general propositions on which there should be no argument:

- ★ Almost all of us will be old some day. Thanks to medical science, we seldom die young except as a result of accident.

- ★ Almost all of us have parents, whom we love and for whom we are morally and legally responsible.

- ★ Almost all of us have or will have children, whose future is our keenest concern and for whom we would make any sacrifice.

These three facts add up to a fourth: Sooner or later every one of us will be involved in one way or another with the combination of illness and old age. And it is more likely to be sooner than later.

Now let's look at the figures.

Older people get sick oftener, stay sick longer.

Nine out of 10 Americans are hospitalized at least once after they reach 65. Two out of three are hospitalized more than once.

The average hospital stay for those over 65 is 15 days—twice as long as for others.

All in all, on a per person basis, people over 65 spend three times as many days a year in the hospital as the rest of the population.

Older people have lower incomes and fewer assets.

The most recent government figures on the financial status of the elderly were compiled in 1960. They give some illuminating—and shocking—information on the median income of the 65-plus citizens.

For all persons 65 and over, the median annual income is less than $1,300—less than $26 a week. This means that half of those in the group make more than $1,300; the other half make less.

For married couples 65 and older, the median income is $2,530 a year—a little more than $48 a week.

And there are no pots full of gold buried in the backyards. Three out of 10 families whose head is 65 or older have $100 or less in assets that could readily be converted into cash.

These are the “well-fixed” old folks!

Private insurance is too costly and too limited.

The statistics just cited make it clear that those over 65 are bad risks when it comes to health insurance.

The insurance company actuaries use the same figures when they write policies and set rates. So while the press agents and lobbyists for the insurance companies keep insisting that private insurance is the answer, the actuaries—the men whose judgment determines profit and loss—take a more realistic view.

True, many types of health insurance are now available to 65-plus citizens.

Some are relatively low in price. These are the ones which pay, say, $10 a day for hospitalization. The average cost of a day in the hospital in 1962 was $32.

Some pay relatively adequate benefits—the equivalent of semi-private accommodations. These are the ones which cost upward of $200 a year per person, more than 15% of the meager median income of the elderly.

In short, the cheap policies are of little use; the useful policies are too expensive.

Is it any wonder, then, that half the people 65 and older have no health insurance at all? Or that two-thirds of those whose family incomes are $2,000 a year or less have no coverage?

Just in terms of results, only 30% of the people over 65 have as much as three-fourths of their hospital bills paid by insurance. (The figure is 54% for the rest of us.)

And where total medical costs are concerned, including hospitalization, a study of social security recipients showed that only 14% of the couples and 9% of the single persons had ANY of their expenses defrayed by insurance.

“Everyone gets care”—a well-loved fallacy.

Only under most unusual circumstances is any critically-ill person denied medical attention or hospital admission for lack of funds. The key word here is “critically.”

Few illnesses start at the “critical” stage. Most of them begin with minor symptoms that gradually become more severe. Early detection and treatment are helpful in all cases and in some (such as cancer) are essential.

Other illnesses—arthritis, for instance—may never become “critical.” But they are no less painful, and have the same need for proper treatment.

But as countless studies have shown, millions of elderly Americans, barely living within their meager incomes, too proud to accept charity or submit to the “pauper’s oath”—the means test—required for public assistance, live with their ailments in silence. They cannot afford treatment and they will not beg for it.

In some types of illness the decision is ultimately taken out of their hands. They reach the “critical” stage. They are rushed to the hospital for treatment that may be too late. It may be true that at this stage no one worries about the bill. But it is also true that eventually, someone—a relative, a friend, a private charity or the taxpayers in general—must pay it.

The burden is on your shoulders.

If you are nearing 65, or have already retired, the dimensions of the problem are already apparent to you.

On your retirement income, could you handle an $800 medical bill? (Half the aged couples in the country pay that much a year, when one or the other is hospitalized.)

the answer is obvious. You couldn't possibly pay this much for illness and have enough left for food, clothing and shelter.

But let us suppose you are younger—35 to 45. Retirement is a long way off. You have other concerns, such as your children, your mortgage and your installment payments. The chances are about six to one that you have at least one child under 18.

The chances are even better that your parents, and your wife's parents, are 65-plus. It's the classic family pattern—children, parents, grandparents. A wonderful pattern . . . until illness strikes.

Suddenly one of the grandparents is hospitalized by some unsuspected ailment, or even by a fall; old bones mend slowly. Expensive treatment and constant care are essential. Your role at first is sending flowers and fruit or paying cheerful visits. But the lifetime savings of the old folks melt away in a matter of weeks. What then?

Then your role becomes far more difficult. Then you start paying the bills.

At best, in some states and under some circumstances, you may have an option. Will you spend the money you have so carefully saved for your son's college education to meet the medical expense of your mother-in-law; or will you let your wife's parents be forced to go on relief?

To such a question there is no "right" answer. In a humane society, the question should never need to be asked.

The solution is simple, practical and fair.

The question does not need to be asked in America if only reason and logic can prevail.

The clear and reasonable answer to the financial threat of catastrophic illness among the aged is a national program of old-age hospital and nursing home insurance, as a part of the present highly-successful social security system.

Such a program has been devised. Originally conceived by former Congressman Aime Forand, it has been refined and improved by years of careful Congressional study. In its present form, known as the King-Anderson bill (HR 3920, S-880), it would insure all citizens 65 or more, even those who are not covered by social security, against the catastrophic costs of hospital and related care.

The program would be financed by a tiny increase in the social security taxes on employers and employees—about $12 a year for the average worker.

Because it would be a national program, and because workers would contribute during their entire working lifetime, taking advantage of the existing administrative machinery of the social security system, this small amount will buy more protection than $200 a year in private insurance.

Because it would be a true insurance plan, just like social security pensions, the benefits would be available to the elderly as a matter of right, not as a handout.

Because its coverage would be universal, every American would be largely relieved of worry about disastrous medical costs for himself, his wife or husband or his parents—and therefore of worry about the handicap such costs might impose upon his children.

This program does not pretend to meet all costs. Doctor's bills, for example, are not included. But by covering the chief items in old-age medical care it would prevent a burden from becoming a disaster; and it would open up a far more practical area for private insurance, in the form of supplementary protection.

While this program has been under study, alternative methods have been tried. The Kerr-Mills act has been on the books since August 1960; and while it has given a measure of help to a relative handful of the elderly in a relative handful of states, it has failed utterly to meet the problem as a whole. This can be done only through a national insurance program—the King-Anderson bill.

Simple, practical and fair. Those are the words for it. Tell your Congressman and Senators that you, like the great majority of Americans, want and need the King-Anderson bill, HR-3920, S-880.

If you want more detailed information about the King-Anderson bill, write to the AFL-CIO, 815 16th St., N.W., Washington 6, D. C.

In the Good Ol' Summertime, Don't Be A Litterbug!

THE CARLOAD of light-hearted picnickers pulled up the winding road to their favorite spot. But party spirits dropped when the site came into view. Crumpled napkins and dirty paper dishes, fruit skins, sandwich wrappings, bottles, cans and other empty containers covered the tables and overflowed onto the grass—undisputable proof that the litterbug had been stomping on the old camp grounds!

Summer, you know, is the season he likes best. Warm sunny days lure him outdoors to city parks and pools, beaches, picnic grounds and camping areas. And those long holiday weekends and "two weeks with pay" enable him to take to the road with enthusiasm.

Who are these trash-tossing pests?

Well, they can be almost anyone. In fact, there are just about as many of them as there are Americans, since nearly everyone has at least a touch of the litterbug in him and individual thoughtlessness is a primary cause of this bad habit.

What's more, this same bad habit makes it necessary for American taxpayers to clean up after themselves to the tune of over $50 million a year—for litter removal from primary highways alone!

In one year, litter was the primary cause of over 57,000 building fires and 30 per cent of all forest fires, costing Mr. and Mrs. America millions of dollars more.

Worst of all, it is responsible for more than 75,000 persons being seriously injured annually as a result of cars striking or swerving to avoid objects tossed on roads and highways.

But litter can be dangerous in other ways as well. Refuse on beaches, in lakes, streams, parks and recreation areas can become a breeding ground for disease-carrying insects and rodents. Besides polluting the water, litter in a lake or river can puncture the hull of a boat traveling at high speed or damage a rudder or propeller.

Many states, concerned with the carelessness that is changing the nation's recreational areas into public dumps, have cracked down on litterbugs with strengthened anti-litter laws and ordinances.

Disregarding such laws can prove expensive. In Wyoming, convicted litterbugs face a fine of up to $100 or up to 90 days in jail. In South Dakota, fines ranging from $25 to $100 may be imposed on persons found guilty of depositing litter or debris on highways, public waters, shorelines, public parks or recreation areas.

If you're caught littering Wisconsin's state fishing waters, be prepared to pay a $100 fine—and lose your fishing license for a year.

And they mean business! Recently, 68 per cent of the arrests made by Pennsylvania's fishing wardens during the first quarter of the year were for violations of a state law that prohibited littering of waterways.

In many places, sportsmen, conservationists and rural groups have taken the initiative in litter-prevention activities. In parts of Maryland, sportsmen not only provide extra trash receptacles for "heavy" litter areas but also service the containers themselves. Litter-prevention in that state is often tied in with traffic safety programs. Motorists are urged to "Keep Maryland Beautiful—and Safe.

Kentucky has undertaken a border-to-border cleanup with widespread governmental and voluntary support. The Future Homemakers and Farm Bureau Federation are among the groups cooperating in the official "Make Kentucky A Cleaner, Greener Land" statewide anti-litter effort.

Keep America Beautiful, Inc., the national public service organization for the prevention of litter, says that the litterbug can be eliminated if everyone will just watch his outdoor manners. Here's how!

1. Leave that picnic site litter-free and inviting for the next group. Deposit all trash in proper receptacles or take it with you. "Police" the area so that neither litter nor the careless arrangement of tables and benches can spoil its beauty.

2. "Summerizing" your home also means removing all piled-up trash and debris left from housecleaning chores. Immediate and proper disposal will help prevent rubbish-caused fires on your property as well.

3. If you're planning a motor trip for your vacation, make it both carefree and litter-free every mile of the way. Carry a litterbag in the car and put travel-trash in it—not out the window.

4. Set a good example for children by always disposing of trash in a proper receptacle—wherever you are.

5. Alert your friends to their personal responsibility for the appearance of both private and public property—city streets, vacant lots, parks, beaches, streams, highways and all recreation areas.

Taking to the waterways? Good manners are just as important there as on highways, especially today with boating becoming more and more of a family pastime.

For the seagoing individual, Keep America Beautiful suggests these preventive measures:

Keep a supply of litterbags aboard your boat but, when full, bring them back to port for proper disposal on shore.

Prevent the discharge of oil or gas into waters where it may be carried to shore and kill animal or plant life.

Maintain docks and equipment in good condition so they don't become eyesores.

Remember, every American has a stake in the beauty of his country. Wherever you are, won't you dispose of that trash properly and help keep your state and all America beautiful!

The World Loses A Man Of Peace

Pope John XXIII is dead.

On the afternoon of June 3rd, this humble son of a tenant farmer who climbed the highest pinnacle of Catholicism passed away as he lived—quietly and prayerfully.

Seldom has the world mourned quite so universally for a single individual. Catholic and Protestant, Jew and Mohammedan, Moslem and Atheist, all recognized in this man a depth of character and of human warmth that transcended religious lines, national boundaries, and every contrived barrier that separates one human being from another.

In less than five years in the Papacy he breathed a new vitality and a dynamism into a post that has been occupied by many men of tremendous stature. Small wonder that his passing is mourned in tiny villages on the Australian veldt and mighty cities that make up the capitals of the world.

His magnetism and his strength stemmed not from his exceptional intellect (though few men matched him in this regard), but rather from his humility, compassion, and unquenchable respect for the dignity of the human spirit.

Now he is gone, but he leaves behind him a legacy of love and inspiration that will influence the world and the shape of human events of untold eons to come. His concern for the social plight of the down-trodden and oppressed, especially endeared him to all those who must work for a living. His monument will be the tears of this generation and the affection of succeeding generations until the end of time.

A man of peace is gone. He lived in peace; surely peace is his in death.

General President Lloyd A. Mashburn

General President, Lloyd A. Mashburn, was honored at a testimonial dinner in New York City at the Waldorf-Astoria Wednesday, June 5, 1963. A plaque was presented to General President Mashburn by Representative James Roosevelt of California on behalf of the State of Israel for his outstanding work in the field of human relations. Over 300 were in attendance from International Unions, Local Unions, and representatives of industry.

James Roosevelt said, "Lloyd Mashburn's life has been one of constant service to his fellow man, regardless of race or creed. An outstanding trade union leader, he has significantly advanced labor's cause. A profound humanitarian, he has been in the forefront of many efforts to advance the general welfare. He has held many eminent offices in labor and public life: Business Agent for the Los Angeles Lathers Union, Secretary-Treasurer of the Building and Construction Trades Council, member of the Mayor's and Governor's Housing Commissions, Labor Commissioner of the State of California, Under-Secretary of Labor, of the United States Department of Labor.

"We, his friends and colleagues, who share his faith in Israel and its devotion to democratic ideals, are proud to salute Lloyd Mashburn at this time."

General Secretary-Treasurer, Harold Mills, was the General Chairman of the affair.

SAFETY'S No Joke!

■ “Booby trap” once meant a prank, such as setting a bucket of water above a doorway to drench anyone entering.

But it gained new connotations during World War II. It came to mean a device wired to a door, window, floorboard, or other innocent fixture, that would trigger an explosion upon the use of the object. It was literally a practical joke that killed.

These war traps were purposely set to injure opposing troops. But many such traps are unintentionally set around us at home and work each day. They are set through carelessness or neglect.

How many booby traps await you and your family right in your own home?

The faulty table lamp that you have to turn on with an encouraging nudge, the garden hose you left lying across the front walk, or the binding door-jam on the hall closet—they’re all potential booby traps.

You promised yourself you’d fix them some day. But we all tend to put things off, and the projects are soon forgotten.

As a result, Junior was the recipient of a large knot on the head when the closet door finally yielded to his tugging. Aunt Hazel got the shock of her life while turning on your magic lamp. And, you’re in for the ride of your life when you leave for the office tomorrow morning by way of the front walk.

With luck you’ll survive, but not necessarily.

If you could count all the potential dangers lurking in wait around your home, you may decide that the house should have been shipped overseas during World War II.

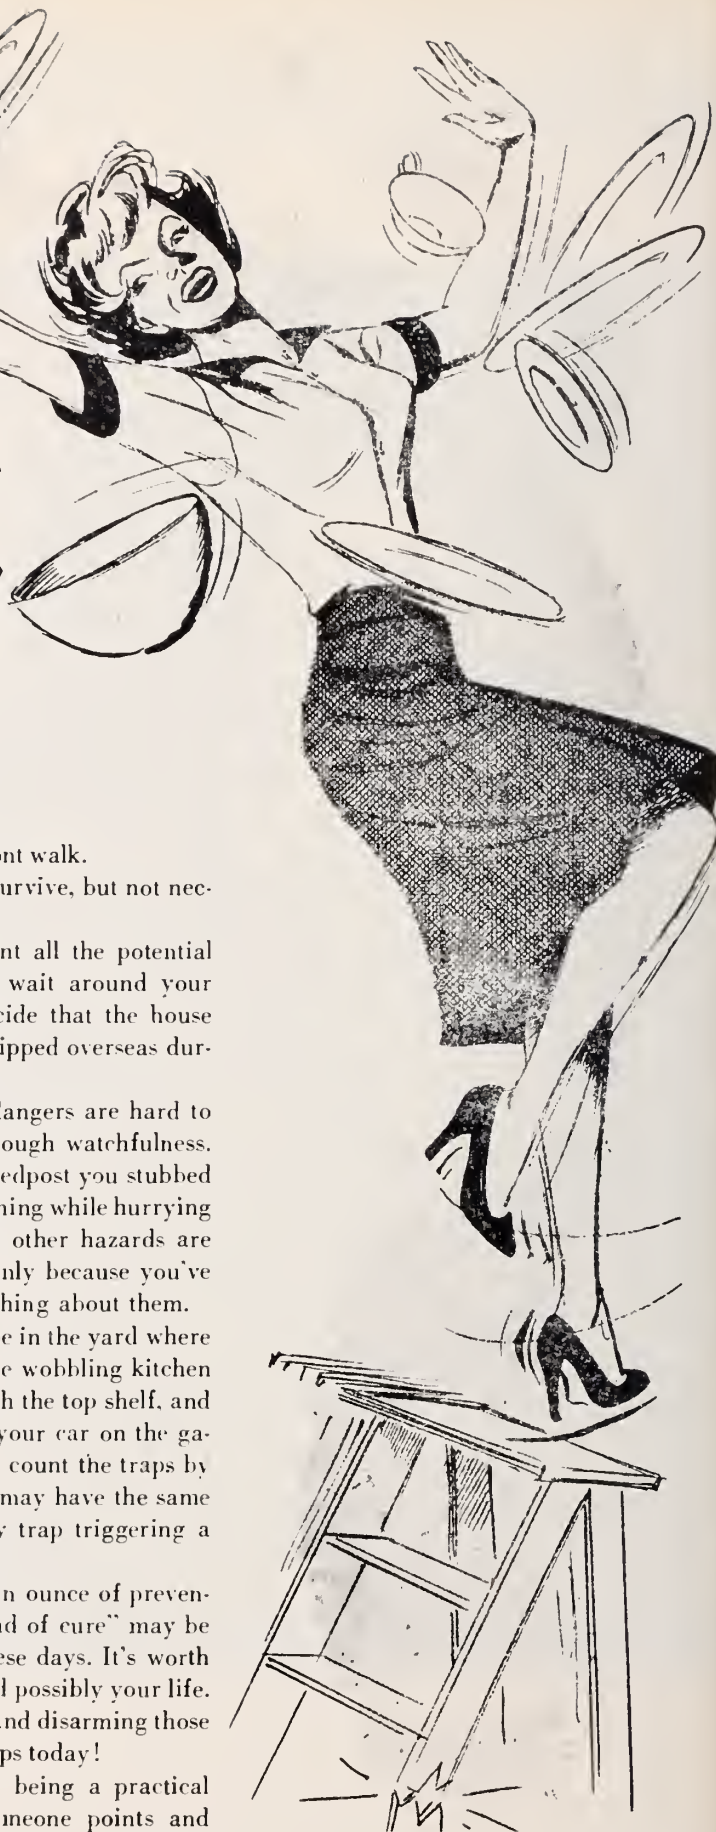

Certainly, some dangers are hard to eliminate except through watchfulness. No one blames the bedpost you stubbed your toe on this morning while hurrying to the kitchen. But, other hazards are needless and exist only because you’ve neglected to do anything about them.

The tools you leave in the yard where the children play, the wobbling kitchen stool you use to reach the top shelf, and the oil slick left by your car on the garage floor—you can count the traps by the hundreds. Each may have the same potential as a booby trap triggering a hand-grenade.

The old adage “An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure” may be stated too lightly these days. It’s worth your good health and possibly your life.

Start seeking out and disarming those household booby traps today!

They’re far from being a practical joke. For, when someone points and says, “This one’ll kill ya!” he’s probably not kidding. ■

Report from the

GENERAL PRESIDENT

IN my Report this month I am pleased to refer you to an agreement between the Wood, Wire & Metal Lathers International Union and the United Brotherhood of Carpenters. This agreement has taken many hours and days to work out and while it is only the first step in what I hope will be a series of agreements which will complete an understanding between the two organizations on all phases of the work, some of the phases of the work have been in dispute since the inception of the two organizations. This portion, as you will note, only takes care of the ceiling systems. The Committee, as instructed by the Convention, will continue to meet on other phases of disputes.

An agreement between our two organizations, in my opinion, is absolutely essential since the National Joint Board, with whom we have had so much difficulty, and the National Labor Relations Board are now making decisions based upon current agreements between International Unions. From the information I have received both Boards feel that there has been such a transition and change in materials, installation and methods that they will recognize current decisions as a basis for their decisions. There is proof of this since there have been decisions rendered both by the National Joint Board and the National Labor Relations Board following current agreements signed by the two International Unions.

Our International Union has certainly not been happy with the decisions rendered by the National Joint Board and an agreement by the parties will simplify this, not only in their decisions but in the settlement of disputes where they arise on the local level.

I am placing this agreement in the middle of our Journal as a pull sheet so that each and every journeyman will have it available for his information.

You will note that the agreement as written follows out the theory of light iron furring as being the work of the Lather which, of course, we have always contended; but because of the change in types of material used, as well as the method of installation and its use, a great deal of confusion has ensued and has caused many disputes as well as causing loss of time and a great deal of money to settle these disputes.

If I am right, and I believe I am, both the National Joint Board and the National Labor Relations Board will continue to make decisions based upon agreements by the two International Unions, and this will simplify our problems as well as those of the contractors. I recognize that some of the work set forth in the agreement as being that of one party or the other and is probably being done differently in various areas but from the survey made it would seem to be an equitable agreement throughout the United States and Canada for both parties concerned, and their basic jurisdictions generally retained.

I spent twenty-five years as the Umpire in the settling of jurisdictional disputes between all of the Building and Construction Trade Unions and Contractors in California, Arizona and Nevada, without any serious stoppage of work and, of course, in order to render these decisions it became absolutely necessary for me to become familiar with all decisions and agreements of record of the Building and Construction Trades Department for all International Unions, including our own, and I believe that this first step in negotiations between the parties is a fair and equitable distribution of the trade jurisdiction of both signatory International Unions; and I sincerely hope that disputes will be settled on the local level without referral to the national level along the lines set forth in this agreement, and that we will be able to by reason of these settlements on a common sense basis reach agreement on all other disputes existing between the two International Unions not settled in this agreement.

The two Committees will again meet in September with instructions from both myself and President Hutcherson, to continue to work toward the settlement of all other disputes between us based upon the same format as I have explained above. Both parties have entered into these negotiations in good faith, each recognizing the basic jurisdiction of the other with a sense of fairness on a give and take basis. All other disputes can and, I hope, will be settled between the parties which will make it possible for Boards on the top level to settle in accordance therewith any dispute which cannot be settled on the local level with the agreement as a guide for their decisions.

Fraternally yours,

Lloyd A. Mashburn

Mormon Information Building

A CENTURY ago in Salt Lake City, Mormon pioneers commenced the erection of a building which continues today as an outstanding example of structural and acoustical designing. The Tabernacle—elliptical in shape, 150 ft. wide and 250 ft. in length and soaring to a height of 80 ft. on wooden trusses—was originally fastened together with wooden pins and rawhide. The wooden roof trusses, which span the 150-ft. width, rest upon buttresses of red sandstone, set about twelve feet apart. The acoustics are so marvelous that each official guide regularly demonstrates to visitors, standing at the rear of the auditorium, that they can hear a pin which he drops by the musical conductor's stand. Started in 1863 and completed in 1867, the Tabernacle houses one of the largest pipe organs in the world and is the home of the world-famed Mormon Tabernacle Choir.

Drawn by the beauty and historical significance of the structures on the grounds of the Temple of the Church of Jesus Christ of the Latter-day Saints, more than a million visitors come each year to take the guided tour through the Tabernacle and other points of interest. But recently a new dimension has been added, and visitors will gain their initial impression of beauty and graciousness as they enter the Bureau of Information Building, when it is opened to them at a later date. Though completed, it is presently being used as a temporary annex building for entrance to the Temple. When the new Temple Annex Building is completed, the Bureau of Information Building will be opened to the public. The simple majesty of its lines clearly foretell the dramatic impact it will have on everyone who views it. Much of the beauty of the architect's designing was made possible through the specifying of metal lath and plaster throughout.

The central core, and main entrance of the building, is a spacious circular rotunda, opened to the curved decorative plaster dome, three stories above. A ramp, spiralling upward against the rotunda's curving walls, provides access to the second and third floors of the building's wings. A continuous painted mural covers the walls along the entire extent of the ramp.

Concern for the safety of the large number of people who will daily be accommodated in the structure made fire protection an important consideration of its design. Structural steel is membrane fireproofed with metal lath and plaster. All walls of the reinforced concrete building are fired with 1½ in. channels, to which ¾ in. rib metal lath was attached, covered with gypsum-sanded plaster and putty coat finish. Ceilings are double ceil-

Two levels of the ramp, which spirals from ground floor to third story, are visible here. Its balustrade consists of diamond mesh metal lath, wire tied to channel iron and—since the photo was taken—covered on both sides with plaster. Walls have vertical furring of metal lath and plaster. A double ceiling of metal lath—both furred and suspended—has become the interior of the dome. A dramatic mural will be painted upon the metal lath and plaster on the outer walls, surrounding the ramp.

Hollow partitions consisting of prefabricated steel studs and 3 4 in. rib metal lath are erected in the rear of the main theatre of the Bureau of Information Building, and around the projection booth. Service lines, which may be more easily installed in hollow stud metal lath and plaster partitions than in masonry partitions of approximately similar performance are visible. This criteria and the fire resistive quality of metal lath and plaster partitions, make them particularly desirable for this type of construction.

ings, with metal lath and plaster used on both. Interior partitions are constructed of prefabricated steel studs, metal lath and plaster.

All curved and run work was created with 3.4 lb. diamond mesh metal lath and channels. According to Ted Sorenson, lathing and plastering contractor for the structure, "it was not possible to do some of the work in this building with other materials . . ." Impressed by the architect's appreciation for and understanding of lath and plaster construction, Mr. Sorenson described this as one of the most thorough jobs he had ever encountered. Even those wall areas treated with wood paneling were first covered with metal lath and plaster.

One area of particular challenge to the plasterers was the curved wall along the ramp in the rotunda. This wall had to be perfect in texture and free of blemishes and irregularities to provide a ground upon which the artists would paint the dramatic mural. The preparation of such a finish on a flat surface is well within the capabilities of a competent plasterer; but achieving it on the curved wall along the rotunda ramp was an accomplishment of considerably greater magnitude.

Designed by George Cannon Young & Associates, Salt Lake City architectural firm, this beautiful neo-classic building will serve as a general information center for the Mormon Temple grounds. It will contain rooms in which museum relics and artifacts pertaining to the early pioneer history of Utah and the Mormon Church will be displayed. Two theatres, each with a seating capacity of 250, will present movies and lectures on Utah and Mormon history. Being the first of several structures in the extensive modernization program which is now underway on the Temple grounds, the Information Building will temporarily be used for other purposes while other buildings are under construction.

General contractor was Paulsen Construction Company of Salt Lake City.

ten thousand words ”*

NEVER is the Chinese proverb that, “one picture is worth more than ten-thousand words” more clearly demonstrated than when one displays a photo of the Sheraton-Cleveland Hotel Ballroom to illustrate the versatility and practicability of metal lath and plaster in the execution of an architect's designs. Among the outstanding features of the 88 ft. x 175 ft. ballroom are the double-convoluted metal lath and plaster ceiling, and the shallow domes, or “penetrations” that cap each balcony column, at the ends of the convolutions.

Recessed spotlights in the convoluted ceiling, as well as in the metal

The convoluted ceiling of the Sheraton-Cleveland Main Ballroom is functional as well as attractive. Created of 3.4 lb. diamond mesh metal lath and plaster, it enhances the acoustics of the 88 ft. x 175 ft. room and provides concealment for the multitude of recessed spotlights as well as for the air conditioning ducts and vents. The shallow half dome “penetrations” which top each of the balcony columns, were prefabricated in two pieces in the plasterer's shop and assembled in place.

lath ceilings over the balconies, give well-diffused and controllable illumination throughout the ballroom. In accordance with the designing of the architectural firm of Perry, Shaw, Hepburn and Dean, Boston, the penetrations provide dramatic settings for chandeliers of multitudes of eight-watt bulbs, with an overall festive effect of rocket bursts.

The associate architect was Warner Geary, and Moore of Cleveland. General contractor was Brown Construction Company, also of Cleveland.

The ballroom is but the glamorous part of the new addition to the Sheraton-Cleveland Hotel. In its entirety, the project consists of a three-story garage facility for approximately four-hundred automobiles, the two-story main ballroom which can seat 2200 for dinner, and an exhibition hall of about twelve-thousand square feet. In addition to creating the suspended ceilings in the ballroom, metal lath and plaster covered the masonry and concrete walls throughout the addition. Prefabricated metal studs, metal lath and plaster were used to construct the non-load bearing partitions.

In order to expedite the construction, the roof system was erected, enabling the installation of mechanical work and making it possible for the special curved and suspended plaster ceiling of the ballroom to be finished long before the exterior walls of masonry were completely erected. This procedure enabled the contractors to finish with the use of the scaffolding and get it out of the way of the other mechanical trades as soon as possible. The special curved recessed plaster flat domes, or column-topping "penetrations" were prefabricated in two pieces in the shop of the lathing and plastering contractor, Lennox-Haldeman Company, Cleveland, and brought to the job for installation, with only final pointing of joints required.

Fire protection, desired acoustics, pleasing finish, durability, and precise execution of the architect's elegant design were among the "plusses" realized through the use of metal lath, lathing accessories and plaster throughout this gleaming addition to the Sheraton-Cleveland Hotel. The nearly perfect acoustics of the main ballroom are evident whenever an address is given without benefit of an electronic amplifier. The low maintenance cost will be a long range value apparent to the company's building staff and its cost accountants. But as to the execution of the architect's design—why the Chinese had a proverb for it. . . .

Channel Framework for one convoluted bay, with concealed spotlights and their plaster rings are shown in place. The adjacent bay has already been plastered. Between the two bays is seen the curving sheet metal air distribution plenum.

With sheet metal plenum, and metal lath in place, plastering has been completed on two adjacent convolutes even before the building is closed in. Work on ceiling had commenced immediately after the roof and vapor barrier were completed and had gone on while roof deck was being placed.

Training Program Set Up For 20,000 N.Y. Jobless Youth

The "largest and most comprehensive project of its kind ever to be approved under the Manpower Development and Training Act" has been set up for 20,000 out-of-school, predominantly unemployed youth in New York City.

It is a program, according to U. S. Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz, "directed toward combatting the lack of motivation, direction and opportunities for employment that afflict millions of Negro, Puerto Rican and other minority group youth in most of our major cities."

President John F. Kennedy, in a message to New York's Mayor Robert Wagner, declared that he was "heartened to learn of the bold new program," and added:

"This is just the type of large-scale, intensive effort that the Manpower Development and Training Act makes possible and which will provide a basis for permanently reducing the problem of unemployment."

The program provides for counseling and guidance services in neighborhood "youth counseling centers" which will be established by New York City in areas where adequate guidance and counseling facilities are lacking. Youth will be referred to these centers by both public and private agencies for initial guidance and counseling. Later they will be sent to "work try-out stations."

"One of the unique features of this project," Secretary Wirtz said, "is the establishment of a 'job development program.' Twenty experts will actively seek out the jobs in government and private industry that are available in the city, and will catalogue the skills they require."

In addition, 30 "intern counselors" will be available to visit the homes of the trainees and provide a variety of counseling activities. Counselors will be drawn from recent college graduates, selected in cooperation with the colleges of the City.

The initial cost of taxpayers will be $2 million in Manpower Development and Training Act funds. The Others in the photograph are vice-presidents of the New Jersey State Building & Construction Trades Council and Executive Board members.

City of New York will provide $1 million for the creation of the neighborhood youth counseling centers and other necessary services not authorized by the Manpower Development and Training Act.

"This imaginative program," Secretary Wirtz said, "will enable thousands of young New Yorkers to obtain guidance, counseling and training services which in the past have been either unavailable, or unknown to them . . . I hope it will serve as an example to communities across the Nation of what can be done to meet difficult employment and manpower problems, once the decision is made to act."

Report from the

Continuing Dividends

NOW that school is out hundreds of thousands of American families will be putting into action long-made plans for summer vacations. During July and August we may expect to see the peak activity in the business of vacationing.

This means that highways will be extra busy with traffic of families going to the lakes, seashore, mountains or merely to Aunt Mary's. But we do see an additional meaning and perhaps a warning: drive safely with due regard to your family with you and to the other families on the highway. If we all use an extra measure of care, we can greatly reduce the highway toll which is rising tragically.

But highway safety is not the only area of care which the American family on holiday needs to watch. The hazards of the vacation period are many and safety experts are warning us we must be careful all over the lot. For example, water use and water sports are growing in popularity. Boating is booming; fishing is, of course, as always popular, and swimming continues to be a main American participant sport. The water areas have their own hazards and we should use care in or on the water.

An inconvenient and sometimes dangerous annoyance this time of the year is the variety of plant poisons—poison ivy, poison oak, etc. A little vigilance can serve to prevent disturbing interruptions to an otherwise happy summer.

And there are other things to watch—sunburn, over-exertion to the point of exhaustion and over-indulgence in both food and drink. These and many other activities have their summer hazards which we can all beware of as we set off on the annual holiday with the wife and kids.

One final note on the vacations: we are reminded that the reason we have vacations is based on the work of the trade unions. The men who founded the labor movement and instituted the fight which has been a continuing one for shorter hours, better conditions, and higher wages deserve our blessings. The best we can do is to continue the efforts to better ourselves and the standards of living for ourselves and our families. This is a thought we should remember as we enjoy our vacations.

AFL-CIO COLLEGE MERIT SCHOLARSHIPS

How to apply

The national AFL-CIO awards six merit scholarships each year to high school students of exceptional ability. Each award covers four years of study. The scholarship program is conducted in cooperation with the National Merit Scholarship Corporation. The amount of each stipend is adjusted to individual need, and is set in accordance with the formula of the National Merit Scholarship Corporation. There is a maximum of $1,500 per year, or $6,000 for four years.

Two scholarships are awarded in each of three geographical sections of the United States. One scholarship in each area will be awarded to a student either of whose parents is currently a member of a union affiliated with the AFL-CIO. One scholarship awarded in each geographical area will be unrestricted; i.e., the student may, or may not, be a child of a trade unionist.

HOW TO APPLY

There is no AFL-CIO scholarship application blank. All applicants must participate in the National Merit Scholarship Testing Program. Each spring semester the qualifying test in the Merit Scholarship Program is administered in all participating high schools. These tests are given a year prior to the award. Second semester juniors and first semester seniors (those who graduate in February) are eligible to take the test. Each participant pays a fee of one dollar to cover the cost of administration. In hardship cases the fee is waived.

Check with your school principal or guidance counselor to be sure of the exact date, time, and place that this test is being given.

SCHOOL PARTICIPATION IN THE PROGRAM

All public, private, and parochial schools registered with the National Merit Scholarship Corporation participate in this program.

In the event your school is not a member of the National Merit Scholarship program, you may participate individually by writing to the National Merit Scholarship Corporation, 1580 Sherman Avenue, Evanston, Illinois, which will attempt to make special arrangements for you.

WHERE AND WHAT THE GRANTEE WILL STUDY

Scholarships will be awarded for study at any accredited college or university in the United States. It is the obligation of the winners to make all arrangements for admission to the school of their choice and to maintain good standing throughout the four-year period of the scholarship.

For further information, contact:

Anthony S. Bridwell, Director of Development, National Merit Scholarship Corporation, 1580 Sherman Ave., Evanston, Ill., or Lawrence Rogin, Director, Department of Education, AFL-CIO, 815 Sixteenth St., N.W., Washington 6, D. C.

Maso on Group To Obtain Jobs For Minorities

A bi-partisan committee of legislators, clergymen, businessmen, labor and civic leaders was appointed by Governor Richard J. Hughes to assist minorities in winning an even break in employment.

Sal Maso, Third Vice President of LIU and president of the AFL-CIO Building and Construction Trades Council was among those named to the committee.

Hughes, who met with craft union leaders and contractors announced the appointment of the 20-member committee. He said the state had met, and is continuing to meet, many of its problems in education and housing.

"But basic to the solution of these questions is economics—the right of every man to compete fairly for a job or professional position fully consonant with his abilities," Hughes said. "If we make progress in this area, we will at the same time take giant steps in solving corollary problems," he added.

Hughes said after his meeting with labor leaders last week that he would appoint such a committee to implement existing law and use moral and persuasive force to get minority groups equal job consideration.

THE UNION CONTRACT

Human rights in the economic field, as in the political, are guaranteed to the individual only by organization. These rights are irrevocable only when they are reduced to writing. Political democracy is based on the Magna Charta, the Bill of Rights, the Declaration of Independence, and the Constitution. Economic rights of individuals are protected by the union contract.

The first attempts at collective bargaining resulted in the simplest form of written agreement—a “bill of prices,” or wage scale—posted in the shop by the master journeyman.

The earliest agreement of which we have a record was of this type. It was negotiated in the printing industry in Philadelphia in 1795. Shortly after this the journeymen selected a committee to visit individual employers with the “price list,” to establish uniform wages in an area. This practice began as early as 1802. In the 1830’s the written agreement was extended to cover some working conditions, as well as wages and hours.

At the middle of the 19th century it was used by a number of local craft unions.

Over the years it was found necessary to commit more and more details to writing, and today the contract is a lengthy, detailed, and complicated document. No one intended it to grow long and complicated. It grew slowly and gradually out of the accumulated wisdom of patient negotiators. Behind every one of the existing clauses in a contract there is a sound reason.

Today the union agreement is a substantial property right—a worker’s title to his job. This has a personal value that is as real as a deed to a house or title to a car. It sets forth his legal rights, not only to a weekly wage, but to health and welfare benefits, holidays and vacations, and perhaps a pension. Even more important are seniority and arbitration clauses, which guarantee job continuity and the right to a bilateral settlement of disputes.

America's Outdoors — Campers and Congestion

by Saul Miller

A station wagon topped with a tarpaulin-lashed carrier and loaded with children and gear picks its way down a two-lane forest road. It stops briefly before a small sign staked in the ground, turns into a rutted dirt road, and moves slowly past the clearings in the woods.

It pulls up before one of the clearings. The driver gets out, quickly inspects the area, turns and signals approval. In a moment children tumble out of the station wagon. The tarpaulin is loosened and gear is heaped in the clearing. The family has found its home for the night.

This scene will be repeated some 20 million times this year in every national forest, national park and state camping facility as urban Americans continue their rediscovery of the land, its beauties and challenges, its grandeur—and its litter.

And they will find this year, as they have found in the past decade, that the national and state parks and forests are not prepared to cope with the hordes of campers—especially those who cling to their urban conveniences and are not inclined to live sans flush toilets, running hot water, television and the rest.

Most Americans living in urban or suburban surroundings have at best a tenuous relationship with the woods, streams and mountains of the nation. This is a vast and wondrous land, richly endowed with a great variety of natural phenomena and geological formations. Neither the movies, television nor plane trips can substitute for a drive on the new or old highways etched in the plains and the river beds and spiraling up through rugged mountains and down jagged canyons.

But driving the highways provides quickly passing views. For a closer and prolonged examination, to hunt, to fish, to investigate the terrain or to drink deeply of the beauty and gasp in exclamation at the majesty and sweep of the land a campsite is necessary either for an overnight visit or as a base of operations for days or weeks.

In the past 10 years, fast, modern roads, increased leisure time, relatively inexpensive and simple-to-operate camping equipment, a rise in incomes and in the ownership of automobiles have coincided to bring an almost unbelievable pressure on all recreational facilities, especially the camping facilities of the national and state parks and forests.

Urban Americans are deeply involved with exploring their country. They are plumbing its resources for recreation, education or just simply to get away from it all, to camp at 10,000 feet where there are no disturbances except nature's own, where a clearing in the woods becomes a challenge to modern man to provide his shelter, food, light and amusements.

The trade union movement has provided an important stimulus to the outdoor recreation boom of the postwar years. Collective bargaining resulting in improved living standards, longer paid vacations and earlier retirement on decent pensions has increased automobile sales and the purchase of outdoor camping and recreation equipment. Labor's legislative campaigns have helped provide the new roads and the limited overhauling and expansion of facilities in the parks and forests.

A day on the road rolling through any section of the nation provides the evidence that many American workers are finding it possible for the first time to pack gear and families into cars and take off for the woods, the river valleys, the mountains or the seashore, not in search of new jobs or because they must move along to exist but as pure and simple recreation and education.

And every summer the recreational facilities creak and groan under the onslaught. The overall picture looks something like this.

Only 12 percent of the acreage of the United States, or about 283 million acres, is in public recreation areas. About 80 percent of this acreage is federally owned and managed.

But of the 25,000 estimated recreation areas located on the 283 million acres, 80 percent is state-operated although comprising a little over 12 percent of the total land and water involved.

These figures for 1960 come from a report of the Outdoor Recreation Resources Review Commission to the President and Congress. This report shows that about 3 million persons could be accommodated on 105,000 acres of the total set aside for picnicking; 757,000 persons could be handled on 10,699 acres for swimming in pools or beaches; 300,000 on 50,000 acres for winter sports; 82,000 on 42,000 acres of historic sites.

Overnight facilities in four categories were available for about 1 million persons in 1960, with 75 percent of the facilities in campgrounds, 12 percent in cabins, 7 percent in trailer camps and 6 percent in hotels, motels and lodges.

About 70 percent of the overnight facilities were on federal lands, with 38 percent of all camping capacity in national forests. National parks accounted for 13 percent and state parks for 20 percent.

The ORRRC report disclosed that nearly 5,000 areas involved in its survey showed a day-use capacity of 4 million persons at one time and one million in overnight capacity for a total of 5 million.

Of day-time capacity, the report said, "the maximum potential capacity that could be made available under presently existing conditions could accommodate 10 million users and another 2.7 million could be accommodated if additional spaces were developed as a result of major changes in access, water supply, etc." This, plus planned additions in the 1960-64 period, could accommodate 14.5 million additional day-time users on existing areas—more than three times the 1960 capacity.

Of overnight use, using the same approach, the report said planned additions by 1964 would accommodate 658,000 persons, potential capacity use could add another 7 million persons and 1.7 million could be accommodated if major changes were made—a total of 9.4 million or nine times the 1960 capacity.

This is a rough inventory of the present facilities and the possibilities in the future. What about use?

Total daytime visits in 1960 were 515 million—about one-third to federal areas. The national forests received more than half of the visits to federal areas.

Overnight use was about one-tenth of day-time use, or about 51 million visits, over half on federal areas. The national forests accounted for two-thirds of all these visits.

That's the way it was in 1960. But look what's been happening in one decade.

In 1950 recreational visits to national parks totaled 32.8 million; in 1960 the figure hit 72.3 million.

The national forests saw the 1950 influx of 27.4 million jump to 92.6 million in 1960.

The recreational dams of the Corps of Engineers witnessed a fantastic rise from 16 million in 1950 to 106 million ten years later.

A simple projection of the visits to federally-owned lands in the 1960s at the same rate of growth as during the past 10 years produces "some utterly fantastic figures," says one ORRRC report. Present tastes and preferences for outdoor recreation can be expected to continue, the population will increase as will life expectancy, leisure time, real income, urbanization and mobility.

There is little doubt that picnicking and camping are the two most popular recreational activities involving outdoor use of land and that picnic areas and campgrounds are the least expensive recreation areas to build and maintain. This accounts for the concentration in developing and expanding these types of areas in the 1960-64 period.

The day-long drive into the country for sightseeing and picnicking is basic to the urban tradition. Less traditional and popular is the camping trip. But its appeal is manifold: it makes economically possible a cross-country auto trip from the populous urban east to the Pacific; it gives urbanites glorying vicariously in their vast country the opportunity to see it at first hand; it exchanges the elating bustle of the cities for the softer sounds of the woods, the streams, the mountains; it furnishes the opportunity for a mild identification with the pioneering history of the nation.

All of these and other factors—including the simple pleasure of camping—put this writer and his family on the road last summer for a memorable trip of the western United States.

The problem was simple enough—there was an unfulfilled desire to tour the country, especially the West, while the family was still intact. Enroute there would be stops at some of the great cities of the West—Denver, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Salt Lake City; a visit to Disneyland to assess manmade recreation; a few stops with long unvisited relatives. And of course there were the natural wonders—the mountains, the lakes, the canyons and the deserts and also the animal life ranging from Pacific Ocean seals to Yellowstone Park bears.

A trip of this scope normally entails a minimum of 6,000 miles of driving and, to take more than a passing lunge at the country, at the very least three to four weeks. This time and distance factor, if converted into motel and restaurant costs, would make the venture financially improbable. If the lodging costs are removed and campfire-cooked meals substituted, the cost of the trip can be reduced by two-thirds and brought within reach of a family of six—our family.

It is this simple economic exercise that brings most campers to the forests and parks. And during the exposure many become confirmed campers by choice rather than by financial calculation.

The Miller odyssey, as the trip was termed when it was being charted on a map after its completion, covered five weeks and 9,100 miles and cost some $800 or about $25 a day. It included a Disneyland spree, a full sightseeing and dining out day in San Francisco and other non-camping activities.

Only five days were spent in motels—mostly on the trip home when one of the drivers had to leave early. Three days were spent with relatives. The rest were spent in campgrounds, mostly National Forest sites, a few state parks and one city park in Wyoming.

Nearly 40 percent of the cost went for gas, oil, repairs and a new tire for the large station wagon, topped with a box carrier, that comfortably handled the passengers and gear. About 20 percent was spent on gifts, souvenirs, sightseeing, entertainment, refreshments, campsites and parking fees. About 25 percent went for food and ice and the remaining 15 percent went for restaurant meals and motels.

The family had been on shorter camping trips in previous years and had acquired some of the basic gear—a gasoline stove and lantern, sleeping bags and air mattresses, a large ice chest and water jug, a fly and some small tools and odds and ends. For the trip, two new tents were purchased, one to sleep four and one two-man tent. A few extra items were added, such as a battery-powered lantern to supplement the gasoline light and a lightweight folding table. A duffle bag and an old suitcase rounded out the equipment, plus some old pots and pans and silverware from the kitchen and a pair of folding chairs.

Assuming no camping gear at all, to outfit a family of six in the above fashion would take between $350 and $400. However, this is a one-time expenditure. Buying good equipment ensures use for many, many years. The savings from week-long camping trips in lieu of motels and restaurants will cover the cost of the equipment.

When the family is finally on the road there are a number of logistical problems, all rather easily met—food, water, ice, gasoline and laundry. These usually are found in a cluster in almost every small town or crossroads and a one-stop-for-all experience is not uncommon and provides a break from the perpetual motion odometer and for car-weary youngsters.

In a typical national forest campsite there is a clearing in the woods, a flat area large enough to pitch a tent, a wooden or stone table and benches, a fire-place or cookstove and usually close at hand a water pipe providing safe drinking water. Fifty or 100 yards away, accessible to a number of campsites, is a usually clean privy. There normally are no lights, no sinks or flush toilets, no showers, no hot water, no power outlets for electric blankets or television sets. There is privacy and simplicity and a challenge to put the simple camping gear to work to provide shelter and light and cooked food and hot water for washing.

In other camps, mostly in the national parks and in some state parks, there are more conveniences but also less privacy as campsites are placed closer together so as to be nearer the facilities.

National park campsites usually are closer to the natural wonders that the parks were created to preserve. Development of campsites may be on the basis of eight sites to an acre or more. The national forests, covering vast expanses of acreage, usually develop campsites further removed from the points of interest but based on about four sites to the acre. State parks will vary greatly in facilities and accommodations, many intended only for brief overnight stays, others combining conveniences and privacy.

Campers usually fall into several groups—the touring camper who makes overnight or two to three-day visits; those who stay in a site for four or five days or a week and move on to another site for a similar period; those who set up camp in a favored park or forest and spend several weeks, using the camp as a base of operations.

The Miller odyssey was of the touring variety, concentrated on the western United States. Its itinerary perhaps provides a clue to why the roads will be jammed, the camps bursting, this summer.

Starting in Washington, D. C., in early July, the family moved in slow stages through the middle of the country to Denver. Enroute there were camping stops at a state park in Ohio, complete with a thunderstorm; a camp along the Mississippi River marking the site of Indian burial grounds and an uncommon amount of mosquitoes; a motel in Kansas in face of car radio warnings of tornadoes; and a windswept campsite alongside a newly-built dam in far western Kansas, where electric outlets were located at the base of utility poles for the convenience of campers.

These were overnight stops, with the sightseeing limited mostly to what could be spotted from a moving car. But for the youngsters this was their first crossing of the fabled Mississippi (they were disappointed that it was not more heroic in proportions). It was also the first exposure to the limitless plains stretching to the horizon in all directions, the first sight of a Kansas town marked at great distances from the actual location by sky-soaring elevators.

From Denver the course moved southwest through the Pike National Forest and Colorado Springs over the continental divide at about 11,000 feet into a riverside canyon camp in the San Juan National Forest. Here the youngsters wandered up the side of a canyon just before dusk and were brought down by a rescue party, somewhat bruised but unhurt.

By this time the family was a smoothly-working camping unit and could set up its tents and have a hot meal going in about 45 minutes. Light, efficient and not-too-much equipment, plus assigned chores and duties, made the difference.

Mesa Verde National Park, with its Indian cliff dwellings high atop a flattened mountain, was our first experience of the millions of vacationers, tourists and campers converging on the parks and their wondrous sights. The tour schedules and the guided walks were efficient and well-planned, but the scene in some aspects was not unlike a visit to Radio City in New York.

From the Mesa Verde to Gallup, N. Mex., was a trip through the Navajo wastelands—an almost endless nothingness with hogans and shacks scattered here and there. The youngsters were overwhelmed and they began to identify all wasteland or barren areas on the rest of the trip as Indian reservations, with appropriate commentaries on the visible injustice.

At sunset the Painted Desert and the Petrified Forest in Arizona were at their most beautiful and eerie. There is a deep gratitude that these sites have been preserved by the government, for this is a strange and unique part of our country.

The journey continued to Oak Creek Canyon south of Flagstaff, where a wooded campsite along a cool stream and a natural rockslide in a drop in the creek delighted the youngsters. The next stop was the Grand Canyon, again a bustling tourist attraction but one that can quiet chattering children by its awesome dimensions.

More desert mileage was eased by a water-rigged air cooler hanging from the right front window to bring a degree of humidity into the parched interior of the station wagon. At Page, Ariz., car trouble threw the schedule off a day and gave the family a taste of the intolerable heat of desert camping at the newly-developed Glen Canyon Recreation Area. It provided also a look at a gigantic dam abuilding, with the huge earthmoving equipment grinding away through the night and a new bridge spanning an 800-foot drop into the depths of the canyon.

The odyssey continued through Zion National Park into the Lake Mead Recreation Area for swimming and a tour of Boulder Dam, an impressive demonstration of a wisely-spent tax dollar. Through the neon empire of Las Vegas into the Mojave Desert at night to Los Angeles and the first leg of the trip was climaxed by pitching a tent on a relative's lawn to house the male youngsters of both families.

Disneyland faded quickly as the journey resumed up the California coast. The savage beauty of the bare, jagged cliffs dropping precipitously to the ocean fitted in well with the late William Randolph Hearst's castle at San Simeon. A fog-shrouded campsite near the water's edge kept the campfire going late into the night and produced nightmarish shadows.

The Spanish mission at Carmel and a visit to Monterey brought a new understanding of this part of the country and its traditions and background. And moving up the coast to San Francisco, the family was certain its decision to pass up the interior mountains and lakes had been well taken.

A few miles north of the Golden Gate Bridge a California state park high over the ocean provided an excellent campsite base for a visit to San Francisco. Camping and touring clothes gave way to dresses and jackets and a fling at the city's fine restaurants and attractions.

We moved northward into the giant redwood country and a state park provided a memorable campsite in the midst of the towering trees. Slowly the trip

TO THE OFFICERS AND MEMBERS OF ALL LOCAL UNIONS, DISTRICT, STATE, AND PROVINCIAL COUNCILS OF THE UNITED BROTHERHOOD OF CARPENTERS AND JOINERS OF AMERICA AND THE WOOD, WIRE, AND METAL LATHERS INTERNATIONAL UNION

Greetings:

In the early part of 1963 the General Executive Boards of both organizations instructed the General Presidents to appoint committees for the purpose of negotiating and completing an agreement on ceiling systems.

The committees have met on several occasions, and on June 10, 1963 the committees agreed to and recommended the agreement as printed in this communication.

It is the desire of the two General Presidents that the Local Unions make every reasonable effort from this point forward to adjust directly and amicably any jurisdictional disputes which exist, or may arise in the future, in accordance with the understanding reached.

We are printing in full the report of the committee.

moved to the very top of California and into the Rogue River National Forest in Oregon and Crater Lake where, on July 30, the children engaged in a vigorous snowball fight while breakfast was being prepared. The blue of the volcanic lake was almost an exaggeration as one gazed down at it from the heights above. Looking southward, the High Sierras spread out in stark beauty and beckoned the camper.

But the journey then turned eastward and moved across the barrenness of southern Oregon into Idaho and dipped down toward Utah. The sagebrush and tumbleweed, the hallmark of so much of the west, grew monotonous and then suddenly the lush rich valleys of eastern Utah appeared. A camp in the Wasatch National Forest provided an easy access for a visit to Salt Lake City and a swim in the Great Lake.

North and east again into Wyoming and the Jackson Hole country, with a campsite at Grand Teton National Park complete with hot showers, stores and a full quota of campers. The Grand Tetons are overpowering, craggy and snow-topped in August. The park abuts Yellowstone on the south and a day-long expedition was undertaken to visit the geysers, the lake, the bears. Here the jam became more evident, especially the traffic, with license plates reading like a roll of the states and the Canadian provinces. Old Faithful required a pre-lunch and post-lunch viewing as the youngsters valiantly elieked away with their box cameras (and came home with some fine shots).

Through the park and heading east there was the hush of the copper-hued Shoshone canyon and the breathtaking switchbacks of the Big Horn Mountains. The schedule broke down somewhere along the line and camp turned out to be a rather dusty small city park. It did for the night.

Campers take a break at Crater Lake.

The ride through the Black Hills brought a new feeling—the towering heights were replaced with a new ruggedness. The mass pilgrimage to Mount Rushmore brought almost larger crowds than elsewhere on the trip and, as the wagon headed toward Rapid City, a note of lurid commercialism crept in. This had been noted elsewhere—the “natural wonders,” the animal farms and “zoos,” the roadsigns starting hundreds of miles away and keyed to whetting the appetites of ear-cooped youngsters.

From South Dakota, with one driver leaving, the family drove home in slow stages, stopping in motels until finally the wagon pulled up in front of the house in Washington bearing visible traces of its journey. The youngsters were physically in top condition, hardened by weeks of sleeping in tents or under the stars. They had learned they could exist reasonably well without television, dishwashers, refrigerators or electric lights. They were ready to tackle anything that came along and they had absorbed some of the splendor of the land and its people and understood a bit more what America is.

A few years ago, a congressman made a cross-country camping trip with his family of five children and filed a report with a House committee. Most of his camping was done in the national forests. His report urged top priority for access roads to campsites and a plea for simple, spacious, private campgrounds without showers, laundry facilities and electrical outlets. The national parks and the state parks should be allowed to satisfy the demand for more conveniences, he said.

To finance new campsites, which he urged be located on streams or lakes, he recommended a users' stamp fee similar to a hunting or fishing license, a proposal now before Congress in the Administration's recreation program.

The Kennedy Administration has introduced legislation in the 88th Congress setting forth the broad outlines of such a national recreation policy and coordinating the activities of the various national and state agencies all involved in or forced into the recreation business by the insatiable demand.

But the government must move rapidly if enough land is to be set aside for conservation and recreation uses. The expanding population, coupled with advances in technology, has accelerated the exploitation of lands for suburban developments, highways, parking lots, industrial sites and other purposes. Drainage, navigation improvements and pollution may be reducing recreation water resources at an even more rapid rate.

As outdoor recreation resources are diminishing, the demand is rapidly increasing. All responsible predictions indicate a continued high growth in use of recreation resources. There is general agreement that the available supply of facilities is inadequate now. Unless an overall national policy approach institutes remedial action, the present inadequacies in outdoor recreation will be compounded and multiplied.

COLLEGE IS AMERICA'S BEST FRIEND

HAVE YOU SUPPORTED THE COLLEGE OF YOUR CHOICE?

America needs ideas to hold its place among nations. Ideas stimulate progress . . . in science and invention, in business and trade, in the cultural impact America makes on world affairs.

But are we heading for trouble? Most good ideas come from higher education. And colleges aren't keeping up with population growth. Some are overcrowded and, in ten years, applicants will double.

It would be tragic if a great nation like ours should fall behind because it lacked ideas, and leaders. Our colleges must have more classrooms and libraries, up-to-date laboratory equipment and many more top-quality teachers.

Don't let this happen. Give to the college of your choice—help it further America's future.

Southern Lathers Delegation Meeting

Report from the

GENERAL PRESIDENT

SINCE my last report I have received some sad news. I know many of the members knew Catherine Fleuck and will regret to hear that she passed away July 18, in Cleveland, Ohio. Funeral services were held July 22. Flowers were sent from the International Union as well as from some of the Local Unions who received the information prior to her funeral. Vice-President Ferguson represented the International Union at her funeral and many members from the surrounding area, who received the notice in time, also attended. She served as secretary to President McSorely from 1916 until 1955, and then as my secretary until we left Cleveland in 1956, so she spent her whole working life with our International Union. Everyone who knew her loved her and many of the old timers who met her at each Convention will be saddened, I know, by the news of her death.

We have had numerous communications from Local Unions and Councils regarding the newly negotiated Agreement on Ceilings between the Lathers and Carpenters dated June 10, 1963, since it was placed in the Journal. Since these communications have been so numerous, it would be difficult to answer them individually, therefore, the Committee requested me to, in my next report, thank the many officers who took their time to commend the Committee for what they thought was an outstanding job. The communications commending the Committee, from these officers representing the members, far exceeded the communications received protesting the agreement. Of course there were a number of protests from representatives who are dissatisfied with the Agreement, but since we were negotiating for all of the locals and councils in the United States and Canada, we knew before we started it would be impossible to satisfy each and every local and council. Our hope was to negotiate an agreement which would benefit the majority of the members, and this seems to have been accomplished on the portion of the work negotiated on. The Committee, of course, will continue to negotiate the disputed points, not yet resolved, around the first part of September and they would welcome any constructive suggestions for the negotiations on these disputes still left to be settled and I add my expression to that of the Committee. I sincerely hope the disputes between our two trades can be settled for many reasons which I do not have to explain to the representatives in the field, whether they be on the International level or on the Local level. It has been my ambition since becoming General President to work out good relationships with all of the other International Unions and we have done so with the exception of the Carpenters and I sincerely hope that our disputes can be settled with the Carpenters because I think we can spend our time much better in many other ways to benefit our membership, rather than fight over jurisdictional disputes, particularly in the areas where we are threatened with non-union contractors and journeymen and other organizations of that type which are springing up both on the employee side and on the employer side.

At a recent meeting of the National Joint Committees for Promotion, the machinery was set up to dissolve the National Bureau since we could not agree upon the continuance of the National Bureau on the unilateral basis. We have three years to dissolve the National Bureau and I am sincerely hoping that before that time we can get the legislation passed which we have introduced in order that we may again function on a bilateral basis. Our Bill was heard on August 5 and 6 by a sub-committee of the House, but I have not, as yet, heard the results of their action. In areas where there is a Bureau, all local unions and contractors should send letters to their Congressmen and Senators asking them to approve this Bill, which is H.R. 5690. Last year our National Bureau was the only organization supporting this Bill, but this year we have a number of International Unions and International Contractors Associations supporting the Bill. Funds are badly needed to have a representative to continue to push this Bill and any Bureau that has funds which they could use for this purpose should send their checks to MR. EDWARD TORRENCE, 2625 WEST PETERSON, CHICAGO 45, ILLINOIS, since unless the Bill is followed up by a qualified person, explaining and urging the Congressmen and Senators to support it, we will not be able to get it passed.

The Building Trades Department, of course, is supporting the Bill, but they do not have the time, nor do I, to follow up and do this job too, therefore we need a man and we need the money for him in order to do the job.

Now that the National Joint Apprenticeship Committee has funds and is in the process of setting up a National Director, we need this type of Bill more than ever before. I have always contended that we should have had a very active apprenticeship program when we started the promotional program so we would have sufficient skilled and competent mechanics to man the work we promoted. This summer has proven this to be true . . . we had quite a shortage of lathers in a number of places and still have. I just attended the California State Council meeting and a number of Local Unions reported a shortage of men. San Francisco reported a need of 50 men, but since we have put out the word throughout the Country for the need of men in San Francisco, any journeymen or secretaries who are interested should check first with Kenneth Edwards, Business Agent of Local 65, to see if they still need men before going to San Francisco, since, as you all know, conditions can change over night in any area.

Fraternally yours,

The metal lath and plaster ceiling of the auditorium of the Battelle Memorial Institute consists of nearly 450 small flat surfaces, so arranged as to distribute sound uniformly over the audience. During the dedication exercises, shown here, President B.D. Thomas, at lectern, described the acoustics as "quite phenomenally good."

Alternating Planes Distribute Sound Uniformly

METAL lath and plaster recently took their place as an instrument of improved communications in the furthering of science. Specifically, metal lath and plaster were used in the creation of an auditorium for Battelle Memorial Institute, Columbus, Ohio, of which a speaker at the dedication exercises said "the acoustics are quite phenomenally good. . . . For . . . our technical meetings, our conferences . . . we need a meeting place such as this where a speaker can be heard and where a questioner or a man in the audience who also wants to make a speech can be heard."

This perfect acoustical treatment was attained through the creation of a hard surface plastered suspended sound-dispersion ceiling, having nearly 450 small flat surfaces, so arranged as to distribute sound uniformly over the audience. It was formed of channel, metal lath, gypsum plaster base coat and hard white coat finish. With metal lath, it was possible to erect this ceiling without special jigs or fixtures to meet specifications requiring special planes.

The 600-seat auditorium is complete with facilities for demonstrations, lectures, film projection and use of television both to and from the facility. It is housed in a 92 ft. x 170 ft. brick and stone building, with small conference rooms, dressing rooms and a lobby that can be used as an exhibition hall. The total cost of the facility was slightly over $800,000.

The architect was Dan A. Carmichael and lathing and plastering contractor was Buel Gatterdam Company, Inc., both of Columbus. Acoustical engineers were Bolt, Beranek & Newman, Inc., Cambridge, Massachusetts.

Said Harry M. Miller, Institute Board Chairman, in dedication, "This fine auditorium is . . . the product of the wise and prudent employment of material resources, intelligence and vision. It will be a tool which you can use in the onward progress of Battelle toward an ever more significant place in the world of science and engineering." Replied Dr. B. D. Thomas, president, in acceptance address, "This new auditorium is a symbol of a new Battelle."

Thanks to the good acoustics—made more readily and more economically possible through good designing with metal lath and plaster—every one of the capacity audience heard clearly the plans for further growth and expanded dedication to the advancement of science.

Motel Operator Uses Metal Lath and Tile

When asked to give tips on successful motel operation based on his considerable experience, Lyle Overman, owner-operator of the ultra-modern 75-unit Suntide Inn, Oklahoma City, and former American Motor Hotel Association president, included the advice that:

"You should have a combination tub and shower in every bath, and you can't use too much ceramic tile. Make sure that the construction behind the tile in the shower-tub area is metal lath and portland cement plaster. The use of gypsum wallboard or other substitutes is apt to be unsatisfactory; water will seep in and ruin it."

New Executive Named By D.C. Building Congress

Mrs. Thelma Nielsen Dawson, administrative secretary of the Washington Building and Construction Trades Council and a longtime friend of the Lathers International Union, has been named executive secretary of the Washington Building Congress.

Mrs. Dawson succeeds Mrs. Gertrude B. Cleary, executive secretary of the congress since its beginning in 1937, who retired July 12. Mrs. Dawson becomes the second woman to represent the 1,500 male members of the congress.

Mrs. Dawson started with the AFL in June 1931 in the research department. She has always worked for labor organizations and has maintained an active participation in the Office Employees Union which she joined in 1932.

Associated with the building industry here for more than 20 years, Mrs. Dawson began her career as secretary to the executive secretary of the Washington Building and Construction Trades Council in 1942. She later became administrative secretary of the council and served as secretary to five of the organization's executive secretaries.

In 1955, Mrs. Dawson became assistant director of women's activities for the then newly merged AFL-CIO. In 1957, she returned to her post as administrative secretary of the Washington Building and Construction Trades Council.

She is chairman of the District Women's Savings Bonds Committee, and is a charter member and vice president of the Greater Washington Chapter of Women in Construction. She also is director of the Arthritis and Rheumatism Association of Metropolitan Washington.

Mrs. Dawson is a member of the speakers bureau of the AFL-CIO, and a labor consultant to the Division of Trade Union Exchange Programs of the Department of Labor. She also is a member of the Advertising Club of Washington, the Metropolitan Washington Board of Trade, the National Conference of Christians and Jews and the Virginia Fair Representation Committee.

Upon leaving the Washington Building Trades Council, the local business agents presented her with a gold charm bracelet embedded with 21 diamonds—one for each year of service to the organization.

Both General President Mashburn and General Secretary Mills wish Thelma the best of good luck in her new position.

1935—First Apprenticeship Class of Local #42

RESURFACING IMPROVES DRIVING SAFETY

FRANKLIN D. Roosevelt Drive, along New York City's East River, provides motorists with a four lane, limited access route along a substantial length of Manhattan island. The exigencies of planning and construction, and the exceedingly high value of real estate, have dictated that the driveway go through an underpass from 54th to 60th streets. The underpass is open on the river side, but fumes and spatter from the hundreds of thousands of cars which have passed through it in the twenty-five years since the Drive was opened, have darkened the concrete walls beyond any hope of maintaining a clean surface.

Faced with the need to keep this fluorescent lighted underpass clean and bright, Highway Commissioner John T. Carroll's staff of engineers studied the problem and came up with the ultimate solution. As described by Simon Ryder, Assistant Deputy Chief Engineer—Design, Department of Highways, City of New York, the solution was a resurfacing with ceramic and terra cotta tiles.

To make this installation efficient-ly, walls were cleaned of all dirt, grease, film, efflorescence and other foreign matter. One-half inch diameter lamp wicking was installed from the ultimate height of the installation to the existing curb and out to the face of the tile midway between expansion joints. Power-driven fasteners were used to attach 4.0 lb., 3/8 in., copper-bearing rib metal lath to the wall. Rib metal lath was installed to a height of 10 ft. on the 16 ft. walls. Scratch coat, at least 5/8 in. thick, was applied, and while still plastic, deeply scored. Later, and prior to the application of the 1/4 in. thick plumb coat, the scratch coat was thoroughly moistened with clean water; applied not earlier than the day prior to the setting of tiles, the plumb coat was rodded and floated flush with guide strips and then scored with a notched trowel to produce a rough surface. Both the scratch and the plumb coats were of portland cement mortar, consisting of one part cement, four parts sand and

To provide a permanent bond for the application of a readily cleaned new surface of the underpass walls, powder-driven fasteners were embedded in the concrete, and to them was attached 3/8" rib metal lath. The rib metal lath extended to a height of 10 ft. on the 16 ft. walls.

ABOVE: Scratch coat was applied to the 3/8" rib metal lath to a thickness of 5/8 in. and, while still plastic, deeply scored. BELOW: Not more than 24 hours after the application of the plumb coat, terra cotta tiles were back-buttered with one-quarter inch of setting mortar and pressed into place against the plumb coat. Excess mortar, forced put of all joints during the emplacement filled the 1/4 in. space between tiles and was tooled out to produce a half-round joint.

White glazed tiles, either terra cotta or ceramic, buttered across their entire backs with 1/4 in. of setting mortar were placed against the plumb coat and firmly pressed in place with a slight twisting movement. It was a requirement of the contract that, in pressing and twisting the tile in place, excess mortar would be forced out of all joints, to insure adequate mortar behind the tile. The setting mortar consisted of one part portland cement, one part special additive and one-and-one-half parts sand.

Exposed mortar surfaces were painted with vinyl-based paint.

Results? Walls are easier to clean, thereby maintaining more efficient distribution of the light from the overhead fluorescent fixtures.

Blitman Construction Corporation was general contractor. Plastering and tile setting was done by Mario & di-Bono Plastering Company, Inc.

The finished resurfacing, with metal lath, mortar and tile, presents a durable, easily maintained surface. The increase in the amount of light reflected from the original lighting installation makes for better driving conditions and hence, for increased safety.

Lather Honored By Washington Building Congress

Report from the

GENERAL SECRETARY-TREASURER

THE fact that the safety record over last year's Labor Day weekend was the poorest in recent years, serves to point up one stark fact. Too many workers, their wives and children and their friends, lost their lives during Labor's own holiday. A tragic total of 678 were killed. Traffic deaths on the highway—501; deaths by drowning—57; boating accidents—23 and miscellaneous—97. These unnecessary accidents served to turn what should have been a period of rejoicing and gaiety for workers into a time of mourning for altogether too many of our members, their families and their friends.

The labor movement cannot and does not condone this senseless slaughter and suffering over the three-day holiday that labor fought so long and hard to establish.

Your International officers are particularly concerned about reducing this heavy annual toll of deaths and serious injuries over the coming Labor Day weekend.

This year the AFL-CIO Standing Committee on Safety and Occupational Health, in cooperation with the Labor Conference of the National Safety Council, is sponsoring the fifth annual nation-wide campaign to reduce the tragic toll of accidents. They have produced an excellent campaign booklet, which is available to all unions, that contains many practical suggestions and materials to aid your local in conducting an effective educational and promotional campaign among your members and their friends. This booklet can be obtained by dropping a card to:

Labor Day Safety Campaign Committee
c/o National Safety Council
425 North Michigan Avenue
Chicago 11, Illinois

Your use of it in the 1963 Labor Day Safety Campaign is in the best tradition of the organized labor movement—the preservation of life and limb, and the lessening of pain and suffering. Participation in such campaigns has proved an excellent device for building good relations, not only with the rank and file of a local, but with the public at large. It is a public service of the first order.

We will all be proud and happy on September third if, through our mutually coordinated efforts, this year's Labor Day weekend results in a dramatic decrease in the unnecessary loss of lives among trade unionists and their wives and children during Labor's own holiday. Who knows—it might result in saving yours or a fellow member's life.

Key Local Elections Due This Year

IT's 1963, an odd year sandwiched between the important congressional elections of last fall and the crucial presidential election of 1964.

It sounds like a good year to forget about politics. But, politically speaking, this is no time to "go fishing." The reason for this is simple: despite the fact there are no national elections, this is just as big a political year as any.

Nine states have state-level elections scheduled, or county contests throughout the state. Municipal elections will be held in 900 cities of 10,000 population and above. Judges will be elected, city and county councils, school commissioners, state legislators.

Ever hear of a labor injunction? Union members walking the bricks, carrying placards, handing out leaflets at the plant gates. A judge hands down the injunction for the company, clearing the streets. Scabs go through the gates, union members lose jobs.

Once, that was standard. In case of bad times, it could become standard again.

That puts it up to the judges. Fortunately, in a good many areas they are elected. To elect good judges, union members must vote. To vote, they must register. This is a job for all year every year. Are your members registered?

County officials are up for election in many places this year. They're all important, but consider the sheriff. Plenty of union men still remember the days of the Mohawk Valley Formula, when management threw everything it had at union members, including armed thugs.

Part of the formula was to have the sheriff deputize the goons. It could happen again, so don't forget the sheriff. We want sheriffs who will never sell their public trust to a special interest. To elect the right man for the job, union members must vote. Again, to vote, they must first be registered.

This year, hundreds of cities will choose mayors, city attorneys, councilmen and candidates for other elective offices.

Don't take your eye off this ball. Think a little about picketing. The courts say union members have a constitutional right to picket. But if a city council passes an ordinance tying up handbill distribution, or making it disorderly conduct to walk more than two-and-two, it may take some time, and lots of expense, to throw it out of court.

Meanwhile, a strike can be lost. Holding the line and making gains in your home town means electing good people to public office. And that means registering union members.

Some states elect state and local superintendents of public instruction this year. This election could have a lot to do with your youngster's future, for his future depends in large degree on his education.

The labor movement helped to establish the public school system in America. If we can improve it, there will be more opportunities for the children of working people to get all the schooling their talents require. A superintendent of public instruction can make or wreck a school system. So this, too, becomes a matter of votes this fall, and a question of registration now.

State legislatures face the voters in some states. At stake are workmen's compensation, unemployment insurance, wages and hours laws, industrial safety, education, taxation, reapportionment and other legislation.

It's good to keep a sharp eye on Congress, but don't forget the state legislatures while you're doing it. For decent state legislatures, union members must register, and they must vote.

Local 215 Purchases Israel Bonds

The first purchase of Israel bonds by a trade union in Connecticut has been made by the New Haven Metal Lathers' Local 215, it was announced jointly by Charles Setaro, Business Representative of the local, and J. J. Cooley, General Chairman of Bonds for Israel Campaign, who has since become deceased.

The bond purchase was in honor of Lloyd A. Mashburn, President of the Lathers' International Union, who was tendered a Testimonial Dinner co-sponsored by his constituents, and the Israel Bond Organization at the Waldorf Astoria Hotel in New York City.

Local 215's participation in the Israel Bond Program was also a token of affection, and esteem by the membership for their late fellow member, Charles Levine, and for others in the Jewish faith, who have cooperated in the welfare of the New Haven Local Union.

J. J. Cooley, General Chairman of the Bond for Israel Campaign, prior to his death, had donated a station-wagon to the Sisters of the Poor, and $2,000 to the St. Raphael Hospital in New Haven. These contributions were made by him approximately one week after the New Haven local purchased their Israel Bond.

Social Security Question Box

Q. What must a person receiving social security benefits do if he earned over $1200 in 1962?

A. Anyone entitled to social security benefits who earned over $1200 in 1962 and who was under 72 in ANY month of the year must file an annual report of his earnings with the Social Security Administration.

Q. How does a person report earnings of over $1200 in a year to the Social Security Administration?

A. By completing a simple "annual report of earnings" form. This form (called Form OA-C 777) can be obtained from any Social Security District Office. The social security office will also help a person complete the annual report form if he wishes.

Q. When must a report of 1962 earnings of over $1200 be made to the Social Security Administration?

A. By April 15, 1963.

Q. Is there a penalty imposed on a social security beneficiary if he fails to report earnings of over $1200 in 1962 by April 15, 1963?

A. A social security beneficiary who earned over $1200 in 1962 may forfeit an additional one month's benefit payment to himself for failure to report his earnings to the Social Security Administration by April 15, 1963.

Q. Why does a social security beneficiary who earned over $1200 in 1962 have to estimate his expected earnings for 1963 also?

A. His estimate of earnings expected for 1963 will be used to determine how much he can be paid in social security benefits during this year.

Q. Does a person who earned over $1200 in 1962 forfeit all of his social security payments for last year?

A. Not necessarily. A social security beneficiary gave up only $1 of his payments for each $2 he earned over $1200 and up to $1700 between January 1 and December 31, 1962. For each $1 earned over $1700 last year a person gives up $1 of his social security payments.

Q. I am buying a small business, and I'll be hiring two employees to work in my business. Do I have to report their earnings for social security purposes?

A. Yes. Their earnings have to be reported. You should get in touch with your social security office or Internal Revenue office and ask for Form SS-4 to get your employer's identification number. Mail this Form SS-4 to the Internal Revenue Office, and they will send you the Form 941s that you should use to report your employees' wages.

Q. How much do I deduct from my employee's wages for social security? He works for me part-time in my business.

A. You deduct 35% per cent of his wages. Add an equal amount to it and send it to the District Director of Internal Revenue at the end of each calendar quarter along with your completed Form 941.

Q. I hired two employees recently for my business, which is open during the spring and summer seasons. They do not have social security account numbers. How can they get numbers?

A. Tell them to get in touch with the nearest Social Security office right away to get a number. You have to have their numbers when you file the quarterly tax returns with Internal Revenue. If you do not have their numbers by the time you file your Form 941, put their mailing address on the form.

Check Your Balance in Social Security

You should check your social security account at least once every three years. You can get important information about the earnings credited to your account by using the handy coupon.

Simply clip the coupon, paste it firmly on a post card, and mail to the Social Security Administration, P.O. Box 57, Baltimore 3, Md. You will receive a confidential statement of the earnings credited to your account.

In filling out the coupon, be sure to include your account number and name exactly as they appear on your social security card.

This is important. The amount of benefits you will get depend on the earnings credited to your social security account.

Saskatchewan Medical Program Observes First Anniversary—The Saskatchewan medical care program against which most of the Province's doctors struck in 1962 is observing its first anniversary, still hale and healthy.

While many of the doctors who fought it are still bitter and apparently are hopeful that they can get the law repealed next year, the program has weathered the strike days successfully. It now serves approximately 870,000 out of the 930,000 population of the Province.

One mark of its success has been the growth of numerous community clinics manned by doctors favorable to the program.

Poverty Not Disappearing, CWC Hears—The rich keep getting richer and the poor poorer—as individuals and as nations—the Canadian Welfare Council was told at its 43rd annual meeting in Ottawa recently.

Another piece of advice: some relief programs tend to perpetuate poverty, providing residents of low-income areas with just enough cash to stay where they are and not enough to get out and rustle for work elsewhere.

Phyllis Burns, a Canadian social affairs officer with the United Nations, said population increases tend to overcome increases in national revenue.

"While national income may have increased in an absolute sense, per capita income has declined since any improvement now must be divided among a larger population." The world population by 1960 had exceeded all forecasts and the total by 2000 should be at least 6,000,000,000 or double the present total.

Dr. John Madden, economics professor at the University of Western Ontario, said poverty and low incomes tend to become regional problems in areas peopled by a higher than average number of elderly and less-educated people, or where industrial strength was declining or stagnant.

"This is particularly true of the Atlantic provinces, Saskatchewan and some rural areas of the other provinces," said Dr. Madden. He did not advocate a policy of starvation to force people out of certain areas but "if necessary, limit cash grants only to those who cannot move and subsidize other groups by tied gifts or loans to ensure that they do move in the right direction."

Charles Daley Leaves Legislature—Charles Daley, Minister of Labour for Ontario from 1943 until 1961—a record period in that portfolio in any government of Canada—resigned recently as a member of the Ontario Legislature.

Mr. Daley, who is 72, was Minister without Portfolio from 1961 until October 1962.

He will remain as Chairman of the Niagara Parks Commission and as member of the International Bridge Commission and the Parks Integration Board.

Seasonal Employment Up—Employment increased seasonally between April and May, by an estimated 215,000 to 6,312,000. Unemployment fell during the month by some 116,000 to 346,000, a smaller drop than that indicated by the seasonal pattern.

The estimated labour force in May was 6,658,000, an increase of 68,000 or about 1 per cent from a year earlier. Employment was 58,000 higher than in May 1962. There was little change over the year in the number of unemployed.

Employment reflected the general upswing in seasonal activity across the country. Between April and May, farm employment rose seasonally by 54,000. Non-farm employment increased by 161,000, which rise was also in line with seasonal expectations. At this time of year a heavy volume of hiring takes place in construction and manufacturing.

British NEDC Calls for 4% Growth—The achievement by the British economy of an average rate of growth of 4 per cent each year between the end of 1961 and 1966 should not prove impossible, according to a report recently published in London by the National Economic Development Council.

The report, however, stipulates that four main conditions are essential to success in the attainment of this rate of growth:

First, experts will have to grow faster than industry has been planning, and there will have to be an improvement in Britain's competitive position.

Second, even if the supply of manpower in general is sufficient, expected shortages of certain kinds of skilled workers will have to be remedied.

Third, the forecasts received from industry which may be optimistic but do not seem impossible, will have to be met.

Fourth, since output in the first of the five years, which has already passed, has grown by much less than 4 per cent, this deficiency will have to be made up in the remaining years.

The report says that part of the necessary growth in the supply of manpower will come by increase in numbers, but part of it will have to be met by an increase in productivity. It notes that shortages of skilled labour have never entirely disappeared, even in periods of recession. Technological progress requires an increasing proportion of trained and technical manpower in the labour force, and experience suggests that a much bigger training program will be needed to overcome shortages resulting from a faster rate of growth.

LATH LAUGHS

"We're giving you a raise, Leffler—We want your last two weeks here be happy ones!"

Thinking to please the young man, the manager of the office offered to promote the office-boy to junior clerk.

"And, of course, it will mean a small raise," he added, and waited for the outburst of thanks, which didn't come.

The boy thought hard for a moment, and then said:

"If it's all the same to you, sir, I'd rather go on looking after the postage stamps and petty cash on my present salary."

From Walnut Creek, California, we're informed that a young Indian left his reservation to study electricity. He later returned to his people, and found that the large community bathroom had no electricity. He immediately installed lighting in it—thus becoming the first Indian to wire a head for a reservation.

Hubby came home at 2 a.m. and the wife met him at the door. "Halt! Who goes there?" she said.

"A friend," he answered.

"Advance friend and give the password."

"I won $18," the man said.

"Come in, darling," she replied.

A lion ate a bull. He felt so full that he roared and roared. A hunter heard him, came over, and shot him.

The obvious lesson: If you are full of bull keep your mouth shut.

Getting ready to baptize the infant, the minister asked pleasantly, "What have you decided to name him?"

The mother answered proudly. "Randolph Morgan Montgomery Alfred Van Christopher McGoof."

The minister turned to his assistant. "A little more water, please."

Judge—Officer, what makes you think this man was drunk?

Officer—Well, Judge, I didn't bother him when he staggered down the street or when he fell flat on his face, but when he put a nickel in the mail box, looked up at the courthouse clock and said, "Good heavens, I've lost 14 pounds," I brought him in.

"Yes" mused the secretary, "psychiatry sure helped me. A few months ago I was so timid I was afraid to answer the phone when it rang. Now, I answer it whether it rings or not."

A new apprentice on his first assignment in carpentry was told by his foreman to start shingling the side of a building. After a while the foreman returned and saw his new graduate throwing nails over his shoulder. "What do you mean throwing nails away like that?" he stormed.

"Oh, sir," said the apprentice. "The heads are on the wrong end!"

"Don't be stupid!" roared the foreman. "The other side of the building has to be shingled too, you know!"

IS FOR TARDINESS

Here are some tips on how to rise and shine
—on time

There was an old tune some years ago (before juke boxes and disc jockeys came into their heyday) that had these words in its lyrics: "It's nice to get up in the morning, but it's nicer to lie in bed . . ."

A not-very-diligent search failed to unearth any surveys on just how many people this old saw applied to. But it probably would be safe to bet that only about one in 6,000,000 jump cheerfully out of bed in the morning, dress with a song on their lips, eat a leisurely, well-balanced breakfast, leave the house in plenty of time to make it safely to plant or office and arrive a few moments before, if not right on the dot of, starting time!

Okay, so you're one of the 5,999,999 who struggle with the alarm clock or doze off again before crawling out of bed, rush to finish dressing, gulp down an inadequate breakfast, race from the house and fume all the way to work, knowing the chances are good that you'll arrive a few minutes after, and not right on the dot of, starting time!

So you're one of those benighted souls who daily struggles to be up and about and at work on time—what can you do to cure the tardiness habit?

There are several things.

Take the matter of alarm clocks. These monstrous little instruments that spoil your fond early morning slumber must be treated with a certain amount of respect and tender care. Restrain yourself, don't wham down the alarm knob ferociously, or hurl the blasted thing across the room (you might hit your mother-in-law who's been sent in to pull you out of bed).

Instead, turn it off gingerly and get out of bed. If you find that too hard, they even have the kind of alarm clock now (it's called "Drowse") which will ring a second and even a third time after five or ten-minute periods.

So you get up. What next?

You've got to wash up or shower, shave (if you're a man) and dress. The secret here, according to one expert, is to plan ahead; know what you're going to wear the next day and before you go to bed lay out your clothing so everything will be in place next morning. Wise men, with light beards, will gain precious minutes by shaving the night before.

By the time you're dressed, the coffee pot you (or your spouse) have set to working should be sending a delicious aroma your way. By now you should be hungry, and, if you've followed the rules up to this point, you should have time to eat a healthful breakfast as leisurely as if you'd paid two bucks for it on a vacation trip.

Having broken the fast in the way it should be broken (and most physicians agree this is the most important meal of the day), the trick is now to leave the house, in a good mood, and start your unhurried journey to the place where you earn the wherewithal to buy the alarm clock, the clothing you wear, the breakfast you eat, and the transportation you use.

Ten will get you one that when you get there well ahead of actual starting time, you'll feel a heck of a lot more like doing a good day's work for having started the day off right.

HOW TO COPE WITH YOUR TENSIONS

when tension strikes do you stick it out, or escape? Here are some tips on how to handle tension realistically.

Everybody experiences tensions, according to the National Association for Mental Health. But few people are fully aware of what really causes tensions and what can be done about them.

Highway and job accidents, family spats and even physical ailments have been attributed to excessive tension, and one of the biggest reasons why tensions go unrelieved is the popularity of so many misconceptions about them.

Doesn't it seem logical, for instance, that all tensions are bad? That the best remedy for tension is rest? Or that psychiatric help is for really sick people rather than for those with severe tensions?

Each of these ideas is a mistake.

Not all tensions are bad. Without some tensions, we would fall short in emergencies, failing to accomplish as much as we should on the job. Tension drives some people forward. Without it the amount and quality of their work would decrease.

Strenuous activity is sometimes far better than rest at helping to relieve us of tensions. Whacking a golf or tennis ball may be far better than sitting in an easy chair, tensely trying to follow that friendly advice: "Relax and don't worry."

There is a place for psychiatric help in dealing with tensions, if they are severe and continuous.

They can be a sign of real illness. So if tensions are seriously hampering your business or home life, you may need professional help.

To cope with tensions not severe enough for professional attention—the kind of tensions all of us experience when a bad day comes along—there are two things you can do: Seek out and remove as many causes of tension as possible; and get rid of tensions promptly once they strike.

The acoustical tile, the light bulb and the desk calendar can be your allies in the effort to avoid common causes of tension.

As far back as 1916, psychologist J. B. Morgan demonstrated that noise not only reduces efficiency, but also increases the amount of energy required to perform a given task. Another experimenter, F. L.

Harmon, found in 1933 that noisy conditions increased energy expenditure by about 60%. Today, it is well established that noise raises the tension level of almost any activity. With acoustical tiles, mechanical door closers, and felt or rubber pads under appliances, you can sharply reduce the amount of noise around you—and thus cut down on one big cause of tension.

Poor lighting—either too much or too little—is another common cause of tension. If you read beside a table lamp, the bottom of the lamp shade should be about the same height as your eyes. And single-socket-type lamps require a bulb of at least 15-watts.

You don't need an expert to know that a tight schedule is often the cause of tension. An unending series of little crises, added to a jam-packed schedule, brings on the symptoms: miserable headache, taut nerves and muscles, queasy stomach. Often you can ease this condition with the aid of a desk calendar. It will help you plan your day better.

The headache tablets, athletic equipment and a sense of when to retreat can be your allies when tension that can't be avoided comes along. Each of these aids acts in a different way, and each has its limitations.

Athletics also work two ways to make you feel better. Whacking a ball, knocking down bowling pins and pushing the pedals of a bike not only help you to get rid of surplus energy; these activities also help to build up your body so that you are better able to withstand fatigue, a big cause of tension.

While exercise in moderation is a good tension-fighter, excessive exercise may be worse than none at all. And when you are tense, the temptation to overdo it is strong. Strive for moderation.

Does "escape" sound to you like the wrong thing to do when tension strikes? Many people feel that they should stick it out and suffer. Not so. Just as highly effective medicine need not be highly distasteful (as was commonly supposed, years ago), escaping from a tension-producing situation — temporarily—doesn't mean failure to face the problem squarely. Often, when things go wrong, it is perfectly normal and healthy to escape long enough to compose yourself. You may be much more able to squash the cause of the tension once you have calmed down.

Of course, temporary escape isn't the whole answer. Neither are exercises or pain relievers. But if you handle tensions realistically—recognizing that everyone has them, avoiding them when you can, getting rid of them when they strike, and seeking professional help if the tensions become too unpleasant—you will be doing everything possible to avoid the accidents, family spats and even physical ailments that are so often attributed to excessive tension.

Mom's just starting the bacon about now

Somewhere, thousands of miles from home, a solitary boy stops to look at his GI watch. So far away that even the daylight hours differ from those at home. How does he pass the long watchful hours? Maybe he's picturing the folks, lounging before breakfast with the Sunday papers. Or maybe he's looking forward to relaxing soon at a nearby USO. If there is a USO nearby.

Far too often . . . due to a lack of funds, lonely GI's are being deprived of the vital warmth . . . spiritual lift . . . the homey touch that USO can bring them.

Today, over 2,750,000 Americans are in uniform. Over half are under 25. Many, away from home for the first time. Those kids need USO. And USO needs your help to reach them.

Remember, you're helping your boy or girl in uniform by helping the USO. Not one of them should wonder—even for a minute . . .

"Does Anybody Know I'm Here?"

DON'T BE A LITTERBUG! Boating, swimming, fishing lure millions of us to the water every year. And the careless ones leave a trail of litter that piles up—bit by bit—to be an eyesore . . . a health menace . . . a water hazard. Litter can even cause your favorite fishing spot to be closed down. And remember—littering is against the law! ■ So don't get hauled up for a fine. Carry a litterbag in your boat—and use it! When you go camping, don't pitch anything on the ground except your tent. Toss litter in the basket or take it out with you. It's up to each and every one of us to KEEP AMERICA BEAUTIFUL!

Report from the

GENERAL PRESIDENT

YOUR Local Union has, no doubt, been contacted by the Apprenticeship Division of the Labor Department or the Mediation and Conciliation Service regarding the new order issued by President Kennedy, which is 10925 (as amended) and 11114, pertaining to Equal Employment for the minority groups, and has probably wondered why information on this matter has not been received from this office. A meeting was called by President Haggerty of the Building Trades Department and 18 General Presidents were in attendance. The following statement was agreed upon and issued as a result of this meeting and a Committee was appointed to meet with the President's Committee regarding this matter.

POLICY STATEMENT OF BUILDING TRADES

1. In order to avoid discrimination, local unions are urged to accept into membership any applicant who meets the required qualifications regardless of race, creed, color or national origin.

2. If a local union has an agreement which provides for, and operates, an exclusive hiring hall, all applicants for employment are to be placed upon the hiring list in accordance with the applicable law and their collective bargaining agreement. There is to be no identification of applicants as to race, creed, color or national origin, and they are to be referred without discrimination as their turn comes up on the hiring list, if their qualifications meet those required by the employer.

3. If the local unions do not have an exclusive hiring hall, but do have a referral system set forth in their collective bargaining agreement, qualified applicants for employment are to be referred without discrimination as to race, creed, color or national origin.

4. With regard to the application for, or employment of, apprentices, local unions shall accept, and refer, such applicants in accordance with their qualifications and there shall be no discrimination as to race, creed, color or national origin, and the local unions shall adhere strictly to their apprenticeship standards.

* * *

However, this program, agreed upon by the Building Trades Department and all of the General Presidents, did not satisfy the President's Committee for Equal Opportunity, and President Haggerty and his Committee have been meeting with the President's Committee on Equal Employment since that time and there are still two issues, if not more, which have not been resolved.

One issue which is not resolved is the insistence of the President's Committee that we inspect our lists of employment for journeymen and that we bring in the minority groups as members, and while they do not say so, they infer that we put them at the top of the list and we, of course, object to this procedure. Most Local Unions, if not all Local Unions, who have a hiring list and are requisitioned for an employee, select the most qualified employee from the top of the list, regardless of his race, creed, color or national origin. Therefore, the only difference in the President's order and his committees insistence is that the minority groups be placed at the top of the list. I do not believe this is the intent of the President and I feel his committee is going far afield from his rules and regulations because the President made a statement on television to the effect that he did not believe in quotas.

The other issue is much the same, and is in respect to apprenticeship. We have had National Apprenticeship Standards and a National Manual for Instructions on Apprenticeship since 1956. We have trained about 7 thousand apprentices and so far have never had a protest by anyone, minority group or otherwise, that they were discriminated against. We believe that our present apprenticeship manual and standards are in conformity with the intent and purpose of equal employment, which is set forth in our Constitution and has been ever since I have been a member of the International Union.

Therefore, my advice would be to continue to operate under these Standards and Manual until such time that we are advised by President Haggerty and his Committee of any changes negotiated by his Committee and the President's Committee, since we believe we are doing exactly what the President intended when he issued the two directives mentioned above.

We are quite certain that the Building Trades Department and our Committee will maintain its position in respect to referral of members, upon requisition from the employers, and we are also quite sure they will maintain their position in respect to accepting qualified applicants for apprenticeship on a "first come, first serve" basis . . . all of this regardless of race, creed, color or national origin.

As soon as we have the final report of the Committee, we will immediately relay it to all Local Unions and Councils. In the meantime, I reiterate that we should operate under the present Manual and Standards until further advised.

Fraternally yours,

State Accepts Atlanta Apprentice School

THIS apprentice school was formulated, and put into being September 1950, by a joint committee of three from Local 234, and three Plastering Contractors.

To get the program started the Local Union furnished the place for the apprentice school, and for a few years the Plastering Contractors' Association paid the school instructor $100 per month. Later the salary for the instructor was paid by the Promotional Fund.

May of 1963 the State Vocational Training Program accepted the Apprentice Program, and then assumed the salary of the instructor. The Local 234 Apprentice Program has been integrated from its inception, and had not been accepted earlier by the Vocational Training Program because of the integration.

There has been another apprentice program carried out by the Carver School, which has never been successful, as they did not have qualified people as instructors, and at one time members of our organization volunteered for the erection of different types of work, so that the apprentices enrolled in this school could see how the work was actually performed, but even though they had the material erected, they did not have anyone qualified to explain it to the apprentice class. As the Carver School did not have a joint apprentice committee, and because of not having any Contractors in the program, it was impossible for the apprentices at this school to receive any "on the job training", which is an absolute necessity as far as a lathing apprentice is concerned. When the Vocational School of Atlanta, Georgia, accepted the Program in May of this year a new set of standards were formulated, and a few changes were made in the training course to conform to some degree with the methods advanced by the Vocational School. As the school already has over 12 years of experience, it has during this time, developed into a very successful, and satisfactory apprentice training system.

This school gives applicants an aptitude test, and requires that they have at least 10 years of school, and must be 18 years or older. They have learned that applicants of 16 years of age are not mature enough to realize that they are learning a man's work. They have a three-year apprenticeship, and the school operates 48 weeks per year, two nights per week, two hours per night. The classes are divided into three groups, first year, second year, and third year as far as mathematics, and relative instruction is concerned, on other phases of the apprenticeship they all work together.

Jack Bowen, instructor for the school, says that regardless of the amount of instruction you can give an apprentice in a school he still must have an adequate amount of on the job training in order to become a successful lather. Although it takes both vocational training, and on the job training, the vocational training would be of little value without the actual on the job training, therefore, they have arrived at a balanced apprentice training program, which requires both school, and on the job training.

We wish to congratulate the Joint Apprentice Committee of Local 234, Jack Bowen, and any others that have been responsible for making this school the success that it has been over this period of 12 years. We certainly hope that the interest created will continue in the future, and that this school will remain an outstanding, and successful training program.

New Tyrone Guthrie theatre in Minneapolis displays interesting pattern of sunscreen applied by Peterson & Hede of Hopkins, the lathing and plastering contract holders for this dynamic experiment in midwestern culture.

Tyrone Guthrie Theatre

LOOKING up at the ceiling is no sign of boredom at the internationally famous Tyrone Guthrie theatre, Minneapolis, Minnesota.

For the ceiling, which controls acoustics and lighting to a high degree, attracts many a second look from patrons of the two-million-dollar theatre.

Milcor lath, channels and metal was used to form the grids and understructure for the baffle panels which ranged in size from 14 feet square to 20 feet square, tilted at exacting angles and covered with 22,500 square feet of acoustic plaster and 45,000 square feet of sand finish plaster. Finishing touch: paint in three shades of grey.

Lester White, lathing foreman, and William Blom, plastering foreman, represented the firm of Peterson & Hede of Hopkins, Minnesota on this outstanding job, followed by Kenny Sorenson who headed up a crew from Peterson & Hede who applied Granulux to a taller-than-the-building free form design of sunscreen.

The theatre seats 1437 and none of the seats is more than 52 feet from the stage which projects out into the audience. Director Tyrone Guthrie favors this type of staging, which goes back to early British theatre and breaks away from the "picture frame" stage.

This experiment in repertory theatre in the Upper Midwest is proving a dramatic success and another showcase for genuine lath and plaster.

As ceiling began to take shape, intricate design of accoustic baffles is seen. Each panel (they ranged from 14 to 20 feet) was exactly engineered into position.

St. Louis Student Wins Scholarship From Lath Council

The St. Louis Lathing and Plastering Industry Council in their desire to promote the use of Lath and Plaster has awarded, to a most deserving young man, a quarter scholarship at the Washington University School of Architecture for the school year 1963-64. It was the feeling of the Board of Directors that the recipient of this award be entering the 5th or 6th year in the School of Architecture, a St. Louis resident, one whose grades be above standard, and one who needed financial assistance to continue his studies and eventually graduate with an Architectural Degree.

The winner of the Scholarship Award, which was presented on April 20th, is Mr. Alan Appel who resides at 7441 Gannon Avenue. We all wish Alan success in his chosen profession and, of course, more usage of Lath and Plaster.

Ft. Lauderdale Goes Co-ed

Local 406, Ft. Lauderdale, Florida, goes all out for apprenticeship training as is shown by the above picture. The young apprentice lather in this picture is Sheila Mary Maillet, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George K. Maillet of Ft. Lauderdale. George Maillet has been a member of our organization since 1949, and was enrolled in Local 78, Hartford, Connecticut, but has been in the Ft. Lauderdale area since 1954.

Series Stresses Safety of Metal Lath in Schools

"All About Schools," third in a series of mats distributed by the Metal Lath Association, reaches far back into our yesteryears to trace school house development from the one-room school to the outstanding school buildings of today. Through the use of line drawings and brief captions, the current release reports this development and draws attention to parents to the "most comfortable, best-lighted, fire-resistant, safest schools in the world," through the use of metal lath.

Nearly three-thousand newspapers across the nation have been supplied with the mat. Many of them will be publishing this educational line drawing release at about the time that parents are preparing their children for return to Autumn session of school.

Report from the

GENERAL SECRETARY-TREASURER

THE 1964 Congressional elections may witness one of the most direct confrontations between liberal and conservative forces since the days of the New Deal.

Liberal members of Congress, especially the group of liberal Senators elected in 1958, face a sharp challenge from forces ranging from the radical right to the financially potent political action operations of the American Medical Association and the new group recently unveiled by the National Association of Manufacturers—the Business-Industry Political Action Committee.

The emergence of the ultra-conservative right wing in the 1962 elections was essentially a dry run. Although pretty thoroughly rejected in the few direct contests where there were identifiable candidates, the right wing has increased its activities in preparation for the 1964 contests.

The right wing is making a direct bid also to nominate a conservative GOP presidential candidate to give national leadership to the drive to elect rightist Senators and Congressmen.

There is wide agreement that the right wing is well financed and staffed and in alliance with the various anti-liberal business groups will probably make one of its strongest bids for power next year.

The official emergence of the Business-Industry Political Action Committee (BIPAC) has been long in coming. Business and industrial groups have been extremely active in presidential and congressional elections for decades. They have helped finance the campaigns of candidates favorable to their views and have had a key voice in the selection of presidential candidates, usually on the Republican ticket.

The creation of an official political action group dedicated to the support of conservative candidates brings out into the open, to an extent, the historic political operations of the business-industry community. And this is all to the good because it is important that the voters have a clear idea of not only what a candidate stands for but which groups are actively supporting his election.

Thus organized labor, which has actively and openly worked for election of liberal and progressive candidates, will face a determined conservative drive in the tough 1964 races. Labor's evaluation of the issues, its assessment of the candidates, its review of the voting records will be countered and challenged by the right wingers and the conservatives.

This is the time, then, for the basic spadework that produces election day victories—the voter registration drives, contributions to COPE, participation in the selection of candidates so that voters in all districts and states have a real choice and the issues are brought into focus clearly and sharply.

Speaking of COPE, I would like to report at this time that we have not been receiving contributions from the Local Unions as we have in the past. If we are to maintain the splendid record that the Lathers International Union has had in the past, all of us are going to have to get busy. Giving $1.00 to COPE, as I have said so many times before, is one of the best investments we as working people can make.

Now, months before the critical 1964 elections, is the time to prepare for a showdown with the right-wing, conservative challenge on the future course of American political life.

"LABOR FACTS"

DID YOU KNOW ...

IN 1914 IT TOOK THE AVERAGE FACTORY PRODUCTION WORKER ONE HOUR AND THIRTY-FIVE MINUTES OF WORK TO PAY FOR A DOZEN EGGS... TODAY IT TAKES THE SAME KIND OF FACTORY PRODUCTION WORKER ONLY FIFTEEN MINUTES!

IN 1914 IT TOOK SEVENTY-FIVE HOURS AND FORTY-SEVEN MINUTES OF WORK FOR AN AVERAGE FACTORY PRODUCTION WORKER TO EARN ENOUGH MONEY TO BUY A TWO-PIECE SUIT OF MEDIUM QUALITY... TODAY, TO BUY THE SAME KIND OF SUIT, IT WOULD TAKE THE SAME WORKER ONLY TWENTY HOURS AND TWENTY-SIX MINUTES!

ALL OF THESE COMPARISONS ILLUSTRATE DRAMATICALLY THE IMPROVEMENT IN THE LIFE OF THE AMERICAN WORKER IN THE LAST FIFTY YEARS... THE FIRST FIFTY YEARS OF THE UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF LABOR!

RESOLUTION OF RESPECT

The page of Brother Homer McKee, #35338, in our membership ledger bears the simple inscription, "Homer McKee took his final transfer 6/30/63".

The Supreme Architect, and Builder of all Creation, has another job for Brother McKee, and if he understands Homer as well as we do, there will be a lath job involved.

Homer's sales pitch for Lath and Plaster, "especially lath," was a legend in the Rio Grande Valley for a quarter of a century. Proof that he got results can be seen in the large percentage of jobs that have Lath and Plaster. His continued enthusiasm for "The Trade" makes beneficiaries of us all.

He will be widely remembered, and greatly missed by all who knew him, and their numbers are legion.

We, the members of Lathers' Local 489 of Corpus Christi, Texas, want it to be known that we too miss Homer greatly, and want to extend our condolences to his Parents and his Sister. We are draping our Charter for an indefinite period. A copy of this memorial commendation will be forwarded to Brother McKee's Parents and Sister.

W. H. Gosnell, Secretary
Lathers' Local 489

WHEREAS, Almighty God, in His infinite wisdom and power, has removed from our midst Brother William Gilbertson, #29991, and

WHEREAS, Brother Gilbertson was a true and loyal trade unionist and will be missed by his friends and the members of Local 190, therefore be it

RESOLVED, That Local 190 extend its sincere and deep sympathy to the relatives of its departed brother, and be it further

RESOLVED, That the Charter of Local 190 be draped for thirty days as token of respect, and that a copy of these Resolutions be sent to the International Union for publication in "The Lather".

Professor Exposes Dangerous Right-Wing Amendments

IN a recent article, Henry Steele Commager, noted professor of history at Amherst College, exposed the motivation behind three amendments promoted by right-wingers, and already approved by many state legislatures. The amendments would: 1. prohibit the U.S. Supreme Court from acting on reapportionment of state legislatures; 2. allow states to by-pass Congress completely in amending the U.S. Constitution; 3. create a "super court" with power to overrule the Supreme Court. Following are excerpts from Professor Commager's article:

... What we are witnessing in these amendments ... is an expression of ... a philosophy of antigovernment and of no-government. Whereas the Constitution was designed "to form a more perfect Union," this is an effort to form a much less perfect Union. It is a philosophy, in fact if not in concept, of constitutional anarchy.

For one thing which is clear is that the proponents of these amendments ... do not want to see state governments invigorated, carrying through broad legislative programs; they want to see the national Government frustrated, incompetent to carry through legislative programs. The ambition which animates them is not to strengthen the states, but to paralyze the nation.

Does anyone for a moment suppose that if the apportionment amendment should by some quirk become law, the states would then proceed to reapportion legislative seats on a fair basis? They have had 50 years in which to deal with the problem and have failed to do so; some states have actually defied their own constitutional mandates requiring decennial reapportionment.

Does anyone really suppose that if the amendment permitting the states to bypass the Congress in the amending process became law, the states would proceed to set their domestic houses in order—to end the scandal of racial discrimination themselves, to reform antiquated tax structures, to deal vigorously with the problems of conservation and of public lands, to take care of the needs of public education and public health through a series of constitutional amendments? Clearly, the new authority would be used not to carry through programs of public welfare but to repeal existing programs of public welfare.

Does anyone for a moment suppose that if the fantastic proposal for a super Supreme Court were to materialize, that court would rule impartially between the claims of state and nation? That amendment would enable 26 chief justices representing (and representing unfairly) states with one-sixth the population of the United States, to rewrite constitutional law.

Make no mistake about it. These amendments, and the forces behind them, are inspired by deep-seated hostility to the national government. They are designed to weaken the whole constitutional structure—not only the positive power of government under the Constitution, but rights guaranteed to persons under the Constitution. They look ultimately to paralyzing the effective operation of the Constitution, which means, of course, paralyzing the nation itself.

There is nothing new about this. Thomas Jefferson invoked the principle of states' rights on behalf of freedom, but he was almost the last statesman who did so. For well over a century now, this pernicious doctrine has been invoked for two major purposes, and almost exclusively for those purposes: to weaken government and to endanger freedom.

The most notorious, and historically the most decisive, use of the doctrine of states' rights was, of course, to protect the institution of Negro slavery. States' rights were invoked, too, to delay expansion into the West, to defeat the regulation of trusts and railroads, to frustrate prohibition of child labor, to hold up the grant of suffrage to women, and to oppose social security, the conservation of natural resources, the creation of hydroelectric power for national purposes, the encouragement of public education and the protection of equality.

No political doctrine in American history has been more consistently invoked on behalf of privilege; none has had a more egregious record of error and calamity.

... the states' rights champion of our time displays no real pride in his state, no sense of its past, no feeling for its traditions, no respect for its dignity, no pride in its future. What has he done, what does he do, to preserve its natural resources, to cherish its institutions of learning, to protect its good name? What interest does he show in the richest possession of any state—the welfare of its men and women and children? The mobs invading the university campus at Oxford, the Negro children huddled behind wire fences in Birmingham and police dogs in the streets—these are the stigmata of states' rights today.

... a states' rights philosophy that has its origin in fear of government itself, and is rooted in a deep distrust of majority rule and of the democratic processes, forfeits its claim to respect. A states' rights philosophy which is never inspired by generosity, never excited by a passion for freedom or for justice, never exalted by magnanimity, but takes refuge in narrowness and selfishness and vindictiveness, exhausts its claim to tolerance.

QUESTION BOX

Q. I am a widow receiving benefits for myself, my son, and my daughter. My son will be 18 years old in a few months. Must I report that fact to the Social Security Administration?

A. No, your son's check will be stopped automatically with the month before he becomes 18, and payments will continue to you and your daughter.

Q. I receive social security disability benefits. I expect to receive a settlement from my employer under a Workman's Compensation claim I filed as a result of my accident. Must I report this to the Social Security Administration?

A. No, the receipt of Workman's Compensation or any other disability benefit has no bearing on your entitlement to social security benefits.

Q. I receive disability insurance payments under social security and I will be 65 years old next month. I understand that social security disability benefits will not be paid after I become 65 years old. How must I report to the social security office to become entitled to my old age benefit?

A. No report is necessary in your case. The Social Security Administration will automatically change your disability benefits to old age benefits effective with the month of your 65th birthday.

Q. I am receiving disability benefits. If I should go to work and make less than $1200 a year, would I have to report it?

A. Disability benefits continue as long as you are unable to engage in substantial gainful work.

A person getting disability insurance benefits should notify the Social Security Office if he is able to do any work, so that a determination can be made as to whether or not his work is substantial. The amount of work you are able to do is the issue—rather than the amount of your earnings. While $1200 is the amount of earnings used to determine whether a person receiving old-age or survivors insurance benefits is retired, it does not apply to those receiving disability benefits.

Q. I have benefits for my daughter who is 16 years old. She plans to be married sometime this year. Will her marriage affect her social security payments and, if so, how does she go about notifying the Social Security Office?

A. Your daughter's social security payments will stop with the check for the month before the month in which she marries. You should notify the Social Security Office as soon as you are sure of the exact date the marriage will take place.

Q. My son became 18 in July of last year and his benefits were stopped. I recently received a form from the Social Security Office asking for a report of his earnings for last year. Is it necessary for me to furnish this information?

A. Yes, since your son received benefits for some part of the year, an annual report of his earnings is necessary.

Q. My son, for whom I receive social security benefits, expects to work in a resort hotel during the summer months. Do I have to report this to the Social Security Administration?

A. If your son expects to earn over $1200 for the year, a report is necessary and the Social Security Office should be notified as soon as possible. Of course, if his total earnings, including the value of any room and board furnished, will not exceed $1200, there is no need to report.

Q. I expect to move to Europe sometime this year. Do I merely notify the Social Security Office of my change of address, or is some special report required?

A. In addition to a change of address the Social Security Administration will have to get information regarding any expected work activity and your citizenship status. Therefore you should visit the Social Security Office as soon as your plans are definite.

Q. I receive benefits for my father who is confined to a mental Institution. Am I obliged to report the disbursements I make from his money?

A. Yes, you must file a yearly report of your use of his money. Therefore, it is advisable that you keep detailed records and get receipts for all transactions you make on his behalf.

Q. If a woman begins to receive benefits on her husband's account and later divorces him, must she report the divorce to the Social Security Administration?

A. Yes, the final decree of divorce terminates her status as a wife and her benefits end with the month before the month her divorce becomes effective.

The 1964-65 World's Fair will look like this in a few short months! Most of the buildings are now under construction, and landscaping is nearly complete. More than 60 nations will exhibit during the Fair's two seasons and 120 major industries will have pavilions.

Symbol of the 1964-65 World's Fair is the Unisphere, an open sculpture of the earth constructed by U.S. Steel. It stands 12 stories high in the Central Mall, and will remain a permanent part of the park after the Fair is over.

1964 / 1965 WORLD'S

New York-New Jersey Port of Authority will have a 120 foot high heliport to bring visitors to the Fairgrounds from Manhattan and nearby locations. A two-level restaurant and lounge will be suspended immediately below it.

In April of next year, one of the most elaborate showpieces of all time will open in New York—the World's Fair. More than 60 nations . . . each of the 50 states . . . and more than 120 major industries plan buildings and pavilions on the 646-acre site. This Flushing Meadow location was also the site of the World's Fair held in 1939.

Just as the first Fair introduced many marvels we take for granted today, the 1964-1965 version will highlight new techniques in building design and new materials that will set the pace for decades to come. The talent and imagination of architects and designers are at work now, shaping what promises to be the most beautiful Fair yet held.

Incredible changes have already taken place in the landscape of Flushing Meadow. Interior roads branch from the main expressways into the fair ground itself, curving around the various exhibit sites. Parking space and garden areas are well-underway, and new motels are springing up outside the Fair grounds to help accommodate the expected 70 million visitors.

One of the most fascinating areas under construction is the Marina Complex in Flushing Bay. This eight million dollar project will be a floating structure, built almost entirely of glass fiber reinforced plastic. The layout forms seven circular service islands, surrounded by docking areas, and connected by glass fiber causeways. Entire complex floats on pontoon units that require almost no maintenance and do not rot, rust or corrode. The flotation system allows dock and service areas to remain on a constant level with boats at all times. (This is particularly practical since there is an 8 foot tide range in Flushing Bay.) The Marina will remain a permanent part of the park area, eventually accommodating 2,000 boats.

The symbol of the 1964-1965 World's Fair is the Unisphere, an open steel sculpture of the earth which will stand 12 stories high in the middle of the Central Mall. Its surface will reflect both natural and artificial light in the pool beneath it. Sphere and pool will remain as permanent features of the park.

It is in this Central Mall area that the Federal and International exhibits will be held. They'll show a wide variety in atmosphere and design. For instance, the New England States will feature a village green, a fish hatchery, and a country store, in addition to a performance of the Boston Pops Orchestra in an amphitheatre. Thailand's Pavilion, on the other hand, is a replica of a famous marble temple in Bangkok and the Mexican Pavilion will display native World's Fair—a duplicate of the original Time Capsule will be suspended between three pylons in the Westinghouse open-air Pavilion. During the Fair, a new Time Capsule, documenting man's progress in the last 25 years, will be deposited as a supplementary message for the people of 6939 A.D.

The Fair will be held in two installments, the first opening in the Spring of 1964, Wednesday, April 22nd, and closing Sunday, October 13th . . . the other, re-opening in 1965 on Wednesday, April 21st and permanently closing Sunday, October 17, 1965. The Fair will operate daily, including Sundays and holidays. Gates will open at 9:30 a.m. and exhibits will operate from 10 a.m. until at least 10 p.m.—and in some cases until 2 o'clock in the morning. Individual admission is Aztec art forms on a mezzanine suspended, by cables, from the roof of a 9-columned building.

Industrial exhibits will begin directly behind the International area. Among these pavilions will be the Port of New York-New Jersey Authority building with its landing deck for helicopters that can accommodate daily visitors. Another outstanding exhibit, The Bell System Pavilion, will feature an arm-chair ride past scenes illustrating developments in communications. Sinclair Refining Company plans to recreate the prehistoric age of dinosaurs—with nine life-sized models of these giant animals—showing how oil deposits are formed. A particularly attractive exhibit will be Electric Power and Light's "Cathedral of Light" now under construction. Metal columns that look like prisms will surround a shaft of high intensity light beams, reaching 140 feet into the air.

Finally, as a salute to the 1939

$2.00 for adults and $1.00 for children, though books of 20 tickets each will be available at $30 for adults and $15 for children. Parking at the Fairgrounds runs $1.50 per day for cars.

The New York World's Fair Housing Bureau has made arrangements with motels and hotels in Manhattan and other boroughs to house the incoming visitors, and to charge the standard rates during the Fair's two six-month seasons. Officials estimate the Fair will draw 40 million visitors during 1964, and 30 million in 1965. In all, they expect about three times the average daily attendance of the Seattle World's Fair.

This World's Fair promises to be "the biggest show on earth." President Kennedy summed it up when he said this is our chance to show "What our people are like, and what we have done with our people. What has gone in the past, and what is coming in the future . . . what we have accomplished through a system of freedom."

New York State Exhibit will have three separate buildings and three circular observation towers of different heights. Its circular theatre will present a panoramic motion picture of New York State—past and present.

The Schoefer Pavilion will include a "Restaurant of Tomorrow" where circular table areas will seem to float on a floor of water dotted by arrangements of flowering trees.

Bell Systems Pavilion will feature a "floating" Fiberglos wing 24 feet above the ground, supported by four widely separated columns. Entire building is 87 feet high.

The "Cathedral of Light" is Electric Power & Light's exhibit. The shaft of high-intensity light beams reaches 140 feet into the air, and can be seen from the surrounding countryside.

PLASTER BASE

■ CHECKS PLASTER SLIDE

■ CHECKS LATH SAG

ROCKLATH Plaster Base face paper acts two ways to give you better plastering:

Moisture-Blotter Action of three outer layers takes up moisture from mix—does it so uniformly, and so quickly, the plaster takes on “anti-slump” strength before it can slide.

Moisture-Barrier Action of three inner layers repels moisture—prevents it from softening the gypsum core, so ROCKLATH doesn’t sag.

Thus, ROCKLATH gives you sure control of slide, freedom from sag, a bonus in better bonding—smoother plastering, quicker and more economical than with any other plaster base. And remember: plaster base is ROCKLATH only when it’s made by United States Gypsum.

LANDMARKS OF LABOR
No. 1
The Cordwainers of Philadelphia

The Cordwainers (shoemakers) of Philadelphia deserve strong recognition in the long story of working people to better their lot. The cordwainers had the first closed shop of workers and they were in the early days of the 19th century the target for a number of conspiracy cases. Court action under conspiracy laws was used as a weapon with which to fight early efforts of organization and the resistance of the cordwainers as well as their foresight in developing procedures which were later to prove basic to labor's progress give ample proof to a claim in behalf of the cordwainers that they did establish a real landmark for labor.

Report from the GENERAL PRESIDENT

In previous Reports I have tried to keep you up-to-date with the functions of the National Apprenticeship Committee. We have now selected a National Director, Leo Schultz, formerly the Executive Director of the Mountain States Bureau for Lathing & Plastering. Mr. Schultz will begin work around October 1st. The work, at first, will be paper work on the program outlined by our Committee at its last meeting. We have rented office space near our building because much of the material that he will need to develop this program is in our office and cannot be taken out. Much of the material that he will need is material that we work with daily such as: the number of apprentices and the number of journeymen in the local unions, the collective bargaining agreements and many other things of this type. We hope this will result in an Instructor's Manual to be provided to the Local Joint Apprenticeship Committees as guidance for their Instructor. We hope, at a later date, to develop a correspondence course for the smaller local unions who are not in a position to have an Instructor in order to train those apprentices desiring such a course. There is a lot of detail work that has to be done in setting up the organization which we hope will prove beneficial to the Industry as a whole. I believe that most of the differences, if there are any, have been worked out with the federal agencies so actually this program will merely supplement the Manual and the National Standards which you presently have and which many of you have been using.

At this time I would like to report that much progress has been made, particularly in the South, in revitalizing the organizing of State Councils. Five have adopted a State Wide Agreement and a great deal of progress has been made in signing the State Wide Agreements. We have had a very difficult time in the South in getting our wage scales approved by Davis-Bacon, since in many instances there were no signed agreements and the wage scales varied greatly from local to local. This progress is curing many of the ills we had before and our Representatives in the South, and Southwest, who have a difficult territory are to be congratulated on the progress they have made, particularly in the last year. In addition to this, a number of contractors have signed these agreements who have never had a signed agreement before to be submitted to the Labor Department in order that our wage scales can be pre-determined on federally financed work.

The coming two months are going to be rather difficult for Secretary Mills and myself in keeping our office work up-to-date since we have the Building Trades Convention and immediately following is the Metal Trades Convention and immediately following that is the AFL-CIO Convention. These will all be held at the Americana Hotel in New York City. In addition there are several contractors conventions which should be attended for the purpose of discussing the Apprenticeship Program and many other points set forth in the President's Directive regarding discrimination. A lot of committee work and paper work is necessary in setting policy in respect to not only the problems which have come up regarding that matter but, as well, all the routine matters on Resolutions submitted to these Conventions.

We have just completed negotiations again for your Bond and the Secretary is notifying all Local Unions and Councils in the out going mail.

Our own Convention is only one year away and there are many details which must be taken care of. We are now working on these details. I doubt if any delegate, except those who have repeatedly attended our Convention, realizes the amount of work involved in holding a Convention. We are trying to have everything prepared in such a way as to expedite the Convention since the World's Fair is being held in New York City this coming year and we know that many of our delegates would like to at least get a glimpse of what is supposed to be the greatest World's Fair held. We are hoping that we can have everything prepared so that both the business of the Convention and a view of the World's Fair can be had without interrupting any of our necessary business.

On page 12 you will find a letter dated September 30, 1963, from C. J. Haggerty, President of the Building and Construction Trades' Department requesting that the members of the Local Unions write their Congressmen requesting that they support the bill to include fringe benefits in the Davis-Bacon Act, Bill HR-6041. On page 13 is a fact sheet on Davis-Bacon fringe benefits, which will give you ideas to use when you write to your Representative requesting that he support Bill HR-6041. On pages 14 and 15 is a list of the Representatives by state, and you should write to the Representative for your individual area.

It is very important to all of us in the building industry that the Davis-Bacon Act is amended to include fringe benefits, so that any Contractor figuring work using federal funds will have to figure it on the basis of paying the same amount of wages, and fringe benefits as any other Contractor would have to pay. I am requesting that each individual member, in the interest of our industry, contact his Representative either by wire or letter requesting that he support Bill HR-6041.

Fraternally yours,

The hanging roof of the terminal building is supported by peripheral columns which can be likened to two rows of concrete trees between which a continuous hammock has been hung.

Dulles International Airport Terminal

A STRONG form between earth and sky that seems both to rise from the plain and hover over it," was the goal which the late Eero Saarinen gave himself when he designed the terminal building of Dulles International Airport, Chantilly, Virginia, 27 miles from the Nation's capital. But, Mr. Saarinen did more than that: after studying the needs of the passengers and of the airline companies that provide them with jet transportation, he designed a terminal building that can facilitate the activities of each.

Absent from the scene in this, the first airport that was actually designed for the dawning jet age, are the finger-like structural extensions which passengers have become accustomed to trudge to and from planes. Instead, a passenger need walk no more than the 150 foot width of the terminal's lobby, from his ground transportation, to a designated mobile lounge which is docked against the flight-side wall. Large planes do not come up to the terminal, but stop as much as a mile away, at a central service apron. At departure time, the mobile lounge moves from the terminal building to the plane, presses its vestibule against the plane's doorway, and passengers walk directly aboard. Passengers walk less, plane taxiing is reduced, and landing and departure time is cut. In addition, the terminal could be designed as a single compact building, and the potential for future building expansion is simplified.

From the concept that made possible a single compact building, there evolved the design that, while reaching skyward seemed firmly earth-bound. Seen from a distance as one drives along the access road, the terminal seems to rise from a base of approach ramps. The single great room of the terminal, the main concourse, is 150 ft. wide and 600 ft. long. For greatest flexibility all columns within this space have been eliminated.

The hanging roof of the terminal building is supported by a row of columns 40 ft. apart, on each side of the concourse. Sixty-five feet high on the automobile or approach side and 40 ft. high on the field side, these great piers can be likened to two rows of concrete trees between which a continuous hammock has been hung. Attached between these outward-sloping piers are suspension bridge cables, slightly larger than one inch in diameter, which support the concrete panels that constitute the roof. Pairs of cables are 10 ft. apart and encased in concrete.

The ceiling of the main room consists of a suspending ceiling of $\frac{3}{8}$ in. rib metal lath and channels, shaped to repeat the catenary curve of the roof above. Acoustical plaster and the reverse curvature of the ceiling has resulted in freedom from echoes that might have confused public address announcements.

Elsewhere throughout the terminal, furred metal lath and plaster ceilings were installed. Concrete walls were furred with channels and steel studs, to which was wire-tied 3.4 diamond mesh metal lath as a base for gypsum plaster.

Both studless two-inch solid metal lath and plaster partitions, and hollow partitions of metal lath, channel studs and plaster were installed. The former provided economies of space, the latter covered and facilitated installation of service lines; both partitions are durable, crack resistant and resistant to sound transmission.

John H. Hampshire, Inc., Bladensburg, Maryland, executed the contract for lathing and plastering, while the general contractor was Humphrey & Harding, Washington, D.C.

Developed as the jet age gateway to the Nation's capital, Dulles International Airport is described by the Federal Aviation Agency as a "jet airport offering the most modern facilities." Comments N. E. Halaby, Federal Aviation Agency Administrator, "This will be the finest airport in the world when completed . . . It will provide an international gateway to the country of which every citizen can be proud."

Chosen for it were the best of components to bring into reality its efficient and eye-catching design. Included were time-proved metal lath and plaster as the ideal means of creating durable, fire resistive, sound controlling assemblies, which most economically form the shapes of things to come.

The suspended ceiling of the main room of Dulles International Airport Terminal Building has as its base $\frac{3}{8}$ in. rib metal lath and channels, shaped to repeat the catenary curve of the roof above.

Pinholath Speeds Remodeling Jobs, Lowers Cost

AN effective way has been found to shorten the time—and therefore to lower the expense—of remodeling jobs involving gypsum plaster. A new product called "Pinholath" has been designed by Bestwall Gypsum Company. This gypsum lath, with core reinforced with glass fibers, has specially-perforated surface paper to permit faster and more uniform absorption of water. This means that full base-coat application can be completed in one coat, and also assures greater compressive strength of the plaster.

Designed for use in remodeling and in new construction, new "Pinholath" permits rapid straightening of the work and eliminates sagging and dropouts. The tiny pinholes have real "bite." They are scientifically designed to precise depth, width and spacing to assure uniform fast suction. "Pinholath", used in wall and ceiling assemblies, gives fast, controlled take-up making it possible to rod & darby quickly. Moreover, plaster holds better without sagging; has greater crack-resistance; and a full 1-hour fire rating can be achieved at low cost. An added economy feature is that of reduced waste, because superior bonding eliminates slipping and dropouts.

Bestwall "Pinholath" meets all requirements of regular gypsum lath, and is approved by the International Conference of Building Officials in 1-hour fire rated wall and ceiling constructions. It is ideally suited for remodeling jobs, where time and money are such important considerations and where the difference between good and mediocre results is so readily apparent.

These tiny pinholes provide uniform fast suction—help give plaster greater compressive strength.

Buffalo Library Utilizes Metal Lath for Safety

BOOKS are precious things. And they burn readily. Put them in a high-traffic public library and you have a situation which calls for the best in fire protection.

This was the problem faced by architects James William Kideney & Associates, Paul Hyde Harbach and Elon B. Clark, Jr., Buffalo, New York, in designing the new Buffalo and Erie County Public Library. As a solution, they specified membrane fireproofing with metal lath and gypsum plaster, for beams exposed to view and not concealed by acoustic ceilings (over suspended ceilings a sprayed-on asbestos fibre was used) and all isolated interior columns.

Columns and exposed beams were covered with metal lath, affixed with beam clips; to this were wire-tied corner beads and the assembly was sprayed with gypsum plaster. Metal lath wrapped-beams were sprayed to a thickness of $1\frac{3}{8}$ in. for a three-hour fire rating, and metal lath on columns was sprayed to $1\frac{3}{4}$ in. thickness for a four-hour fire rating.

Metal lath, wire-tied to vertical furring attached to the inner side of exterior walls, provided the base for plaster. Suspended ceilings of channel, metal lath and plaster were placed over escalators to follow the sloping angle and to provide a fire barrier; channel, metal lath and plaster were used to create partitions around the escalator machinery.

In most instances, plaster was sprayed on to save time and cost, explains a spokesman for Mader Plastering Corporation, the lathing and plastering contractor on the project. Final coat was applied by hand for a smooth, uniform finish.

The first of the phases of the construction project was completed in November, 1962. At that time, offices and books from the then existing Buffalo and Erie County Central Library Building were moved across Ellicott Street into the new building, the old library torn down, and the second phase of construction commenced on the site. Completion of the second phase is expected in the early autumn of 1964.

When phase two of the project is completed the building will occupy approximately one and one half city blocks, span the intervening street, and contain 375,000 square feet of floor space.

In the completed library will be housed the books and offices of the former Buffalo and Erie County Public Library and the Grosvenor Reference Division.

Metal lath, wire-tied to vertical furring attached to the inner side of exterior walls provided the base for plaster. Kenneth Chapman, lathing foreman, applies 3.4 lb. diamond mesh metal lath to cold rolled channel.

Above: Exposed beams were covered with 3.4 lb. diamond mesh metal lath, affixed with beam clips. Corner beads were then wire-tied to the assembly, to provide proper alignment and protection of corners. Below: after completion of the first phase of the new Buffalo and Erie County Public Library, left center, books and offices were moved from the old structure and the building razed.

Use of Metal Lath Achieves Uncluttered Design

CREATED to serve 16 midwestern states, the new Oak Brook (Illinois) Sales and Distribution Center of Eastman Kodak Company employs some 200 persons to handle sales and distribution of its products.

The building houses a variety of functions within its 200,000 square feet area. Warehouse and shipping facilities take up 144,000 square feet, while 48,000 square feet are devoted to office and sales functions. In addition to complete air-conditioning, special heat and humidity controls have been installed to safeguard sensitive photographic products during handling and storing.

Decorative and acoustical needs are well served by the use of Bestwall Gypsum Lath & Plaster. For this, Cassidy Plastering Company used one carload of Bestwall Gypsum Lath and approximately forty tons of Bestwall Neat Plaster, reinforced with glass fibers for strength and resilience.

The architectural and engineering firm responsible for this handsome new building is Johnson & Johnson of Chicago.

Metal lath & plaster achieves tasteful background for furnishings and equipment.

Illinois State Council Convention

The Illinois State Council Convention, held on September 28-29, was well attended and there were approximately 175 people at the dinner held on Saturday night in conjunction with the meeting. Earl McMann, President of the Chicago Building Trades', was master of ceremonies at the dinner.

The Gold Bond difference: WireTite Field Clip gives you a "third arm"

A simple half-inch extension on our patented clip gives you a "third arm" when you install furred or suspended gypsum-lath ceilings. Because that extra half inch supports the edge of the lath and frees a hand for attaching the next clip. Ceilings go up easier and faster. And you turn out better jobs. Each course of clips locks securely into the preceding course to provide a tight, rigid plastering base. The Gold Bond WireTite Ceiling System has been assigned fire ratings up to 4 hours. And with a ceiling constructed of $\frac{3}{4}$ " furring channels spaced 12" o.c., $\frac{3}{8}$ " gypsum lath, supplementary 14-gauge diagonal wire and $\frac{5}{8}$ " sanded plaster, a sound-transmission loss rating of 49 decibels was achieved, plus a 2-hour fire rating. Ask your Gold Bond® representative for further details. Or write to Dept. L-103, National Gypsum Company, Buffalo 25, N. Y.

Report from the

We All Pay

THE Federal Bureau of Investigation compiles statistics on crime in the U.S. and issues an annual report. These figures currently do not make good news for Americans. The statistics are alarming and are indeed discouraging to anyone who thinks that the world is getting better and better.

In six years bank robberies have tripled. From 450 in 1956 to 1250 in 1962 is the shocking record. These figures also include savings and loan associations, which are doing a tremendous volume of business in the care-taking of funds from American wage-earners.

Embezzlements have almost doubled in six years. We had records of 1,270 in 1956 and last year, there were 2,257 reported cases. There were undoubtedly many, many more which were unreported because the cases were hushed up when restitution was made.

Crime is rising rapidly in our great cities. It is up six per cent in cities over a million and almost 11 per cent in the half million to million population category. Cities of 25,000 to 50,000 have experienced a 6.9 per cent rise and other classes, similar increases of from 4.9 to 6.6 per cent.

The experts tell us that our population is up 7 per cent and crime is up 27 per cent. Crime is growing roughly about four times as fast as our population.

More and more figures could be shown to demonstrate the alarming rise in crime, but it would be more useful to explore the reasons for the rise and the impact of the increase.

The impact is readily apparent. We are all paying for the high cost of crime. No one escapes. When pilferage and shoplifting increase, the consumer pays in higher prices. When banks are harried by robberies and embezzlements, they cannot pay out as much in returns to stockholders or in interest on savings. When crime increases, we need to increase the outlays for the forces of law and order and this means higher taxes at every level.

We are paying for crime in what is almost a breakdown of law and order to the extent that, in many of our cities, it is unsafe to go about at night. An automobile is stolen in this country every 90 seconds, and this all adds up to higher insurance rates for the law abiding drivers. These are a few of the impacts of our rising crime toll. But what of the causes?

Space here only permits a few suggestions of the reasons. We are noting a higher percentage of crime by youth. Young people under 18 committed almost one out of ten crimes last year. Many think our courts have been too lenient with young offenders. The young criminals are old enough to rob, rape, shoot, yoke and assault. They should be considered old enough to suffer the consequences.

There has been too much of an apathy on the part of the law abiding members of the community in the crime situation. People get worked up when a sensational investigation is under way, but quickly forget the brutal facts behind these investigations when the show goes off television. We need greater interest by and participation on the part of community leaders in cooperation with the police in order to cope with the crime problem. We cannot hide ourselves in the civic sand and forget about crime as if it does not concern us—it concerns us all and we all pay.

In Seattle, Washington, and Milwaukee, Wisconsin, where there is wide civic interest and strong police support and where criminals are treated as criminals, the assault rate is one-tenth—just ten per cent—of what it is in Washington, D. C.

It is time for some rethinking on the crime problem, and that rethinking begins at home with all of us. The police and authorities need our support, and we need their devoted and conscientious, non-political discharge of their duties in keeping down the crime rate.

Standing Stark and Strong

STANDING stark and strong, in keeping with its rugged desert surroundings at Victorville, California, is an austere building with walls of random and irregular sizes of natural stone. It has the appearance of a loose and casual stack of rocks that, due to invisible restraint, are held in a true plane, or that were shaken level in a mold and then back-coated with a bonding agent before being tipped into place.

The building is the first of a group of buildings being constructed for the California Interstate Telephone Company on a twenty-acre site. It is a two-story and part-basement structure, approximately 100 ft. square.

Los Angeles architects Risley, Gould & Van Heuklyn designed it to fit the climatic conditions of a desert location, where strong winds, drifting sands, dazzling sunshine and extremes of temperature are usual. Since the building is completely air conditioned, only small windows glazed with glare reducing glass, were placed as vertical accents in each wall.

The walls appear massive, but due to having used metal studs, metal lath and portland cement plaster as the base for the "Featherrock" stone veneer, it was not necessary to use heavyweight concrete or masonry. The use of this metal lath construction technique, points out a spokesman for the architects, resulted in a considerable saving in the cost of the $500,000 building.

In addition, metal lath and portland cement plaster were used to create exterior soffits. The exterior walls cant inward at a 15 degree angle. To compensate for this internally, metal lath and studs were applied in a vertical plane and plastered. Ceilings were created of metal furring, diamond mesh metal lath and plaster. Partitions are of two-inch solid metal lath and plaster. Scratch and brown coats were applied with a plastering machine. The lathing and plastering contractor on this project was Wilson & Woodward of Bloomington, California, while the general contractor was Senk Construction Company, Fontana, California.

The Accounting Building of the Interstate Telephone Company appears to be built to stand the ravages of a sometime-inclement climate. Metal lath, metal studs and portland cement plaster made it possible to attain this goal, economically.

Since the Accounting Building is completely air conditioned, only small windows glazed with glare reducing glass, were placed as vertical accents in each wall. A two-story and part-basement structure, approximately 100 ft. square, it is the first of a group of buildings being constructed for the California Interstate Telephone Company on a twenty-acre site.

Dear Sir and Brother:

I am pleased to advise that the House Rules Committee has started hearings on H.R. 6041, a Bill to include fringe benefits in the wage predeterminations issued under the Davis-Bacon Act. There will be another day of hearings before the Committee considers a Rule. If everything goes well, the Bill should reach the House Floor within the next few weeks.

We have been advised that very few letters have been received in support of this legislation. On the other hand, the Congress is being flooded with mail from State and Local Chapters of the Chamber of Commerce, N.A.M., A.G.C. Local Chapters, unfriendly contractors and other groups opposing this measure. In order to offset this adverse propaganda, we need letters sent to all Members of the House of Representatives from our National and International Unions, Contractor Associations, and friendly contractors, indicating their support of H.R. 6041, without amendments.

It would also be extremely helpful if your would communicate with your local unions requesting them to write their Congressmen immediately in support of this legislation. As you know, letters from individuals to Congressmen have the greatest impact.

Please forward to the Department, copies of any letters sent and replies received from the Members of Congress, which you are able to secure. This is very important. Securing these letters would be most helpful.

With kindest personal regards, I am

Sincerely and fraternally,

C. J. Haggerty
President

FACT SHEET

Davis-Bacon Fringe Benefits

THE Davis-Bacon Act requires that wages paid mechanics and laborers on federally-assisted projects be not less than those found by the Secretary of Labor to be prevailing for such workers on similar construction in the locality in which the project is located. The Act embodies the sound principle that the vast purchasing power of the Federal Government should not be used to depress local prevailing wage standards.

The Davis-Bacon Act was first passed in 1931. New methods of wage payment and of contracting for Federal construction work now indicate the need for updating the Act.

When the Davis-Bacon Act was first passed, health, welfare, insurance and pension plans played a very minor role in the wage structure of construction workers. Today, fringe benefits have become an increasingly significant part of the compensation of workers in the construction industry. It is essential, therefore, that the Congress modernize and update the Davis-Bacon Act by including fringe benefits in determining local area prevailing wage rates.

The evils which the Davis-Bacon Act was designed to correct occur when contractors bring low-paid construction workers from outside the local community to build Federal projects. The low wages of these workers from outside the local area undercut wage rates and undercut living standards for building and construction workers and their families in the local community.

The Davis-Bacon Act is designed to prevent such undercutting of community wage standards and community living standards by requiring contractors to pay workers on Federally aided projects at least as much as the prevailing wage rates in the local community. Thus, the Act is aimed at stopping unfair competition by contractors who under-bid local contractors who hire workers in their locality and pay wage rates—including fringe benefits—on Federal projects.

Unfortunately, the Davis-Bacon prevailing wage requirement no longer reflects the existing wage patterns which now include fringe benefits to an increasing extent. The Act allows unfair competition by contractors who are not required to include fringe benefit costs in paying prevailing wages.

On May 20, 1963, the House Education and Labor Committee favorably reported H.R. 6041, a Bill to include fringe benefits in wage predeterminations issued under the Davis-Bacon Act. This Bill was reported in lieu of H.R. 404, the original Bill, which was amended in Committee. H.R. 6041 is now pending before the House Rules Committee.

The Building and Construction Trades Department feels very strongly that this change is long overdue. The Department is composed of eighteen National and International Unions, representing over three and one-half million building and construction tradesmen throughout the country. We believe that this Bill would not only preserve but enhance the free competitive enterprise system.

Enactment of H.R. 6041 would place all the construction contractors on equal competitive terms. It would eliminate any unfair advantage hitherto enjoyed on Federally financed construction by contractors who do not pay fringe benefits to employees. It does not interfere with the prevailing wage rates paid in a community but requires outside contractors from other States to pay the minimum prevailing wage rate in a community and thereby protects local contractors from unfair competition.

You will note in House Committee Report No. 308, that not one member of the Committee opposed H.R. 6041, with respect to including fringe benefits in determining the prevailing wage in the community. In fact, only 8 of the 31 members filed supplementary views. In the supplementary views of five of these members, it states in part—

“The cost of fringe benefits should be included when the prevailing wage rate is computed under provisions of the Davis-Bacon Act. When the Act was passed in 1931, fringe benefits were for the most part unknown. At that time, a worker received a flat amount, usually so much per hour, and this constituted his whole wage. Today, that is not the case. The so-called fringe benefits are an important part of a worker's wage often being given today in lieu of increases in actual cash wages. Therefore, we believe the present law should be amended to permit the inclusion of fringe benefits when the prevailing wage is determined.”

Other parts of the supplementary report concern administrative changes which have nothing to do with the merits of this legislation.

The Department strongly urges early and favorable consideration of this much-needed legislation.

Your support of this legislation is urgently needed. A list of Congressmen and Senators appears on pages 14 and 15 as a reference for correspondence.

If Goldwater Were President . . . Goodbye Progress

HIS name is Barry Morris Goldwater. He is a department store owner from Arizona who once won an award for merchandising men's under-drawers. He is also a United States Senator. If his backers have their way, he may well be the Republican nominee for President in 1964.

What would America be like under a President Goldwater? Based on his record as a senator and his public statements, we could expect the following:

On social welfare—Repeal or severe cutback of all New Deal, Fair Deal and New Frontier legislation which protects the welfare and security of the little man. This includes social security, unemployment compensation, minimum wage and other progressive laws.

Goldwater has said: "I fear Washington and centralized government more than I do Moscow." (Spartanburg, S.C., Herald, Sept. 16, 1960). In the same news story, it was revealed, "He said later, in an interview, that he is opposed to a social security program in which the federal government provides funds. 'Millions are being spent recklessly for this,' he said."

In his book, "Conscience of a Conservative," Goldwater summed up his thinking on social welfare issues: "The government must begin to withdraw from a whole series of programs . . . from social welfare programs, education, public power, agriculture, public housing, urban renewal and all the other activities that can be better performed by lower levels of government or by private institutions or by individuals."

His voting record as a senator has reflected this statement. He entered the Senate in 1953. Since then, he has gone on record in nearly 50 roll call votes listed in official COPE voting records. He voted wrong on every one of them.

On taxes—Goldwater believes in soaking the poor. He says: "Get rid of the whole graduated income tax." (Washington Star, Dec. 3, 1961) He explains his program in his book: "Government has a right to claim an equal percentage of each man's wealth, and no more." This means if a man making $50,000 a year were taxed $25,000—50 percent—a man making $5,000 must be taxed $2,500, also 50 percent.

On medical care for the elderly—Goldwater protests against health insurance for the elderly under social security. He views the struggle as "an area in which the ideals of free enterprise and voluntary action meet head on with the radical liberal dogma of the welfare state." (Chicago Daily News, Dec. 24, 1960).

A health care program, he says, would be a blow to freedom. "When you (the government) say to Johnny, 'Don't worry about the old man or your mother, we're going to take care of them when they get older,' you've destroyed his freedom there, the freedom of responsibility. . . ." (Face the Nation" telecast, Jan. 26, 1961)

On Labor—Goldwater would ban union political activities. He would enact a federal right to work law. He introduced a bill in the Senate Jan. 14, 1963, to place a whole new set of restrictions on unions, an open shop law among them.

On human rights—According to the Washington Star, July 25, 1963, Goldwater opposes fair employment practices laws (FEPC), and he opposes the proposed public accommodations law.

On foreign affairs—Goldwater utters a hodge-podge of "get tough" statements in his attacks on President Kennedy's foreign policy. He opposes negotiated settlements to ease cold war tensions.

On the role of government—Goldwater is obsessed with the relation of the individual citizen to the federal government, or rather the relation of the citizen's money to government.

He believes freedom is expressed in terms of money, and he proposes "sound money and a balanced budget, because deficit spending is dangerous to freedom." (Chicago Daily News, Nov. 18, 1960) "The big thing we have to do is to permit the individual to spend more of his own money." (Washington Star, Dec. 3, 1961)

He thinks the government rides rough-shod over the individual, the government being ". . . a vast national authority out of touch with the people and out of their control." (New Republic, March 27, 1961)

He fears we are rushing headlong into socialism. When President Kennedy cracked down on the steel industry's price increase last year, Goldwater accused him of "trying to socialize the business of this country." (New York Times, April 16, 1962)

Goldwater doesn't often slip to the mud-slinging level of his right-wing friends and supporters. Yet he has called Walter Reuther "more dangerous than the sputniks." He has charged Chief Justice Earl Warren "is a socialist." (St. Louis Post-Dispatch, April 18, 1959) he has said of President Kennedy's advisors: "These people are not Democrats. The nicest thing we can say about them is that they're socialists." (Cincinnati Enquirer, Nov. 19, 1961)

Goldwater may or may not become the Republican presidential nominee in 1964. If he does, the words of one prominent American, assessing Goldwater's credentials for President, may serve as a warning. He said (New York Post, May 11, 1961) he does not think Goldwater is "equipped for the job; there are men far better equipped."

The speaker was Barry M. Goldwater.

Bluebirds Find Friends

WHEN George Ludwig, secretary of Lathers Local 225, Kenosha, Wisconsin, isn't on the job and at his union work he is often busy with an unusual hobby. He builds bird houses and watches birds.

The houses he makes are a very special type with a roof and base that can be opened for observation and cleaning. It has a one and one-quarter inch round hole so that it will be favored by bluebirds, wrens, tree swallows and chickadees.

If a sparrow decides to make the house his home the nest is destroyed. If it still persists, the box is moved to a new location.

There is a total of 101 houses which are tended by the bird study group which is affiliated with the Kenosha County Garden club. Ten persons visit these houses scattered on fence posts in the county to a mile west of Highway 45. A master map, maintained by Ludwig, gives the location of each of the numbered boxes.

Each house is inspected two or three times a month and a report of its condition made to Ludwig who tabulates the figures. This year's count shows 94 young bluebirds, 59 tree swallows, 53 house wrens, and three chickadees. An annual report is made to the Wisconsin Society for Ornithology.

The bird study group includes Ludwig's wife Thelma, Gen and Tony Crema, Hazel and Wally Forbes, Alta and Tony Robertson, Miss Dorothy Aul, and Mrs. Pauline Schwalbe.

Besides maintaining the houses the group gets together for camping-bird watching trips to the Horicon marsh, the Kettle Moraine area, Devil's lake in Baraboo, Wyalusing state park on the Mississippi river. Two trips were also made to Starved Rock park, in Illinois.

The Conservation club grounds in Bristol is their favorite area to spot shorebirds as well as song birds. Tentative plans have been made for the near future to camp near the marshlands to capture the sounds and sights of wildlife in the early morning hours.

The local bird study group was the inspiration and devotion of the late Mabel Higgins who helped stimulate a mutual interest among six Kenosha women.

The first dozen of crude bluebird houses were set up by the group in 1950, adding more each year. At the present time there is a total of 101, more than three-fourths of which were built by Ludwig.

Besides the many natural hazards bluebirds face there are several man-made. The increased use of pesticides, the over-cultivation of land in farming the replacement of wooden fence posts by metal or concrete ones, taking away bluebird nesting spots.

The Kenosha club is one of several trying to help the birds. Others include the Wisconsin Society for Ornithology, the Wisconsin Federation of Garden clubs, the Audubon societies, and 4-H groups.

About 10 per cent of the bird houses are lost annually by malicious gun-toters who blast away at the bird houses, often killing the occupants. Some are broken by rocks and limbs and others are carried away, Ludwig said.

George Ludwig, secretary of Lathers Local 225 and a leader in a bird study group, inspects a bluebird house out in the country.

MECHANICS' UNION OF TRADE ASSOCIATIONS—1827

FIRST "UNION OF UNIONS"

In 1827 labor history was made when unions banded together in the Mechanics' Union of Trade Associations. This was the first effort of unions of different callings to join together in what was virtually a "union of unions". This development was a forerunner of our city central bodies of today. The Association grew out of a carpenters' strike in which the workmen were demanding a 10-hour day. The carpenters had obtained support from other building trades men—bricklayers, painters, glaziers, etc. Although the strike failed, the experience led to the formation of a more permanent organization. The aims of the Association also foreshadowed the place of the purchasing power theory as a reason for higher wages for workers—a basic tenet which is being urged today by trade unions. The Association also foreshadowed political action by working people and thus on several counts in its activity blazed a new trail and carved out a landmark of labor.

COLLEGE IS AMERICA'S BEST FRIEND

Every American should give special thought to the college problem. Not because alumni of higher institutions can solve all of our country's difficulties but because they, by and large, produce most of America's leaders.

We need this well-trained leadership for ideas, for imagination, for clear vision, for creative solutions. This is what it will take to hold our place in science and development, business, jobs and living standards, in human progress and the paths of peace.

But higher education is facing a crisis—colleges are in a squeeze. Some face shortages. The growing number of applicants is staggering. If we are serious about remaining ahead, we must be equally serious about seeing that our colleges have enough classrooms, lab facilities and competent teachers.

College is America's best friend—give to the college of your choice.

If you want to know what the college dilemma means to you, write for a free booklet to: HIGHER EDUCATION, Box 36, Times Square Station, New York 36, N. Y.

Report from the

GENERAL PRESIDENT

DUE to the numerous conventions coming up, starting this week, there may be a delay in the answers to your letters, coming from this office. The Contractors National Convention starts next week in New Orleans and we have two committee meetings during that period which must be attended . . . (1) the Apprenticeship Committee and (2) the Labor Committee. I will be unable to attend the entire convention since the Building Trades Convention convenes in New York City, November 6, therefore, I will be required to leave the Contractors Convention, since I am chairman of the Laws and Legislation Committee for the Building and Construction Trades Department. Following the Building Trades Convention is the AFL-CIO Convention . . . all of these conventions, as you can see, will require me to be away from the office about three weeks.

Going back to our National Apprenticeship Committee meeting. We have established the national office and equipped it and have a skeleton program set up, with finances, budget, etc., to be submitted to the National Joint Committee. We also have the Director working on the National level, and some time will be taken by the committee during this convention to approve or disapprove or make suggestions on other matters which myself, as Co-chairman for labor and Jerry Burns, as Co-Chairman for the employers, will have to discuss. There are many, many details to setting up a program of this type. We have already started the National Director to work on an instructors manual, which will be used not only by our apprenticeship instructors we hope, since we want to have it set up in such a way that the smaller local unions can have a correspondence course based upon the provisions set forth in the instructions manual.

I have had a number of letters and telegrams requesting the correspondence course. However, I think you can readily see that a correspondence course can not be set up until we have the basic instructors manual put together, which, again, requires a great deal of time. However, we hope to get the policy set up by the National Committee this coming Saturday which will permit us to get into the actual work. We have already done some of this. In addition to that we have the problem of the President's directive, sent out by the Apprenticeship Division of the Department of Labor to take into consideration, which deals primarily with discrimination. However, since our present standards and manual have this included in them, I urge you to continue to use them as a guide for your apprenticeship program until the new apprenticeship manuals are ready.

Last week a meeting was called for the final dissolution of the Bureau of Lathing and Plastering and the legal work is now being done by our General Counsel, Louis Wilderman, who is also the Counsel for the National Promotional Program. There is no longer a National Joint Committee for the promotion of lath and plaster since the contractors on the national level let the program die and no money is coming in. This happened even after labor had agreed to comply with the law and serve only in the advisory capacity. It was rather heart breaking after ten years of work to see this program go down the drain, especially after all the time, effort and money had been spent, because a few contractors who, in my opinion, engaged in the conspiracy to break up the National Bureau for the promotion of lath and plaster using as a basis the Ninth Circuit Court decision. We now have a bill before the House Labor Sub-committee, which is comparable to the bill which we failed to have passed last year, which makes joint committees for the purpose of promotion of the industry legal. What chance this bill has of passing this year is anybody's guess in view of the controversy over the tax cut and the F.E.P.C. bill. However, we are still continuing to work on it and I would appreciate letters being sent both from the local unions and the membership to the House Labor Sub-committee encouraging their support and vote on H.R. 5690.

The members of the sub-committee are as follows, and to whom your letters should be directed.

St. Frances Cabrini Church, New Orleans

THE tall spire and cross mark the most important part of the new St. Frances Cabrini church. This beautiful display of craftsmanship was made possible by the extensive use of metal lath.

St. Frances Cabrini Church has been architecturally molded to fit the Mass. In designing the $929,000 building, architects gave prime consideration to directing the congregation's attention to the main altar, and seating 1,200 of them at a time as close to the priest as possible.

The result is a square brick building with the altar in one corner and three sets of pews fanning around it in a quadrant. Over each set of pews is a concrete half-cylinder roof, wide at the back but tapering in toward the altar.

Thus all lines lead to the altar. And by spreading the Mass-goers around the altar the last pews are only 102 feet from the priest, about half the distance of churches of comparable size.

The tapered shell roofs act as light reflectors and sound avenues.

The walls of the church are solid brick with no windows and only one door to a side.

Sidney Folse, of the architectural firm of Curtis and Davis, said the solid walls were designed to give parishioners a feeling of leaving the outside world when they enter. The brick was used to harmonize with the Oak Park homes surrounding the church.

The spire of the church qualifies as a landmark for the lakefront area. From a cross 134 feet on top it descends through the roof of the building to four slender legs placed on the sides of the altar. Its interior forms a canopy, finished in gold leaf, for the altar.

World War II inventions contributed to the church architecture in two instances. When the architects were mulling designs to retain the intimacy of a church, they recalled Cabrini's temporary church, an "L" shaped Quonset hut. That's the origin of the three half-cylinder roofs.

And to finish the concrete shell roofs they sprayed them with three coats of vinyl cocoon, much like the coating used to "mothball" U.S. Naval warships.

Stained glass windows, a marble altar and a life-size crucifix for the altar will be added.

The church also has a 120-ton air conditioning unit, a 1549-pipe organ, circular confessionals, an elaborate baptistry, and side altars in separate rooms.

The design of the building won for Curtis and Davis the top award of the Church Architectural Guild of America and the National Council of Churches last year.

All aisles and lines of the church lead directly toward the sanctuary, focusing attention of parishioners toward the altar. The glass wall beside the doors separates main part of the church from the baptistry.

Metal lath construction of spire

The baptistry in the cage-like area

Even from the side there are no supporting columns to block the view of the altar and no statues or vigil lights to distract attention from the altar. The fan-like arrangement of seats enable full participation of the congregation in such services as the dialogue Mass. The walled-off areas to either side of the seating section house the side altars in chapels, a small lending library, rest rooms, and a room for use by brides in preparing for weddings.

CORRECT CAMERA CLICKING

—a few helpful
pointers

NO one will ever be able to estimate the money lost or disappointments suffered annually because of the missed snapshots of the nation's amateur photographers. The shutter-snapping season is fast coming up and, for that reason, here are photographic pointers for the amateur cameraman or camera-woman.

While some of the amateurs are better than many professional lensmen, the average shutterbug suffers from one very common failing: he doesn't read directions! Many people buy a camera and throw away, unread, the book of directions which came with it. It is almost as if they feel that they have been endowed with photographic knowledge because they had the price of a camera.

It is important to read all directions which come with any camera. Ordinarily speaking, you cannot get much of any kind of a camera for less than $12 or $15 nowadays. Paying more will, ordinarily, give you a more complicated camera, capable of taking pictures under more adverse light and motion conditions. But whether you are able to handle the more complicated camera often depends on whether you have carefully read the directions.

The one most common fault of amateurs in taking pictures is the simplest one: not holding the camera steady at the moment the shutter is opened. Many people jab that shutter plunger like they were driving a spear into a roaring dragon! The result is that the camera (and the film inside it!) moves at the instant the shutter opens to let the light hit the film. The result is a picture which is "fuzzy" and unsharp. If at all possible, rest your camera on something solid (like the fender of a car (with the engine turned off) when taking a snap. If you can't then hold it steady and brace it against your body as securely as possible. Squeeze the trigger off slowly rather than "punching" it. Hold your breath and s-q-u-e-e-z-e! If that camera moves just a thousandth of an inch while the shutter is open, Aunt Julia's picture is going to look blurrier than Uncle Pete ever saw her at two a. m. after his lodge smoker!

Make certain there is enough sunlight for your particular type of camera and the film you're using. Simple cameras generally do not have diaphragms or variable shutter speeds to control the amount of light exposure. They depend on fairly bright sunlight. Especially if you are shooting reversal-type color film (like Kodacolor) you should have fairly bright sunlight. Refer to the directions which are packed with the film. (There goes that "read the directions" again . . . it cannot be too strongly stressed!)

s-q-u-e-e-z-e easy like a rifle.

If your camera has a couple of lever positions such as "B&W" (black and white) and "Color" (full-color film) make certain you understand the settings. Sometimes (according to the directions!) when you move up very close with color and using a flashbulb you switch to "B&W" in order to avoid over-exposure even though you are shooting color. This may also apply if you're in extremely bright sunshine on open water or at the beach. However, only experience will teach some of these lessons for no one can cover all possible situations in a brief instruction sheet.

Unless you are a really experienced amateur who knows what he is doing, don't try to shoot against the sun or into strong light, (such as an open window). Keep the sun either directly behind you or at an angle from behind you. If the sun is high in the sky and you are close-up on your subject, use a flashbulb to lighten up facial shadows. If you're more than six or eight feet away in strong sunlight the average small flashbulb won't do any good. For close-ups at four to six feet it results in almost unbelievable improvements in picture quality . . . if you don't move the camera!

Taken one after the other, directions are not so complicated!

Make certain of good pictures; keep your back at least angled to the sun.

When you are shooting pictures inside with a moderately-priced camera using flashbulbs, you probably have no diaphragm to control the amount of light allowed to hit the film. Since daylight will not count for much, if anything, you must calculate the flashbulb's light. This is generally done by checking the directions (here we go again!) on the container which held the bulbs. If you want to get closer than the directions allow, put one thickness of a white handkerchief over the reflector. There is no way to increase the available light without using additional bulbs rigged to fire instantaneously (and this generally is not possible with cheaper cameras.)

The more expensive cameras of today have either automatic exposure-setting devices or automatic built-in exposure meters. In the former, the exposure is set automatically. In the latter, there is generally a moving indicator which tells how to set diaphragm and/or shutter speed. Generally speaking, shutter speeds should be as slow as possible and still "freeze" the motion. This allows for a correspondingly smaller diaphragm setting and a consequently deeper depth of field (where objects in the final print seem sharp to the eye.) A speed of $1/25$ or $1/50$ th of a second is fast enough for pictures of people standing still. On the other hand, pictures of people in motion, horses running, or other forms of subject motion may demand speeds up to or beyond 1500 th of a second, depending on the direction of the action relative to the camera's position and how close the lensman is to the moving object he is photographing.

Don't leave cameras exposed to intense rays of sun on top of auto's rear deck.

If your budget will allow it, it is better to pay a little more than you planned to spend in order to get a better camera which will do more and last longer. Don't abuse your camera and possibly ruin the film inside it by storing it in the glove compartment of an auto or, even worse, on the shelf behind the back seat of an auto. Most cameras are black and if allowed to sit in the direct summer sun (especially inside an unventilated car) they may soak up enough heat to actually melt! Even though no visible damage is inflicted, the film inside can be melted and ruined. Don't load or unload your camera in direct sunlight. Don't wipe the lens with anything other than lens tissues or a well-laundered, unstarched, clean handkerchief, and then only lightly. Many lenses of cheaper cameras are made of easily-scratched plastic.

If you're somewhere far removed from home and there's a beautiful scene you want a picture of, and you're not quite certain how to set your camera, why not take two or three shots? That is the way professional photographers insure success. They take one shot at what they think should be the proper exposure. Then they take another one a little bit more-exposed and a third a little bit less-exposed. It costs more for film, but you're a whole lot more likely to get a good print.

Most amateurs make the mistake of standing too far away from their subjects. They do not fill up the frame with their subject matter. They move back 15 feet to take the picture of two or three people and, as a result, when the prints are made, the figures are tiny and great expanses of the picture are wasted with uninteresting vistas of grass, sky, sides of a building, or other non-pertinent and undesired elements. Move in close!

Good shooting!

Whenever you can, steady camera on something solid to prevent movement.

Report from the

GENERAL SECRETARY-TREASURER

Social Security . . . Us

The Federal Government is always on a strange quest—a quest for people who deserve Social Security benefits and are not being paid them. And the reason is simple: they have not applied for the benefits.

The Social Security Administration estimates that there are about a million people who should be getting paid Social Security benefits, but who are not receiving a cent even though they are fully and legally entitled to be paid. These people are 65 years or older and many undoubtedly need the money in their golden years.

The law has changed and the eligibility requirements have been somewhat eased. This would mean that people who once were not eligible may now be eligible for benefits. Why are so many persons remiss in claiming their Social Security?

Some men past 65 think that since they are still working they are not eligible. The rules have been liberalized. Anyone who is eligible and is still working should look into the matter; he may be entitled to at least part of his benefit and not know it.

The liberalized rules on the number of credits necessary may make some eligible who thought heretofore and may still be under the impression that they have insufficient credits entitling them to payments.

Some persons may think that in order to receive Social Security benefits, they must be in need. Need has nothing to do with payments. If a person has the credits and is legally entitled to payments, he can receive them even if he is a millionaire.

Disabled workers or survivors of workers who died before reaching 65 may have benefits coming.

It is no secret that the American Labor Movement has been one of the staunchest supporters of Social Security. And, in recent years, we have endeavored through the AFL-CIO and our International Union to increase the benefits for all citizens. It is worth an inquiry. If a person is over 65 and feels he is entitled to payment, he should make an inquiry to his nearest Social Security office or should write to the Social Security Administration, Baltimore, Maryland. That is where all the records are kept.

Fibreglass Reinforced Gypsum Tested

A recent test series, held at the laboratories of Bestwall Gypsum Company, Paoli, Pennsylvania, has shown the durability, fire, crack and shock resistance of gypsum reinforced with glass fibers as opposed to a comparable panel of gypsum which was not reinforced. The board products—lath, wallboard, sheathing, ceiling tile—contain literally miles of glass fibers dispersed through the core. There are for instance, 1.2 miles of glass fiber dispersed through every square foot of $\frac{3}{8}$ " board; 1.6 miles through every square foot of the $\frac{1}{2}$ " thickness and 2.1 miles of glass fiber through every square foot of the $\frac{5}{8}$ " thick board. The gypsum core competing in the tests was totally unreinforced.

Test No. 1.—Nine regular wall-board nails were inserted into and through the two panels in the test. These nails were placed along the edge of the gypsum panels where they would normally be inserted in actual construction although spacing would be much further apart on the jobsite.

Result: The glass reinforced panel shows little damage while the panel with no reinforcement splinters and falls apart.

Test No. 2.—This test shows shock resistance. A steel ball traveling at high speed shattering the unreinforced gypsum panel on impact—it barely dents the glass fiber reinforced panel.

Test No. 3.—A one pound weight is dropped two feet on both panels.

Results: Unreinforced gypsum panel is crushed while the glass fiber reinforced shows no damage.

Test No. 4.—Gypsum with glass fiber reinforcement withstood this open flame test for a full eight hours. The unreinforced gypsum panel began showing signs of deterioration after fifteen minutes exposure. The reinforced core was still intact after more than eight hours.

Furnace Safety

Starting a fire is traditionally a cheerful task. But it can be the prelude to tragedy. The start of the fall heating season every year triggers a series of home fires.

These fires often start for the same cause—faulty construction around heating plants, particularly over furnace stack pipes. Basement ceilings over furnaces and stack pipes must be properly protected against fire. Effective first protection for such areas can be achieved by finishing the ceiling with metal lath and plaster.

Metal lath and plaster construction has more than a 1-hour official fire resistance rating, and will protect wood joists against very high heat for even much longer periods. Because plaster reinforced with metal lath is seamless, this type of construction will make a tighter job than is possible with prefabricated unit materials.

The good start made by plastering the ceiling over the furnace may inspire completion of the ceiling later on for a more attractive and safer basement.

If a partition is needed near the furnace, a solid and substantial one can be constructed easily by covering a framework of light steel channels with metal lath and thereafter plastering both sides.

Manufacturers Contribute Material Used in Apprentice Program

In the September 1963 issue of "The Lather" we had a story, and pictures of the Atlanta, Georgia Apprentice School on pages 2 and 3. In this story we failed to give recognition to the manufacturers who have contributed material to the Apprentice School, and because of this have helped to make it successful.

The manufacturers contributing are as follows: Inland Steel Company; Alabama Metal Lath Partitions; U. S. Gypsum Company; National Gypsum Company.

We wish at this time to thank these firms for helping our Apprentice Program in Atlanta by contributing material to be used by the apprentices for their training.

Project Changed From Drywall to Lath and Plaster

Though the efforts of the Ontario Bureau for Lathing and Plastering, and our Local Representatives, the Moss Park Apartments, Toronto, Ontario, Canada, were changed from drywall to lath, and plaster.

Even though there were members of the Housing Authority who desired lath and plaster, the real reason for its use was because of a saving in cost. People from the drywall industry tried to convince the Housing Authority that they could save between $100,000.00, and $125,000.00, and because of this the Housing Authority were pressured into accepting drywall bids. It was later proven, however, that by using 2" solid metal lath, and plaster partitions the bid for the lath and plaster was approximately $9,000.00 less than the bids for drywall. Therefore, lath and plaster was used in this project.

The General Contract for these three 16-story buildings was $7,993,000.00.

Fire Protection Added During Remodeling

"When you have a good thing, stick with it." This classic advice is apparently being taken seriously by more and more homeowners across the country, as shown by the growing trend to modernization and expansion of existing homes.

Fire protection is one essential element which can easily and economically be added to a home, especially during renovation. A remarkable degree of fire safety may be added at moderate cost to a building with wood joists and wood studding (typical constructions for homes) by covering walls and ceilings with plaster on metal lath.

The metal lath and plaster will provide more than one hour of fire resistance to wood joists and studs. It will also do much to rehabilitate the property, reduce decorating expense and promote sanitation.

In most cases, the metal lath can simply be nailed to existing joists or studs, over present ceilings or walls. Plaster can then be applied to the metal lath in the usual fashion.

If partitions are part of the remodeling plan, a metal lath and plaster partition need be only 2 inches thick, but will be strong and fire resistant. Such partitions definitely should be used to separate a connecting garage from the rest of the house for fire protection. Similarly, this kind of construction should be used on basement ceilings over furnaces and stack pipes.

'This Will Open the Gate'

Local Representative's Promotional Effort Successful

John Trojan, Representative of Local 359, Providence, Rhode Island, called on Castellucci, Galli, and Planka Associates, Architects, because changes in the plans, and specifications for the Pawtuckett Housing for the elderly eliminated metal plaster stop originally specified, and found that the architect had been able to restore about 75% of the metal lath in the same change order making the loss of work to the Lathers negligible. As a result of this meeting the following letter was received from Eugene D. Castellucci of the Architects' firm.

September 10, 1963

234 Central Avenue
Pawtuckett, Rhode Island

Re: Pawtuckett Housing for the Elderly, R. I. 2-3

Dear Mr. Trojan:

I am very happy that you called the other day expressing your concern over the possible loss of work for the fine workmen belonging to the Metal Lathing Union because it gave me an opportunity to become more cognizance of your problems and our problems for a project that we are both deeply interested in.

In answer to your question regarding the elimination of the metal stops, may I point out that this was necessitated because of the very tight budget which can not be expanded because it involves federal funds from the Public Housing Agency. However, we did manage to restore 75% of the metal lath work in the same change order for providing metal lath and plaster fill around the numerous pipe chasers around the building. Under the above arrangements the overall loss of work to your workers would be negligible.

At any rate we would never knowingly or in any way change or interfere our design for this project or any future project that would in any way create a hardship or eliminate a job for a needy worker. In the past we have always utilized metal lath and plaster design in all of our buildings of major importance. As an example of our good intentions for the working man especially in the metal lath and plaster business of construction, may I list the following projects which are presently under design by our firm and which incorporate extensive use of metal lath and plaster: New Central Falls Housing for the Elderly: This will be a high rise building consisting 125 apartments for the elderly and very similar to the Pawtuckett project.

We are also designing two additional high rise buildings in Woonsocket each with 150 apartments units representing $4,000,000.00 worth of work. In the Newport area we are designing additional apartments representing over $2,000,000.00 of work there.

With the many projects this firm has under contract please be assured that the next two or three years promises an abundance of work for your people.

Please feel free to call to discuss any problem which you feel might be helpful to the members of your union as they concern us and influence us greatly in our design and service to our client.

Very truly, yours,

CASTELLUCCI, GALLI & PLANKA ASSOCIATES

60th Wedding Anniversary Is Celebrated

Oldtimers in the building trades field no doubt will be amazed to learn that Harry E. Baldwin, 82, and his good wife, Margaret, 78, quietly celebrated their 60th wedding anniversary at their home in St. Louis, Missouri. They were married on Sept. 30, 1903, in old St. Kevin's Parish on the outskirts of the famed Kerry Patch. The old church is no longer in existence.

Harry Baldwin compiled a record which is rare indeed in the American Labor Movement. He is a charter member of Lathers Local 73, which was chartered by Wood, Wire & Metal Lathers' International Union in 1901. Prior to that time, he belonged to an unaffiliated Lathers Union which was founded in 1899.

He was elected president of the Local after it was chartered and for the next 53 years was consecutively reelected until illness forced him to retire in 1954. The number of such long tenures is indeed rare in the American labor movement, and indicates the extreme popularity of Harry Baldwin extended to at least

After he announced his retirement, he was elected to be President Emeritus of his Local. Before his illness he regularly attended union meetings and has always taken a keen and active interest in union and public affairs. And even now, he never neglects to vote in general elections and cast the kind of ballot you can expect of an informed citizen.

Associates who knew him claim that he was the tops in his trade. Consequently it is no wonder that his son, Russell, has followed in his footsteps and now is Business Representative for Local 73.

The Baldwins' have another son, Harold, and a daughter, Margaret. They also have one grandson, the son of Russell, who is a West Point graduate and now is a first lieutenant, stationed in West Germany.

May the Harry Baldwins enjoy a continued long and happy sundown of life, such as few married couples are fated to enjoy.

"A Businessman's Prayer"

"Teach me that sixty minutes make an hour, sixteen ounces a pound, and one hundred cents a dollar—Help me so to live that I can lie down at night with a clear conscience, without a gun under my pillow, and unhaunted by the faces of those to whom I have brought pain—Grant that I may earn my meal ticket on the square, and in earning it I may do unto others as I would have others do unto me—Deafen me to the jingle of tainted money and to the rustle of unholy skirts—Blind me to the faults of the other fellow, but reveal to me my own—Keep me young enough to laugh with little children, and sympathetic enough to be considerate of old age—And when comes the day of darkening shades and the smell of flowers, the tread of soft footsteps and the crunching wheels in the yard—make the ceremony short and the epitaph simple—'Here lies a man.'"

Meany Urges All-Out Labor Efforts in '64

AFL-CIO President George Meany has warned "the money and manpower of big industry and the right wing will be pumped into the 1964 elections in unprecedented amounts to elect conservative candidates."

In a kickoff address to the recent COPE Big Cities Conference, Meany urged delegates to offset the conservative drive by using "our natural advantage in the big cities and their suburbs. We must register record numbers of union members, their families and friends, and we must conduct a massive get-out-the-vote campaign."

About 80 delegates, representing the nation's 22 most populous metropolitan areas, attended the conference.

Meany said, "The outcome of the presidential and congressional elections next year will hinge on what we are able to accomplish in the major industrial cities and the fast-growing suburbs around them. Nothing can be taken for granted. We can afford no illusions about the prospects for liberal victories in 1964. Only if we get our members to register and vote can we feel confident of reasonable success."

He said, "We certainly must improve on past performance." He pointed out in 1960 only about 60 percent of union members voted in the presidential contest, and approximately 50 percent voted in the 1962 congressional elections. "This just about equals voting performance of the population as a whole, but we should do better."

Recent formation of conservative political action groups provides conclusive evidence that reactionaries are stepping up their political efforts in hopes of making 1964 a year to elect a Congress and a President who will "turn back the clock on progressive legislation," Meany stated. Among such groups, he said, are the American Medical Political Action Committee of the American Medical Association, and the Business-Industry Political Action Committee, launched this summer by the National Association of Manufacturers.

Meany called on delegates to "redouble your efforts to increase the effectiveness of citywide register-and-vote drives, and to vastly expand the political participation of union members."

Also addressing the conference was political analyst Louis Harris who cited statistics showing the gap in voting performance between city-dwellers and rural and other non-urban residents.

Harris said in 1960 in New York State, 18 percent less of the total number of urban citizens eligible to vote turned out than in non-metropolitan areas of the state; in Missouri, 15 percent; in Ohio, 11 percent; in Wisconsin, 9 percent; in Illinois and Minnesota, 7 percent; in Michigan, 6 percent; in California, 5 percent.

He said this lag in voting performance of city-dwellers "costs hundreds of thousands of votes for liberal candidates."

Harris predicted pivotal issues in the 1964 presidential race will be health insurance for the elderly, taxes, Cuba, civil rights, foreign aid and President Kennedy's handling of the economy. On all of these issues, Harris said, public support of the President's programs hovers around 50 percent, making them "battleground" issues. Issues working strongly for the President, he stated, will be defense, space, foreign policy, education, labor policies, Peace Corps and Kennedy's personality.

Agriculture, government spending and his handling of Congress will be issues on which the President may be vulnerable, Harris forecast.

One more link has been forged to the chain that soon will unite into a functioning political alliance the forces of big business, the medical profession and the right wing.

The link is BIPAC, the Business-

Industry Political Action Committee. It is the brainchild of the National Association of Manufacturers which set up a $100,000 fund to get BIPAC started. It now stands shoulder to shoulder with the American Medical Political Action Committee (AMPAC) and the rightist groups active in politics, notably Americans for Constitutional Action.

All are dedicated to the same objective: election to Congress of extreme conservatives who reject new, and would weaken or destroy established, social welfare programs.

BIPAC was formed, according to one of its leaflets, to meet the challenge of a "steadily increasing trend toward centralization of our government and domination of the economy and the individual. . . ."

NAM members and other businessmen are being urged to pay $10 to $99 for memberships to build a BIPAC fund which can be poured into support of congressional candidates who would oppose such "domination."

That BIPAC will be ultra-conservative in its approach is indicated by its leadership, as well as its initial propaganda. Executive Director is Laurie Battle, former Democratic congressman from Alabama, 1947-54. As a congressman, his votes, with few exceptions, were against the interests of working people. He once campaigned on a racist platform against Sen. John Sparkman.

The BIPAC board of directors contains a number of men active in, or of financial assistance to, various right wing groups. Among them are: Clifford J. Backstrand, Armstrong Cork Co., a sponsor of Young Americans for Freedom; Kinsey M. Robinson, Washington Water Power Co., member of the American Economic Foundation and contributor to ultra-right Harding College, Searcy, Ark.; R. Downs Poindexter, Superior Iron Works, contributor to Americans for Constitutional Action.

Labor Fights on Many Fronts for All Americans

● ORGANIZED labor is fighting a continuing battle, or series of battles, on several fronts for all Americans. Labor knows what is good for labor is good for America. Labor does not seek special benefits or privileges for itself as a class apart. Labor seeks to see conditions improved for all citizens.

Unions fight for better wages, hours and conditions. These are the traditional aims of unionism and they are still the foundation stones for present day success. But the scope of these aims has been broadened and "conditions" can cover a wide variety of factors which help to make life better both on the job and off the job. Let's take a look at some of the ways in which organized labor works for the members and for the citizens of this country.

On the legislative front, for example, we find items in the daily news of vital interest to labor. And in the legislative proceedings labor is having its say, both at the state and national levels. Labor is finding that it must wage a constant battle against antiunion efforts to turn back the clock. Sometimes we win; sometimes we don't. We lost and lost badly when Congress passed the Taft-Hartley Law in 1947 and we lost again in 1959 when the Landrum-Griffin Act was passed. These were serious setbacks.

But thus far we have succeeded in preventing enactment of a law which would make labor the subject of the anti-trust statutes. And now there is a proposal before Congress to take unfair labor practice cases from the National Labor Relations Board and put them in the hands of the courts. Such a step would be chaotic.

Labor is backing legislation to aid the migrant farmers and seeks to undo a threatened effort to extend a bill which would aid the big farmers through continued importation of Mexican farm labor, the braceros.

Legislative efforts are being made on behalf of construction workers also through pushing for revision of the Davis-Bacon Act, a situs picketing bill and other measures backed by the Building and Construction Trades Department.

But the legislative efforts of labor are by no means limited to the issues closely identified in the public mind with the unions. Labor fights for improvements along a broad front. Labor fights for improved housing for all. Labor seeks an equitable and just tax revision bill which will benefit all. Efforts are made to get favorable consideration for a truth-in-lending measure which would mean a great deal to the consumer.

Labor fights also for a host of measures on the welfare front which would aid all people. Nor are the legislative interests and activities limited to domestic affairs. Labor speaks out boldly on foreign aid, foreign trade and the proposed test-ban treaty.

The legislative front is a busy one and there is always activity there. While action in Washington gets major public attention, the diligent efforts of organized labor help on the state front also. Right-to-work advocates are seeking ways and means of fastening on the states this restrictive law. At this writing there is in progress a real fight in the state of Oklahoma, a fight that has wound up in the courts. And when the legislatures convene next January we are bound to see many a battle on this question in states which do not now have this law, but in which strong efforts are being made to enact one.

At the state level also labor must fight for decent unemployment insurance provisions. Workmen's compensation and funds for education. Labor can be counted on in the states to fight and fight valiantly not only for labor's own aims but also for a program that helps the average citizen.

The whole gamut of legislation is extensive and we can only suggest a few items here, but we hope there are enough to remind our members that the legislative front is an important one in labor's battle to improve the lot of the American people.

Another area of vital importance to labor and to all America is the economic and social front. These questions of economic advancement and social progress are interrelated and should be considered as one great complex problem. On the economic front are found the efforts to improve the earning power of the workers. Such efforts include the work in collective bargaining and in obtaining progressively improved contracts. Economic progress is the basis for labor's success or failure as an instrumentality of union membership.

Better terms and improved conditions not only help the unions, but they add to purchasing power of the members and their families and help add to the prosperity of the entire nation. The whole matter of jobs and economic growth are important to all. The question of unemployment has been called the No. 1 problem before the country. On a satisfactory solution of this problem rests the prosperity and future of the country. Labor is behind the effort to step up our economic growth and thereby improve the job situation. And no one can say that this effort is not of great benefit to the entire country.

Labor is active in seeing that we have better and more social legislation for all the people. Labor was one of the chief backers of the original Social Security program more than a quarter of a century ago. Today labor seeks medical care for the aged through improved legislation. AFL-CIO spokesmen are doing a useful job in debunking some of the claims of private insurance firms who make extravagant statements about benefits in proportion to claims. How much cheaper in proportion to the dollar spent is Social Security is a fact that has been stressed by labor spokesmen. This is an educational contribution to the legislative effort in behalf of medical care.

Medical care is one of the most important legislative issues to the American people and the principal fight for enactment is being carried on for the people largely by organized labor.

Education is a major social responsibility of the nation and organized labor is proud of its record in the support of educational efforts by all levels of Government. The tremendous influx of new students this fall gives strong emphasis to the need for more teachers and more facilities. Labor has long backed a strong Federal aid to education program. And labor in the states supports educational efforts strongly.

Labor has been identified with the many phases of worker welfare such as workmen's compensation, unemployment insurance, child welfare, etc. Labor seeks improvements in all these areas, not for the workers alone, but for all the people.

These are only a few of the many activities on the economic and social front where labor battles every day for progressive action. Related to these and indeed important to the aims in legislation and welfare are the activities of labor along the political front.

Organized labor has long realized that nothing human rights and progress is not limited to our own shores. We must participate in international affairs, particularly in international labor affairs. Thus we work with and support the International Labor Organization and have worked with it since the AFL participated in its establishment in Washington after World War I.

We also support the United Nations and its many specialized agencies. These are public agencies, but they are not the only ones with which we work. Labor works in the international field through its own global agency, the International Confederation of Free Trade Unions. Labor also works with the ICFTU regional offices in the various parts of the world. Today labor is helping in educational and training work for labor leaders of the developing nations. These leaders who are being trained today will have strong voices in the world of tomorrow. We know that labor is making a contribution to the good and welfare of the entire world through its training program.

will be handed to it by those in political power. Moreover, it has only to read American history to know the impact of political power when wielded by unfriendly hands. In recent years labor has become politically conscious and has translated this feeling into action along a wide front.

Political action is based on voter action and we can have no voter action unless we have voter registration. At the present time labor is working throughout the United States to achieve maximum voter registration. Labor works through its many voluntary organizations. COPE, Committee on Political Education, is the official political arm of the AFL-CIO. We have always strongly supported COPE in its program. There are many other political organizations in the labor movement. Some international unions have their own and some groups have their own also.

In the area of political education we must go a step further than that of mobilizing our vote power. We must keep checking to see that those whom we elect to office discharge their responsibilities fully and fairly. A strong labor movement with political consciousness and energy can have a profound effect on the right kind of legislative action in the states and nation.

Organized labor knows also that the battle for These few observations indicate only a partial list of the many activities in which labor is engaged. But we think it useful to call attention to the fact that labor does many things, most of which are of general rather than specialized benefits—and this is an important fact for all Americans to know and remember.

One area in which labor works for all the people is one in which all local union members can participate. That is in the work of community services.

First of all, they can participate in the various civic and public activities such as civic, fraternal, service and other clubs. They can work through their religious organizations. They can help in the many humanitarian drives such as the Red Cross, Cancer Drive, blood banks etc. We publish articles from time to time showing how our members aid.

Secondly, the member can help make his local union a real force in the community. He can help make its influence felt on many vital civic and public questions. He can make his union important in the central labor body or the building trades council. He can help those organizations become instrumentalities for progress. By working to make his union a strong community force for service, the member is making a real contribution.

THE TEN-HOUR DAY

The ten-hour work day may not seem like a notable advance to unions today, but 125 years ago the shorter work day agitation of laboring people was considered radical. In the 1830's workers' demonstrations began calling for a working day of not more than ten hours. Parades were held and banners proclaimed demands for a day "From 6 to 6" (with time out for meals presumably) and mass meetings and strikes emphasized the working people's demands. President Martin Van Buren, heeding labor's desires, in 1840 issued an order limiting the work day on Government public works to ten hours. In 1847 New Hampshire was the first state to enact a ten-hour law. The statute said that "... no person shall be required . . . to perform more than ten hours' labor in one day, except in pursuance of an express contract requiring greater time." The "express contract" proviso was a loophole which permitted abuse, but actually getting onto the books a statute was a real achievement. The coming of the ten-hour day in Government and gradually in industry through law and the diligence and resourcefulness of the working people can indeed be considered a great landmark of labor.

How to build a boy

Liberally mix several old tin cans full of fun, with a mop of hair that always seems to need to be cut. Then blend in scuffed knuckles and knees, a missing tooth (optional).

Sprinkle in streaks of orneriness, pride, courage, envy, and maybe even a little fear (everybody knows that empty house down the block is haunted).

And there: you've made a boy.
Well, almost.

Boys, wonderfully, have a sweet sense of the bigness and beauty and mystery of things. And it's this sense of bigness, beauty and mystery we hope they'll never lose.

Religion is an awfully big word to a little boy. But the spirit of it isn't. And it's the spirit of religion that can bring peace, comfort, security and goodness to a boy—his whole life through.

Hit-the-bat, pals, hide'n'seek—they're as vital to a boy as peanut-butter sandwiches. So is the help of true religious faith. Your children should worship this week in your church or synagogue. And the best way to see to it is to be there with them yourself.

Our General President, Lloyd A. Mashburn, 66, died in the city of Chicago December 7, 1963.

All of the officers and members know what a dedicated and forthright trade unionist our General President was. He leaves an outstanding record as an American, as a humanitarian, and as a labor leader. All of us learned a great deal by merely working with, and for, President Mashburn. His record is endless dating back to the year 1925 when he became a member of our great International Union.

Born in Greeley, Colorado, President Mashburn worked there as a lather until the outbreak of World War I when he entered the Marines and served honorably.

Shortly after the war, he moved to California where he became active as a union official.

In 1953 he was selected by the President of the United States, Dwight D. Eisenhower, to serve as Under-Secretary of Labor. He served until 1954 and resigned shortly after Labor Secretary, Martin P. Durkin, resigned in September, 1953.

President Mashburn served as General President of our International Union since 1955. In 1956 he was instrumental in moving the International Headquarters to Washington, D.C. and played a major role in the building of its International Headquarters' Building. His record of achievement and lists of honorary positions speak for themselves.

Convention Report of Lathers' Delegates

*This is the last report written by General President Lloyd A. Mashburn before his untimely death—
Harold Mills, General Secretary-Treasurer.*

THE following is a report of the Delegates to the above named Conventions and it will be quite brief since our space in this Journal is limited and we want to show the pictures of the Lathers in attendance at the Conventions serving on Committees.

While our International is only entitled to four Delegates, whose names appear at the end of this report, you will note in the pictures that we had a number of Lathers who were Delegates from Building and Construction Trades Councils, most of whom were appointed and served on Committees.

President Haggerty presided over the Convention of the Building Trades Department and was reelected by acclamation and with much applause from the Delegates for the outstanding job he has done since taking over the office of President.

Many vital issues were discussed because of Resolutions submitted from International Unions, Local and State Building and Construction Trades Councils, such as on the Executive Order issued by President Kennedy in respect to racial discrimination, Situs Picketing, and the Fringe Benefit Amendment Bill to the Davis-Bacon Act; also a number of Resolutions regarding the National Joint Board. These, of course, are far more important to the Lather, in my opinion, than the others. Nothing was definitely settled as to the procedures of the Board. We were successful in having this subject matter referred to the General Presidents instead of to the Executive Board for consideration of revisions in the procedural rules of the National Joint Board. This is a distinct advantage since it gives all the General Presidents, including myself, an opportunity to participate in the renegotiations of the procedural rules of the National Joint Board. Previously only the General Presidents having a member on the Board together with contractors negotiated the procedural rules now set forth in the Green Book. This may not be the solution to the many problems we have with the National Joint Board but it is certainly a step in the right direction.

All the details of these matters were referred to Committees with the general principles of the items mentioned thoroughly discussed on the floor for guidance to the Committees.

Many distinguished speakers spoke before both the Building and Construction Trades Department and the AFL-CIO. Most of this, however, was reported in the newspapers so I will not take our limited space to set forth any of the constructive ideas which were proposed by these speakers.

All officers were reelected by acclamation and I am glad to report there seemed to be more unanimity at this Convention than at any Convention of the Building and Construction Trades Department that I have attended, and I have attended all of them since 1946. This is an indication of the tremendous job President Haggerty has done in coordinating the activities of the various International Unions. This is in spite of many difficult situations that he has had to deal with since he became President both from the standpoint of legislation and general active practice in the field, such as the development of project agreements negotiated between the Building Trades Department—including all International Unions and the various governmental agencies having jurisdiction over the Missile Bases—and other construction of this kind.

Speakers from the governmental agencies highly commended President Haggerty and the various International Unions. The program of the project type of approach, initiated by President Haggerty, has resulted in a great reduction of strikes and in speedy progress in the erection and construction of Government projects.

I believe this is all the space I should take for this report in view of the many other important things that should go into the Journal this month.

I will be giving you further information in future Journals.

THE MEETING was called to order by Jeremiah Burns, and Lloyd A. Mashburn, co-chairmen, on November 2, 1963 at 9:30 a.m. in the Roosevelt Hotel, New Orleans, Louisiana, with the following members of the Committee in attendance:

The minutes of the May 18, 1963 meeting in Gatlinburg, Tennessee, were read, and approved.

The minutes of the meeting held October 23, 1963, in the National Lathing Industry's Joint Apprenticeship Program office were approved, and are as follows:

The following were present: Jeremiah Burns, Lloyd A. Mashburn, co-chairmen, Harold Mills, Secretary-Treasurer, and Leo C. Schultz, Director. The discussion centered around establishing a program determining a budget, and deciding on the amount of furniture, and equipment that would be necessary to properly set up the office.

The total budget for January 1, 1964 through December 31, 1964, was established at $36,707. The budget for the balance of 1963 was to be based on the actual cost of salaries, insurance, office equipment, and other items that were necessary to establish the office.

It was agreed that a program must be established, and an Instructor's Manual or Textbook was the most urgent matter, and that after an Instructor's Manual or Textbook had been developed a correspondence course could be developed in conjunction with the Textbook. Until the Textbook, and program are established it was understood that the Director would limit his activities because until you have a program, and material to go with the program there is really nothing to promote.

It was agreed that the Director should get the office equipment that was necessary to properly run the office, which included desks, a typewriter, chairs, and table, filing cabinets, a postage meter, copying, and duplicating equipment, and the necessary supplies to go with these items.

It was agreed that the Director should join the American Society of Training Directors', and that he should subscribe to a limited amount of publications such as the B.N.A. Construction Report, Architects' Forum, and Plastering Industries.

The Director of the program was to make the budget up in typewritten copies as it had been discussed, and was supposed to establish at least a basic program that could be submitted to the Joint Committee meeting in New Orleans.

The lease for the building was signed at the established rent of $200 per month. The applications for the proper insurance, and liability coverage were approved. It was agreed that anything other than the routine supplies for maintaining the office must be approved by the Chairmen of the Committees. A basic program was to be prepared, and presented to the co-chairmen for their approval prior to it being submitted to the Joint Committee meeting in New Orleans.

The Director was to contact companies that were mentioned in reference to the possibility of them preparing or printing the Instructor's Manual or Textbook, and to report back to the co-chairmen.

The budget for October 1, 1963 through December 31, 1963, of $13,497.96, and the budget for the year of 1964 of $36,745.61 were read, explained, and approved.

The following financial statement was read:

Leo C. Schultz, the Director of the Apprenticeship Program, reported that he had contacted the Delmar Publishing Company, Albany, New York, over the possibility of their company printing the Instructor's Manual, Textbooks, Tests, and etc. for the program. They will prepare, and publish 700 sets of bound courses for $5,000. A Representative of their company is to meet with Leo Schultz November 15, 1963 for the purpose of getting further information in reference to this matter.

The report of this meeting is to be given to the co-chairmen. If the Delmar Publishing Company is given the contract to publish this material, it will be for the exclusive use of the National Lathing Industry's Joint Apprenticeship Program, and will only be available through the program.

In discussing the necessity for apprentices the following report was submitted by the Director, which is as follows:

After a general discussion it was decided that battery tests should be arranged for through the Department of Employment Security covering approximately 150 journeymen, and the result of this test be used to set up a standard test for candidates for apprenticeship as this method has been used by other trades, and it has greatly reduced the number of dropouts in their Apprentice Program.

After a general discussion on an Instructor's Manual, Textbook, Tests, and reference material for the program, it was regularly moved, and seconded, and passed to use the California Apprentice Program as a format, using the craft problems book as reference material.

A discussion was held in reference to the fact that Joint Apprentice Committees had to be set up in each Local Union, and that the Joint Apprentice Committees must be set up with a tie-breaking mechanism in order to comply with the present directives from the Apprenticeship Division of the Labor Department.

After a general discussion it was agreed that a resolution would have to be submitted to the 1964 Convention of the Lathers' International Union requiring that participation in the Apprentice Program be mandatory.

It was agreed that both labor, and management would have to see that all new agreements contain the one cent per hour contribution to the Apprentice Program. At present there are only three areas contributing. They are New York City; Louisville, Kentucky; and South Bend, Indiana, but now that the Program does have a National Director, and a national office, and is presently in the process of compiling material that can be used for apprentice training, it is necessary that all of our Local Unions, and Contractors' participate in this program.

After considerable discussion in reference to a correspondence course to be used in areas where there were not enough apprentices to establish, and maintain an apprentice school, it was decided that the development of the Textbook would have to be the number one project, and that after the Textbook, and courses had been established that the second project would be to set up a correspondence course. This correspondence course to be set up, and handled by an established, and accredited correspondence school with the facilities to fit our needs.

Local Joint Apprentice Financial aid from the National Program was discussed, and it was agreed that Local Joint Apprenticeship Committees in areas that were contributing to the National Apprenticeship Program would be entitled to apply to the National Program for financial assistance.

It was the opinion of those in attendance that a journeyman refresher course could be developed for those journeymen who were interested in such a course.

It was regularly moved, and seconded that the co-chairmen would have the authority to send the Director to places where they felt it was necessary.

Hugh Murphy, Assistant Administrator of the Bureau of Apprenticeship and Training, was introduced, and spoke to the Committee. He pledged full cooperation, and complimented the Contractors', and the Lathers' on their enthusiasm, and progress in their Joint Apprenticeship Program. One of the services that would be performed by the Bureau of Apprenticeship and Training, would be to keep the Local Joint Apprenticeship Committees active, and progressive. He also advised that there is money available that could be used for re-training of journeymen. He introduced Charles Connor, Regional Director for Region 5, Atlanta, Georgia, Ed Boetner, State Supervisor for the State of Louisiana, and Jack Jatho, Local Apprentice Director. At this point the meeting adjourned until 2:30 p.m.

AFTERNOON MEETING

It was agreed that two members from each Committee would meet in Washington to review the material that was put together for a Textbook, and etc., prior to this material being turned over to the Publisher.

A discussion was held on the fact that it would be necessary to bring experienced journeymen, and if possible, Local Apprentice Instructors in to help get the material together for a Textbook, and to review the material prior to its being published. It was agreed that it would be necessary to have approximately three experienced journeymen to complete this task. The selection of the experienced journeymen to review this material would be left in the hands of the co-chairmen.

The Director is to request the Bureau of Apprenticeship Training to make a survey of present Apprenticeship Programs in the lathing industry. It is believed that the material received from this survey will greatly advance our Apprenticeship Program.

It is hoped that our Apprenticeship Program can grow to a point where it will eventually include area coordinators.

It was agreed that the applications for indenturing apprentices, and the applications for membership must be approved by the Local Joint Apprenticeship Committees, and that in order for the Apprentice Program to be successful, complete control of the apprentices should be handled by the Local Joint Apprenticeship Committees.

It is the purpose of the National Apprenticeship Program to train a sufficient amount of qualified men, so that all of the work can be manned adequately, and that further promotion of our trade is not hampered because of the lack of qualified people to do the work. It is also the purpose of the National Apprentice Program to establish a uniform apprentice training system throughout the United States, and Canada, and even though it may start as a basic program it is hoped that it can be developed into a program that will be desired by all.

The meeting was adjourned at 4:30 p.m.

Respectfully submitted,
Harold Mills, Secretary

CHECKS LATH SAG, TOO

Ask your U.S.G. Man to show you the EYE-POPPING TEST! This eye-dropper demonstration by your U.S.G. Representative proves ROCKLATH Plaster Base is your best choice—SAVES YOU MORE TIME AND MONEY.

HERE'S HOW THE 2-WAY ACTION of ROCKLATH face paper gives you better plastering: (1) Moisture-Blotter Action of three outer layers takes up moisture from mix—does it so uniformly, and so quickly, your plaster takes on “anti-slump” strength before it can slide; (2) Moisture-Barrier Action of three inner layers repels moisture—prevents it from softening the gypsum core, so ROCKLATH doesn't sag.

Thus, ROCKLATH gives you effective control of slide, freedom from sag, a bonus in better bonding—smoother plastering, more saving of time and money than you get with any other plaster base. And remember: plaster base is ROCKLATH only when it's made by United States Gypsum.

For the Holiday Season . . . Give a Buck to COPE

It's the holiday time of the year, and here's a suggestion for a perfect additional gift to your family, to your friends—and to yourself as well.

Give a buck to COPE, the AFL-CIO Committee on Political Education.

It's a gift that will pay its own rewards. Here are some of the benefits your COPE dollar could help bring:

A better education and a brighter future for your children.

An improved social security program for yourself, better health care when you're retired.

More job security, and better laws to protect you and other working people when and if unemployment does strike.

Programs for a just and enduring peace.

You'll notice that goals like these, to be achieved, rely on good lawmakers in the U.S. Senate and House of Representatives. And that's how your COPE dollar is used: to elect good lawmakers, men and women who understand the needs of working people and who will support programs helpful to the nation at large.

In fact, that's the only use for your COPE voluntary dollar. It doesn't pay salaries of COPE employees, nor does it pay for COPE literature and other materials.

Just one use: to elect the right people.

In the year ahead—1964—your COPE dollar will be needed more than ever before.

Crucial elections are coming up. The presidency is at stake. Gubernatorial elections are slated in 25 states and Senate elections in 34. All 435 members of the House of Representatives will face the electorate.

If liberal candidates are to achieve victory, they'll need your help in the form of your COPE dollar as well as your vote.

One thing is certain: the forces of reaction—the ultra-conservatives of the right wing—will be shelling out more money and putting out more political effort than at any time in our nation's history. And the one goal of all their money and effort will be to elect candidates committed to turning back the clock on all the social welfare legislation of the New Deal, Fair Deal and New Frontier.

They'll be working to elect candidates who will push for a nationwide "right-to-work" law, who will oppose any increase in the minimum wage or in social security benefits, who will oppose better workmen's compensation laws or better schools for your kids, better housing or better health care.

The right-wingers will pour their money and manpower into an all-out attempt to elect the most conservative Congress in the history of the United States.

They think they can KO a long list of liberals, including many of the progressive Senators elected in 1958, among them Gale McGee of Wyoming, Vance Hartke of Indiana, Ed Muskie of Maine, Harrison Williams of New Jersey, Steve Young of Ohio, Ralph Yarborough of Texas, Frank Moss of Utah, and others.

You can prove they're wrong. You can help send the right-wingers packing. You can show them that Americans aren't buying their threadbare arguments, their smear and slander, their hate-mongering—or their candidates.

You can fight by giving a buck to COPE so good candidates can look to the labor movement for help to finance their campaigns.

Liberals never can approach the funds that pour into the campaign chests of conservatives and reactionaries. But every dollar counts.

So give your buck to COPE. You'll find it's really a gift to yourself.

JOHN FITZGERALD KENNEDY

President of the United States

May 29, 1917 = November 22, 1963

Dear God,

Please take care of your servant

John Fitzgerald Kennedy

Now the trumpet summons us again—not as a call to bear arms, though arms we need—not as a call to battle, though embattled we are—but a call to bear the burden of a long twilight struggle, year in and year out, “rejoicing in hope, patient in tribulation”—a struggle against the common enemies of man: tyranny, poverty, disease and war itself . . .

In the long history of the world, only a few generations have been granted the role of defending freedom in its hour of maximum danger. I do not shrink from this responsibility—I welcome it. I do not believe that any of us would exchange places with any other people or any other generation. The energy, the faith, the devotion which we bring to this endeavor will light our country and all who serve it—and the glow from that fire can truly light the world . . .

With a good conscience our only sure reward, with history the final judge of our deeds, let us go forth to lead the land we love, asking His blessing and His help, but knowing that here on earth God’s work must truly be our own.

Persons attending President Kennedy's funeral in Washington were presented with this card, containing passages from his Inaugural Message and a portrait on the other side.

In Memoriam

John F. Kennedy

1917-1963

LATHERS joined with other Americans and their friends throughout the world in mourning the death by assassin's bullet of John F. Kennedy, 35th President of the United States.

For days afterwards, the events in Dallas remained nearly incredible. The shock defied expression.

Here was an able and dedicated man, as young and vigorous as he wanted the nation again to become, suddenly robbed of all warmth and life.

A stable, civilized country experienced a moment of terror and violence, and the shock and dismay would linger for the rest of recorded time.

Lathers, regardless of political persuasion, also join in firm resolve of support for the martyred President's successor, Lyndon B. Johnson, in the difficult and trying transition.

was the night before Christmas when all through the house
Not a creature was stirring, not even a mouse.
The stockings were hung by the chimney with care,
In hopes that Saint Nicholas soon would be there.
The children were nestled all snug in their beds,
While visions of sugarplums danced in their heads,
And Mamma in her kerchief and I in my cap,
Had just settled down for a long winter's nap.
When out on the lawn there arose such a clatter,
I sprang from my bed to see what was the matter.
Away to the window I flew like a flash,
Tore open the shutters and threw up the sash.
The moon on the breast of the new-fallen snow,
Gave a luster of midday to objects below,
When, what to my wondering eyes should appear,
But a miniature sleigh, and eight tiny reindeer,
With a little old driver, so lively and quick,
I knew in a moment it must be St. Nick.
More rapid than eagles his coursers they came,
And he whistled, and shouted, and called them by name:
"Now, Dasher! now, Dancer! now, Prancer! and Vixen!
On, Comet! on, Cupid! on, Donner and Blitzen!
To the top of the porch, to the top of the wall!
Now, dash away, dash away, dash away all!"
As dry leaves that before the wild hurricane fly,
When they meet with an obstacle, mount to the sky,
So up to the house-top the coursers they flew
With the sleigh full of toys, and St. Nicholas, too.

*And then in a twinkle, I heard on the roof
The prancing and pawing of each little hoof.
As I drew in my head, and was turning around,
Down the chimney St. Nicholas came with a bound.
He was dressed all in fur, from his head to his foot,
And his clothes were all tarnished with ashes and soot;
A bundle of toys he had flung on his back,
And he looked like a peddler just opening his pack.
His eyes how they twinkled! his dimples how merry!
His cheeks were like roses, his nose like a cherry.
His droll little mouth was drawn up like a bow,
And the beard on his chin was as white as the snow.
The stump of a pipe he held tight in his teeth,
And the smoke, it encircled his head like a wreath.
He had a broad face and a little round belly
That shook, when he laughed, like a bowl full of jelly.
He was chubby and plump, a right jolly old elf.
And I laughed when I saw him, in spite of myself.
A wink of his eye, and a twist of his head,
Soon gave me to know I had nothing to dread;
He spoke not a word, but went straight to his work,
And filled all the stockings; then turned with a jerk,
And laying his finger aside of his nose,
And giving a nod, up the chimney he rose.
He sprang to his sleigh, to his team gave a whistle,
And away they all flew like the down on a thistle.
But I heard him exclaim ere he drove out of sight,
"Happy Christmas to all and to all a good night."*

RISE OF THE LABOR PRESS

The working people found their voice in the early decades of the last century through the publication of the labor press. These early labor papers were in the tradition of pamphleteering, a legacy from the successful days of the American Revolution, when ardent voices of protest found expression in newspapers and pamphlets. Among the early labor newspapers were THE MECHANICS' FREE PRESS (1827) called "America's first labor paper"; THE WORKING MAN'S ADVOCATE (1831) and such regional papers as THE DELAWARE FREE PRESS, Wilmington, Del.; FARMERS' & MECHANICS' ADVOCATE, Charlestown, Ind.; THE NEW ENGLAND FARMER & MECHANIC, Gardner, Me. and WORKINGMAN'S UNION, Ravenna, O.

Factory girls also took up publishing in the early days and THE FACTORY GIRL in 1842 and THE VOICE OF INDUSTRY a few years later are illustrations of the protest of the working girls and some of the language was colorful in its expressions of resentment. Some of the individual trade unions also had papers such as the Shoemaker's AWL.

The early labor papers not only were organs of union aspirations and aims, they were also articulate in expressing support for economic and political goals. These papers, many of which were short lived, formed a distinctive — and a continuing — chapter in the labor movement, a chapter which is not one but many landmarks of labor progress.

How to save $100 when you have only $75

Decide to save and you're on your way. Just tell your payroll clerk to put you on the Payroll Savings Plan for Savings Bonds. The rest is automatic. As little as 63¢ a day for 40 months adds up to bonds worth $1,000 at maturity.

You save more than money. You help save the peace. What would their future be without it? The answer is the reason so many Americans buy U. S. Savings Bonds.

You save more than money with
U.S. Savings Bonds

Growth or income—take your choice. E Bonds grow one-third bigger in 7½ years. H Bonds interest comes to you by check every six months for 10 years. Both types pay a sound return: 3¼%, compounded semi-annually, when held to maturity.

With U.S. Savings Bonds, you'll find it a lot easier to reach your savings goal. For example, to save $1,000, simply put $750 into Series E Bonds. You can do this because you get $4 back at maturity for every $3 you put into Savings Bonds. And if you keep them 10 years past maturity, you'll get an extra $1.80 back, a total return of $5.80 on your $3 investment.

Six good reasons to buy and hold Savings Bonds

1. You can save automatically on Payroll Savings or buy Bonds at your bank.
2. You now earn $3\frac{3}{4}\%$ to maturity, $\frac{1}{2}\%$ more than ever before.
3. You invest without risk under a U. S. Government guarantee.
4. Your Bonds are replaced free if lost or stolen.
5. You can get your money with interest any time you need it.
6. You save more than money—you buy shares in a stronger America.
